For one thing, there is only an occasional window decorator who will dare scatter books around—it does take a little courage. He certainly could come a little nearer his desired effect if he would remember books or magazines.

The home of the newly-wed sometimes has that department store furniture section look. The bride has not yet dared to depart from the conventional and somewhat hard arrangement of all her new things. And things obviously new are hard to arrange, when it comes to that. Their glossy newness has to rub off a little before they can be assimilated and a homey atmosphere produced.

Question in Furniture.

It is sometimes asked, why do people keep going back to periods in selecting furnishings? Why not be ultra-modern? The answer seems to lie in that question of romance, of charm, that quality to which we all respond, that seems so inherent in period furniture rightly used. (Of course, one doesn't have to buy real antiques—for some of us they are quite out of the question. But there are so many good reproductions that no one need be denied these interesting old patterns.)

In this question of using the periods rightly lies a great part of the difficulty. It has been said of some decorators that they create settings for their clients, that have no more relation to the owners than the procenium arch to actors. For Canadians the study of the use of periods must necessarily involve the study of the impulses of the time creating them. Entirely foreign to our ideals and modes of living are some of the court periods. The styles of certain periods were evolved from extravagant, overdecorated, and luxuriant court life. These periods have been followed by reactions toward severity, which bring out simpler lines and patterns in furniture and are much more in keeping with our natural point of view.

Blending of Periods.

In passing, let us speak of the Directoire. The qualities of simplicity and sincerity found in much of the furniture of that time find a quick response in our native instincts. Pieces from the Directoire will blend well with our colonial period, and the two will create a subtle charm—that indefinable air of romance.

Another point to be considered is the modern demand for soft deeply cushioned chairs, with their luxurious comfort. It takes a little skill to fit these pieces into our romantic interior but it can be done. It might be mentioned here that down-filled cushions and spring cushions are in demand for these pieces. Tapestries in colorful embroidery are fitting, or spots of lovely needle point decorate these inviting lounging spots.

LANDLORD MUST HAVE A PROFIT ON INVESTMENT

But Profit May Be Diverted to Your Own Pocket By Buying a Home and Becoming Your Own Landlord—Question of to Whom You Wish to Pay Rent.

ANALYSIS OF CASE.

Buying a home is the best investment a person can make, and an investigation of the problem reveals that in reality it amounts to a question whether you wish to pay rent to yourself or to someone else. No matter where or how you live, you are paying rent. If not to the landlord, then to yourself. The point to decide is, which pays best—rent on someone else's house or your own.

Many people at this time of year are pondering the question, but the solution appears to be easy. If you do not want the burden and responsibility of caring for a house, or if this responsibility is heavier for you than that of providing the rent, then for you renting is probably cheaper.

Taxes, insurance, depreciation, upkeep and such items must be covered by the rental, but in addition the landlord must be paid an ample return on his investment. His is a business investment and he is entitled to a margin of profit. This varies according to the locality, but is rarely less than eight per cent., and frequently, according to government statistics, as high as 13 per cent. Such a rate is considered necessary to protect the landlord's investment and give him due profit.

The amount of money spent yearly for the privilege of maintaining shelters over our heads is astonishing, especially when it is remembered that not one dollar of it constitutes an investment toward ownership.

Periodically all renters have qualms of doubt as to whether the same amount of money invested in a home would not prove a better investment. Many are fully satisfied that home-ownership is the ideal state, but hesitate to take the leap because of lack of definite information as to the financial obligations to an obligation heavier than their ability to carry.

Is an Investment.

It is altogether wrong in this connection to assume that the financing of a new home constitutes the signing of a bill of eternal indebtedness. No matter on what basis the home is paid for, the fact remains that the buyer gets not only what his renting neighbor gets—a receipt—but in addition a tangible, physical something that belongs to him for evermore—A Home of His Own.

Quite aside from the sense of joy that one gets from owning or paying for a home, there is a very definite moral effect that must be considered. Many a family that otherwise would have gone from year to year accumulating nothing in the bank account has been saved from certain ruin by the systematic saving habits made necessary by the circumstances of paying for a home. Without an obligation of some such nature very few people are infallible to the extent of saving a definite amount each month. It is perfectly easy to start a savings account with the honest intention of depositing a certain amount periodically, but circumstances cause the habit to lapse and the fine resolutions are swept away.

It is a mistake to assume that home building requires a lot of money to begin with. Many homes all around have been built and paid for with comparatively small initial outlay.

The proper way to look on home ownership is that it is an enterprise or a business. It is a plan for investing money in one's own enterprise for safe and secure returns. Like all business ventures, it must be approached with good judgment and understanding, followed up with good management.

Sentiment or Profit?

Probably the most important consideration is profit when building a home. The joy, the happiness, the contentment, the sense of security, the pride, and a host of other considerations depending upon home ownership, often entirely outweigh the profit idea. The home expresses the owner's individuality. Flowers, garden, bookshelves, fireplace, decorating—these and many more are expressions of the owner's personality and taste.

There are many cases where individuals are engaged in commercial ventures from which they receive a large percentage for money invested, and sometimes this percentage is so large that home ownership, by comparison, has no financial inducements. Because home-ownership has more to it than the mere financial side, even those who can make more money by renting are usually home owners.

Home ownership is usually less expensive for a salaried man or a man with limited income to build his own home in preference to paying rent.

Bearing in mind that home ownership is a business investment proposition, plus a matter of sentiment—that it is a profit-sharing plan in which the home owner pays himself dividends, and that on the other hand renting for the landlord is also a business, and must pay him dividends, there is but one consideration—it is simply a question of whom you wish to pay dividends to, the landlord or yourself. And also whether you wish to live in a house or a home.

For the sake of example, suppose that you have a savings account that might be used as initial payment on a house. Your desire is to increase the earning power of your savings. That is natural. But if you are paying rent you are actually losing from two to five per cent. on your savings just because you are living in the landlord's house. And it is only a house, only a shelter to you.

If, on the other hand, you invest your money in a home you will make from seven to 13 per cent. on your money, and you have a home, plus your interest.

Most of Peterborough's citizens live in their own homes. Do you?

GRENFELL LABRADOR MISSION

The minister working at Flower's Cove, on the Straits of Belle Isle, has what he calls a "discretionary fund," to be used in helping the people in his district over the winter. Here are some of the cases of need which he has relieved:—

A. A poor man suffering from beriberi; seven small children and nothing in the house but a little white flour. I gave him $14 worth of food—molasses, butter, tea.

B. Large family. Father unable to fish. Not a mouthful in the house when I called. $15 cash to buy food.

C. No flour. Ordered food from St. John's for him.

E. Large family, all suffering from lack of fatsjand sweets. Gave 10 lbs. sugar and 10 lbs. creamery butter.

G. Large family, practically naked, and not a mouthful in the house. Left brown flour, butter and tea.

H. Man a cripple, with beri-beri. A family of ten and not a mouthful. Thirty pounds of pork, a barrel of flour and 10 lbs. creamery.

I. Man blind. Gave a barrel of flour and 20 lbs of pork.

J. Poor woman, emaciated. Children languid and bloodless. Husband away trying to earn food. Absolutely nothing to eat. Gave 40 lbs. beef, 20 lbs. pork, 10 lbs evaporated apples, 1 barrel flour.

N., O., P., Q., and others had no food to begin fishing in spring. Gave a barrel of flour to each.

Subscriptions to the Grenfell Mission will be received by the Examiner, or may be sent to Mrs. F. M. Somerville, 16 Inverlea Street, Peterboro.

THE PETERBOROUGH REVIVAL

It seems on looking back that a refreshing spiritual shower has just passed over Peterboro and that some of us perhaps, through neglect or indisposition, have only caught the tail-end of it. The colored quintette has been here for a week and passed on, but Peterboro was moved in an unaccountable way, yet, there was nothing extraordinary about the meetings, the services being quiet and earnest, but long before meeting time, crowds were on the street, en route to the services, and one had to go early to get a seat.

I could not help thinking, and I still think, that it was not altogether the attraction to hear five darkies sing; but that the people were brought upon by an unseen power, for those men were men of prayer, and let me say in passing that to be men and women of prevailing prayer means a consecrated life and a belief in a prayer-answering God. This I believe largely explains the success they had both with crowds and with money.

Those who were at the services in the Capitol on Sunday know how easily, without begging, they got the promise, for missionary work alone, of over $2,500, and how in those meetings several young men and women stood up to signify their willingness to go out as missionaries should God make clear to them that He needed them. It is a long time since I have been in a religious service where they began a quarter of an hour ahead of time, as the place was filled and overflowing. As I stood in the Capitol at the close of the evening service and watched the folk going forward to shake hands with the colored brethren, a lump came into my throat as then came to my mind some words in Revelations: "Of those who sang a new song to the lamb that was slain saying, Thou has redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation; Oh may we all be there to sing with those ten thousand times ten thousand and thousands of thousands and cry, Worthy is the lamb that was slain to receive all the glory that is His, for we all shall be able to say:

"All we once were sinners, defiled in His sight,
Now arrayed in pure garments in praise we unite,
Unto Him Who has loved us and washed us from sin,
Unto Him be the glory for ever, Amen."

YOUR GARDEN

SPEEDING UP

It isn't at all necessary to wait for summer to bring your garden into bloom.

You can steal a march on the weather by starting plants indoors.

Likewise, you can bring them to quicker development weeks ahead of time in home-made hotbeds and cold frames.

Such artificial cultivation gives zest to gardening.

It will provide you with seedlings and sprouts ready for transplanting long before it is possible to actually set out seeds for the plants in your real garden.

For indoor planting the window box is best. In it you can start such vegetables as early cabbage, peppers, cabbage, eggplant, cucumbers, snap beans, Lima beans, sweet corn and even melons and beets.

Flower pots, paper bands or berry boxes may be employed for this purpose when only a limited number of plants are wanted.

In fact, any shallow box that may be fitted into the window of a room where there is a reasonable amount of sunshine will answer for starting early plants.

But where only a few cabbage or tomato plants are needed, they may be grown in a cigar box or a shallow tin pan with some holes punched into the bottom for drainage.

Fill the receptacles with finely sifted soil and scatter seeds very thinly in rows. Then cover them with a small quantity of soil. Water very lightly.

Keep the temperature at about 70 degrees. Seedlings should appear in from five to eight days after planting if conditions have been right.

Be sure to turn the boxes daily, as the plants, after they start to come up, are attracted toward the light and will grow crooked unless given a regular change in position.

Just as soon as the seedlings are big enough to handle they should be transferred to larger boxes and given three inches of space in each direction.

Hotbeds and coldframes are used when the number of plants to be grown it too great for convenient accommodation in the indoorw window box.

The usual way to prepare a hotbed is to dig a shallow pit in the yard from 8 to 18 inches deep and pack it full of fermenting stable manure.

Then, over the manure, which has been turned once or twice and firmly packed, spread three or four inches of fine garden loam and permit to stand four or five days before planting any seed.

Don't plant in the hotbed until the temperature falls below 85 degrees Make a test with a thermometer, Water during the early part of the day. Cover the hotbed with glass or heavy muslin.

The bed should be ventilated well on warm days, but closed before evening to prevent the heat escaping. In cold weather it should be covered with blankets, canvas or straw at night.

A coldframe is constructed in exactly the same manner as a hotbed except that no manure is placed beneath it to supply heat.

Before plants are set in the garden from the coldframe, hotbed or window box they should be gradually hardened to outside conditions by giving them more ventilation each day.

Don't transplant to the open, though, until it's planting time for seed.

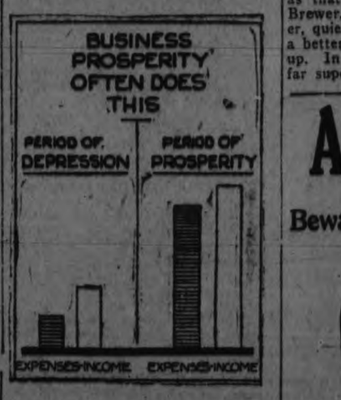
MAKING MONEY MAKE MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.



Periodic review of expenditures, questioning the necessity of each one, will always prove effective in keeping expense down.

The average business is similar to an individual in one way. Prosperity brings extravagance.

For instance, last year one concern, which had been showing a steady increase in earnings from year to year, found that a sum equal to 25 per cent. of the profits had been spent for telegrams alone.

No one doubts the value of the telegraph service to business, but there is not much excuse for almost entirely substituting it for the mail service.

If there had been no periodic check on the necessity of each expense, that extravagance might have gone on indefinitely.

This is just one example which proves how important it is to check expenses periodically.

BRANCH LINES BEFORE HOUSE

Will Be Debated One at a Time--May Take Days

OTTAWA, April 2. — (Canadian Press).—The branch lines program of the Canadian National Railways began a course in the House of Commons yesterday, which bids fair to be long and strenuous. The program is comprised in twenty - six separate resolutions, preceding twenty-six separate bills, each covering a branch line. They are discussed one by one, and first—branch line in New Brunswick—was debated both afternoon and evening.

From the Liberal benches there came some objection to the branch line program. Herbert Marler, Liberal member for St. Lawrence, St. George, Montreal, urged that no expenditure should be made not vitally necessary. Increased earnings by the Canadian National, he argued, was no justification for extensive expenditure on branch lines.

Joseph Archambault, Liberal, took a similar view.

Pleas were heard for lines other than those on the C.N.R. program. J. J. Denis, Liberal, of Joliette, held that if there was no money for roads needed in Quebec there should be corresponding economy in the Western lines.

ALL EXITS FROM MONTREAL CLOSED

Police Make Vigorous Search for Bank Bandits.

MONTREAL, April 2.— (Canadian Press.)—With every exit from Montreal carefully watched by detectives, police were hopeful this morning that all men who staged yesterday's dramatic hold-up of an automobile carrying probably half a million dollars belonging to the Bank of Hochelaga would be arrested during the day.

Good descriptions of men have been secured.

This morning police began examination of four men taken in yesterday as suspects. Inspectors of the Bank of Hochelaga worked during the night to check up the exact amount of money that was stolen. It was clear that while it would take time to secure accurate information, bandits failed to get away with most of the money in the bank car and that their carefuly planned hold-up was spoiled by courage of messengers in charge of the cash.

The criminal career of Paul Webster, alias H. P. Stone, bandit, who was killed, appears to have started in Vancouver. He was arrested but acquitted in 1908. He was arrested there again for vagrancy in 1911 and again discharged. He then became an international drug smuggler. He was charged in Calgary in 1916 with frequenting an opium joint, but sentence was suspended. He afterwards escaped from Atlanta penitentiary. Caught in Montreal in 1923 he was sent back to Port Arthur to complete his term.

NEW ESSEX SIX DOUBLES SALES FIGURES OVER LAST YEAR'S MARK.

Twice as many Essex cars are now being sold than last year, according to information reaching C. L. Brewer, distributor for Hudson and Essex cars. This word from the Hudson Motor Car Co. declares the new Essex six is metting the most enthusiastic reception of any car ever sponsored by Hudson.

The schedules of production for the Essex six were originally set at twice the number of cars made in 1923, but these schedules have proved too small, it is declared, and the Hudson Motor Car Co. is now bending every effort to produce every Essex six possible in its plant.

"I believe this is because the new Essex has proved that it will actually out perform the old 'four', famous as that car was," declares Mr. Brewer. "The new Essex is smoother, quieter, more economical by far, a better climber, and faster in pickup. In every day usefulness it is a far superior product."

WOMAN MADE CERTAIN OF DEATH BY SUICIDE

NEW YORK, April 2. — It mattered nothing to Grace Wakefield, aged 51, spinster, whether the man who died of heart disease in Bronx Hospital, was O. N. Orlov, Doctor of Philosophy, or Prince Johann Salvator, the long and mysteriously missing Archduke of Austria.

It only mattered that he was gone from her, and she joined him in death yesterday, drowning herself in a bathtub, after having slashed her wrists to prevent any possible miscarriage of her plans.

With her went her pet dog, held under water until it died, and her parrot drowned in a nearby hand basin.

A BLENDED TEA IS BETTER

Tea from one garden, not matter how fine it is, possesses certain desirable qualities but may lack others, because all characteristics are not developed under the same conditions. If the tea has a perfect flavour it may lack body; if it has body it is perhaps without the same perfection of flavour. To combine all desirable characteristics in one blend has been the work of the "SALADA" Experts for over a quarter of a century and "SALADA" is the fruit of their labours. The flavour is more delicious than any unblended tea grown.

NORTH MONAGHAN HOUSE HOLDS HOBO OVERNIGHT

A vacant house in North Monaghan was a shelter overnight for a homeless wayfarer, it appears from traces found in the building when entered by a provincial constable who was engaged on another case. The homeless one was not so bodly fixed for food as his breaking into the house would make it appear probable, since remnants of a feast in which currant bread white bread and butter and even cake were on the menu.

One door had been partly broken and entrance effected through another door. The house is situated near May's school house.

HEARTS AFIRE

The Brilliant Novelist of Modern Society

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Mystery Afoot.

Prudence walked away from Pear-tree Cottage with a lighter heart than she had entered it.

That seemed odd and quite inexplicable.

Virginia Dale—to whom Bert had written that ardent letter which had so caused Prudence's heart to ache—had marched in on Prudence unexpectedly, but the pain of coming face to face with her rival in Bert's affections hadn't been such a distressing experience after all.

Was it because of Peter Armstrong's words?

What had he said?

"If you only knew the freshness, the inspiration, that a girl like you can bring into a man's life, you would never dare to call yourself names again."

Ah! That had been balm on wounds. Prudence had thrilled to the sincerely spoken phrases.

Not even Virginia's advent—white-clad, beautiful Virginia, intent on fascinating Peter, as she tried to weave her spell on every man she came across—not even she could take away the queer, heady feeling of elation that the interview had brought about.

Was it because young Armstrong's opinion—he himself being classified, even by Virginia, as so 'worth-while'—was it because his opinion carried weight?

Was it because a little of her own self-confidence had been restored to her again?

Following that train of thought, was it because Virginia, whom Bert admired and even had written love-letters to, Was it because she despite her lovely clothes and beauty had cut so poor a figure at the recent interview?

Prudence flushed with shame at the very human feeling of satisfaction over her rival's discomfiture. She was a 'cat,' she told herself.

But at the recollection of Virginia's mud-bespattered costume and streak countenance, all due to her own officious folk in going too near Peter and his experiments, Prudence giggled just as she had giggled at the moment of the 'contretemps.'

"She looked too utterly ridiculous. It was rude of me to laugh, but I simply couldn't help it. Mr. Armstrong could hardly keep from laughing, too," reflected she, tramping along the country roads towards the library, where the book on flowers were to be found.

She didn't realize how much Virginia hated her over the incident. Jinny had no sense of humor where her own personal appearance was concerned.

No; she detested her, and had sworn a private oath of vengeance.

But how to wreak harm on this pretty creature whom the men all seemed to like so much?

Dropping Bert's silly letter on the flagged pathway of Green Gables had been a small revenge, compared to the harm Virginia would like to work on Prudence.

Virginia had not taken her departure from Peter's laboratory when the younger girl had made her exit. She had stayed behind to have him try a cleaning process on the lubricant stains, hoping to "get in a little of the good work" while she had a clearer field.

She was chagrined, but she wasn't going to let her chagrin show. That didn'tpay in the long run, as she had discovered.

Meantime, Prudence, out on the highway, was drawng deep breaths of sweet-scented air, and marvelling at her own feeling of elation. After days and nights of pain, when the whole world seemed utterly, intolerably sad and gloomy, it was a huge relief to feel that, after all, life might contain a large variety of worth-while things.

After much anguish, this was the beginning of the real woman Prudence.

The cuckoo's fluted call no longer had a mocking note. It was sweet and soothing, and had music in it.

A little stream that ran along the roadside for a hundred yards or so babbled delightfully as it dimpled over green weeds near its surface, or made a tiny tinkle as it divided round some stick or stone.

Prudence diverted her own course to follow its meandering into a sort of glade where the beeches' spindle buds were sprouting in a fairy tracery of green. Here the brook went gliding under delicate willows, and on the stream's edge were the plants of warerside forget-me-nots.

'Lady's smocks,' in their pink and lilac, made an enchanting splash of colour everywhere among the green, and here and there were clumps of kingcups, gloriously golden.

Prudence sank down on the mossy bank. A willow-tree was just behind her, screening her off from the rest of the wood.

How quiet it was! How peaceful!

Strange that a few days ago she couldn't have borne the solitude of this sanctuary! She would have cried her eyes out, as she'd done these many nights.

"But I feel better now, because the world's so beautiful," she told herself, not fully realizing yet that it was Peter Armstrong's healing influence that had worked the miracle.

Fifty yards away from where she sat, a tall elm showed rooks' nests in its summit, half veiled by the green. Prudence regarded them for a moment through the delicate tracery of her own resting-place.

And then her gaze travelled downwards to the bottom of the giant tree. . . . Good gracous! a man was there, kneeling on last year's dead leaves, working intently in the ground . . . he had his back to her, and there was something familiar in the set of the light grey coat, in the tilt of the grey felt hat—she couldn't see him properly—who was he? What was he doing?

He had some sort of implement that he was working with. Oh, yes; a trowel. Digging a hole, wasn't he?

And why?

She sat quite still, watching from her hiding-place. Some mystery was afoot. She was all interest. From the motion of his right arm, she guessed that he had stopped digging. Later, she saw that he was patting the earth into position.

And then he rose to his feet, half turned around, and—good heavens! the man was none other than her quondam sweetheart, Bertram Traymore!

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

THE HUMPTY-DUMPTY CIRCUS.

The China Pig with a slot in his back took the pennies.

All the Doofunny people were going to see the Humpty-Dumpty Circus and asked the Twins to go along.

So off they went with Mister Fuzz Wuzz at half-past twelve, to get good seats.

The China Pig with a slot in his back took the pennies as you passed in, and by the time half of the Doofunny Landers were inside he was so full he couldn't move, and had to ask Sambo, the black boy in the side show, to help him.

Sambo had a long red tongue, and when you put your penny on it he rolled his eyes and opened his mouth wide and the penny rolled right down his throat.

Someone whispered that Sambo had been a bank before he went into the side show business, but I don't know whether it is true or not.

Anyway he, too, was so stuffed with money that Mister Fuzz Wuzz had to take a screwdriver and take off his head and then turn him upside down to let the money roll out.

As for the pig, he couldn't be unscrewed, and there he was—not able to move a muscle.

"There is only one way to get any money out of him," said Mister Fuzz Wuzz, "and that's to break him into pieces."

"Oh, don't, please!" begged the China Pig. "I had an uncle once who was broken into pieces, and although he was glued together again, he never was able to eat a full meal afterwards, and never, never, never could be washed."

"I shouldn't think a pig would care about that," laughed Nancy, but seeing the offended look in the pig's eyes, she added hastily, "I'm sure we'll find another way, Mister Pig."

Well, sir, there it was—time for the show to begin and that pig holding up everything!

You'll never guess who came along in the nick of time and helped them out of the trouble! It was the Cut-Out family, Mr. and Mrs. Cut-Out and all the children.

"Why, that's the easiest thing in the world!" declared the Cut-Out gentleman. "I have a thin hand and I can get the pennies out for you."

"But you'll spoil your fine coat!" exclaimed Mister Fuzz Wuzz.

And, indeed, Mister Cut-Out was quite a dude.

"The pig being china, I don't mind," said he, and putting in his thin hand he drew out a penny. He soon had the poor pig as empty as a drum.

"Thank you, kind sir, you have saved my life," grunted the pig.

"Don't mention it," exclaimed the other. "Nothing at all! I'll save it for you any time."

Of course, the Cut-Outs all got in free after that, and a grand circus it was!

The best thing of all was a race two Humpty-Dumpty clowns ran on the Humpty-Dumpty elephant and the Humpty-Dumpty giraffe.

"Hoop, hoop, hurrah!" cried Nick, "I bet on the elephant."

"I bet on the giraffe!" cried Mr. Fuzz Wuzz, waving his high silk hat.

"Elephant!" yelled some.

"Giraffe!" shouted others.

I'll tel you to-morrow who won.

CAUSES OF OVERWEIGHT.

The causes of overweight is often easy to overcome by correct dietary habits and the proper exercise. Many people never make an effort to overcome any such great burdens and inconvenience or much less seek to find out or worry about the cause of getting fat. It is well worth all the investigation and time you can give.

A few causes of overweight may be mentioned in order that the dietary programme wihch is to follow may be we'l in hand and aid you in avoiding the trouble or surplus fat.

Irregular eating is one of the worst offenders. Closely allied with this fat-forming habit is the other one of over-eating. The one at fault may not have had any intention of doing this, but through haste and lack of proper chewing more food is taken than was intended.

Eat slow and pay more attention to mastication.

Incorrect body posture is a close third. Persons will eat a hearty meal and almost immediately slouch down, whereby the great abdominal circulation is lessoned to a great degree.

This and other incorrect body postures cause less cell activity and allow fat to accumulate.

Lack of proper exercise and general laziness calls for quick remedies or the fat tissue will pile up to such an extent that getting back to normal is difficult.

Improper breathing is another fat fault. The lungs are not properly exercised and the accumulating fat pushes in and interferes with the proper respiratory processes. This is why so many fat ones are short of wind and wheeze under a little exercise.

Fats can be built from any food that happens to be more than your system needs for its energy, building and repair. A fast once or twice a week will accomplish wonders.

The system which Dr. Karell brought out for this purpose is well worth trying. It will not only reduce weight, but improves the general health to a marked degree.

In a further article this system will be dealt with.

Police Test of Sobriety

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 2.—(United Press).—Having been called on many times to decide whether or not a man was drunk, Sergeant Mike Creeley hit upon a unique test. When George Sasanovich was brought before him in such a state of mind that it was really hard to decide whether the man had over-imbibed or whether he was erratic by nature, the sergeant handed him a printed slip and told him to read it aloud.

The slip read:

"Once a big policeman met a little bum
Sitting on a curbstone chewing rubber gum.
'Hi,' said the policeman, 'won't you give me some?'
'Ninny on your tintype,' said the little bum."

Sasanovich read it as follows:

"Once a pig molicepan bet a bittle lum
Sitting on a surb cone chewing gubber rum.
'Hi,' sesh the molicepan, 'wontchu simmie gum?'
'Tinny on your nintype,' (hic) sesh thub ittle um."

Sergeant Greeley told Sasanovich that his articulation was very faulty and that he had better stay in a cell a while.

LAWN BOWLERS DECIDE TO SHARE GREEN WITH LADIES IF THEY PLAY

Details Left to Executive to Determine — D. H. Moore Elected President of Club, Succeeding W. J. Oke—Prizes Presented to Last Season's Winning Rinks.

FEE SET AT $10.

At the meeting of the Peterboro Lawn Bowling Club held last night in the Chamber of Commerce last year's business was cleaned up and preparations for the coming season were made. The secretary's report for last season was read and adopted and prizes were awarded to the rink winner of the scheduled games of which J. N. Bacon's rink took first prize. His rink consisted of A. E. Micks, G. Boucher, C. Seymour and himself as skip. George Cairns' rink consisting of V. Carr, R. M. Glover and R. Hendry took second place and were also presented with prizes. The past president Walter J. Oke said that several plots of land suitable for a bowling green had been looked over and that two or three of these could be obtained. He also said that the Club had obtained permission to use the present green but that nothing definite had yet been given and that he thought it the best plan to be on the lookout for other ground as they did not know how much longer they would be able to use the present green. The "plus and minus" system of scoring which is used by other towns was also discussed. Several members were strongly in favor of it while others wished to stick to the present way played in this city. The committee are to get in touch with the other towns in this district and find out which system they preferred.

W. J. Oke said that lawn bowling was becoming a ladies game and at present there is a great number of ladies who wish to join the club. In his opinion he said he was in favor of them joining. The club-house was discussed and it was thought by a great number of the men to be in no fit condition for ladies to use. It would cost a considerable amount to fix this house up and it was also brought up that at present the green that is being used is too small and that nearing the end of each season the lawn becomes in a bad shape and with about forty more lady bowlers on their membership list it would not take long to put the lawn out of condition. A fee for the ladies of $3 was mentioned but nothing definite in this line was done and it was left for the executive to follow up.

It was also suggested that two or three afternoons week be alotted for the ladies and also several nights a month but this was left for the executive to decide upon. A vote was taken on whether the ladies would be allowed to bowl or not and the majority of the men were in favor of the ladies becoming members.

A ice of $10 was set for both old and new members and that as many members as wanted to join the club could do so. All men wishing to join the club must have their fees paid by the 1st of June. If an outside man comes to the town and wishes to join the club he will be allowed but he will be running the chance of not being able to take part in the schedule games as the schedule will be drawn up by the first of June and all the teams will be picked. The date for the Peterboro Open Tournament for this year will be held on the 23rd and 24th of July.

The following officers were elected for the coming year.

President—D. H. Moore.
Vice-President—R. G. Cottrell.
Secretary—J. Mayneord.
Executive Committee—A. Dick, G. Cairns and C. Seymour.
Green Committee—Messrs. Sedgwick, Reid, Convery and Chenhall.

The executive committee is to look after the business of the games committee which was not formed.

Tournament Committee—H. Martin and A. Dick.
Auditor—C. Seymour.

Referee's Error Gives Boxer a Fighting Name.

HOLYOKE, Mass., April 2.—(Associated Press).—While he is known only to the country as Jack Delaney, the real name of the young middleweight who brought a dramatic end to Paul Berlenbach's remarkable string of knockout victories in New York, is Ovilla Chapdelaine. Chapdelaine took up boxing while working in a paper mill here. One night when he stepped into the ring as a preliminary performer in this city, the referee asked him his name.

"Chapdelaine," came the reply.

"Ladies and gentlemen, in this corner we have Jack Delaney of Holyoke, and in this ——."

From that time on he has been known in pugilistic circles as Jack Delaney.

RICKARD CLEARED ON TICKETS S E

Speculation Charges In Connection With the Dempsey-Firpo Fight Aired.

NEW YORK, April 1. — Charges of ticket speculation in connection with the Dempsey-Firpo title battle last September at the Polo grounds have been partially substantiated by an investigation of the State Athletic Commission, but not to an extent which would warrant prosecution.

The Commission's probe also failed to find any evidence of alleged fraud on the part of Promoter Tex Rickard in the payment of State and Federal taxes on the proceeds of the fight.

In effect, the report cleared Rickard and his associates of charges of collusion in connection with both the sale of tickets and the payment of taxes. These charges first were aired by Tom O'Rourke, the veteran New York promoter, before a legislative committee hearing at Albany.

Traces of ticket speculation, Broesser said, were surprisingly small, and in no instance was evidence of sufficient character to make further action necessary.

GENERAL CONDUCT OF FANS IMPROVES

KINGSTON, Apr. 2.—In the old days of baseball, when the players were taken from their hotel to the ball park in a bus, home fans used to line the streets between the hotel and park and hurl bricks, stones and stale vegetables at the visiting players' bus as it trundled by.

That lent the atmosphere to the occasion. Oldtime players were wont to carry brass knuckles in their hip pockets, arm themselves with knives and in various ways try to lend an air of savagery to the great American pastime.

Of recent years it has become more of a gentleman's game. The owner or manager of a ball club is almost invariably a polished gentleman. He greets his bitterest enemy with a gracious hand extended for a friendly shake and it doesn't conceal a stone or an ancient egg. Rival shortstops pause on the field to exchange the compliments of the season, while fighting tooth and nail to defeat each other. Outwardly, however, they express and embody the best principles of fine sportsmanship.

That the highbrow game—or at least the polite and decent game—is better has been indicated by the fact that baseball has thrived and prospered exactly as has the true spirit of sportsmanship permeated this thrilling sport (even if the game is highly commercialized). Patrons of the pastime have found it possible to take their wives, sisters and the inevitable sweethearts to the sport, assured that no wild brick would mar their beauty or wilder epithet shock their sensibilities.

Happily, this is the case. The games have been no whit less desperately fought because the combatants respect one another. But as baseball has stepped up the plane of respectability there has always been an element ready and eager to regret the days of the thrown brick or the treacherous knife thrust. This element saw the decay of the game in its increased politeness and decency.

The same element professed to believe that baseball was deteriorating into the class of tiddle-de-winks unless a few players were maimed by thrown bricks or unless blood flowed from viciously inflicted spike wounds. They were trying to get away from the cleanliness of modern sports to the days of carnage.

What a mistake this is! Baseball depends upon no brutality to make the sport great. The same may be said of any sport that seeks the support of real men. Bare knuckle fighting disgusted patrons of sport and it was dropped. Bullfighting never appealed to American sporting men. Men who made professional sports possible by their patronage have sought to clean them up and inculcate in the participants a sense of fair play and decency.

Light Heavyweight Fight Broke Indoor Attendance Record in New Jersey—Armory Packed 12,000 In

NEWARK, N.J., April 2. — Young Stribling, Georgia schoolboy boxer, who on Monday night decisively outpointed Mike McTigue, light heavyweight champion of the world, in a 12-round no decision bout, will receive $7,024.33 as his share of the receipts, it was estimated yesterday. The champion's share will amount to $13,379.70, one-third of the net receipts.

The fight, which established a new indoor attendance record for New Jersey, attracted 9,688 paid admissions, totalling $49,058.90, including the ten per cent. tax. New Jersey will get $4,459.80 as its share.

It was estimated that close to 12,000 jammed the armory to witness the fight, shattering the previous record established in 1921 when Harry Wills, the negro, and Fred Fulton, met in a local ring.

MR. T COBB

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 2.—Ty Cobb says this will be his last year as a player and the pitchers hope so. Cobb was a star when Niagara was a mill pond, but he's still harder to fool than a widow with a purpose.

Ty was one of the first ball players to experiment with the hazardous science of thinking. Before his time the average athlete imagined he was getting full power out of his bean when he used it for a dandruff ranch.

Cobb usd to startle the buyers by dashing from first to third on an infield fumble. When he wasn't doing this he was going all the way home. He was harder to figure than a cross-eyed woman driver in traffic.

Old-timers used to call Cobb lucky stiff. Said if he ever fell into a manhole he'd land next to a wine barrel. Experts wrote pieces for the papers saying he was mere flash in the skillet.

All of 'em were as right as usual. Cobb was lucky like Edison, Morgan, Chaplin and Miss Joyce. The man simply has a swell line of groceries and he was always prompt with deliveries.

Cobb has lasted longer than a double-decker toothbrush in a North Carolina hermit's shack. Genius is a sturdy bird. It takes more than a light tap on the Van Dyke to send real talent kicking.

Baseball has never known more daring or colorful base runner. Cobb leaped from base to base on his own juice; he could get more miles on a pint of spiked foot oil than anybody that ever played the game.

They tell you base stealing is an art. With the Peach it was a habit, like walking in an upright position and using soap on back of the neck.

Smart crackers used to say Jennings had a great ball club in Cobb. They could have gone four furlongs farther and said Ban Johnson had a great league in him.

It will be a long time before the game develops a second Cobb, and then it will be just that—a second Cobb. You've seen the first and only.

You Can Eat Anything You Like And Not Have HEARTBURN

In all cases of heartburn there is a gnawing and burning pain in the stomach attended by a disturbed appetite, as when too much food is taken into the stomach it is liable to ferment and become extremely sour, vomiting occurs, and what is thrown up is generally sour and bitter. When you are in this condition you will find that Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will give you relief right away.

Mr. Joseph H. MacDonald, Christmas Island, N.S., writes:—"Two years ago I suffered all the time from heartburn. I took one vial of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and have never been troubled since.

It is very nice to be able to eat anything you like and not have heart burn any more."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Australia Endorsed Imperial Conference.

MELBOURNE, Australia, April 2. —(Canadian Press Cable via Reuters.)—After rejecting by a vote of 36 to 19 the labor amendment "that the house approves the British government's foreign policy which aims at advancing the peace of the world," the Commonwealth house of representatives yesterday carried Premier Bruce's own resolution approving the conclusions of the imperial conference regarding foreign relations, defence and preference.

Premier Bruce trenchantly criticized the failure of the labor members to participate in the debate especially regarding the preference issue. The premier declared it was vital for Australia to get preferences.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

WHY BETTER BREEDING OF LIVE STOCK WOULD PAY BIG PROFITS.

The better or purer bred an anymal the more pounds of beef or milk it will produce for the amount of feed it consumes. And the healthier and stronger is their constitution and digestive organs. Why can't our professors of agriculture not solve those problems for example getting a poor milk cow out of a good sire and dame? and that is very often the case.

Why is it easear to make a poor herd produce more milk or beef than keeping a good herd up in their high record?

If you know Gow's laws, or Mother Nature's laws (whatever you call it), you know everything and then you can improve or connect (as the preachers calls it) anything that lives on God's creation.

If a minister was converted himself he could improve seed grain or anymals as well as people, he would know the secret, how to make everything more beautiful. You have to lige out in God's creation to find God and not behind a pile of books. If a minister was converted himself he would know that he could live without eating and live forever, and as long as he stayed on this world he would not be afraid of anything. He would not help to pass laws that go against God's laws. As long as a man is not converted (in other words has not conquered himself, has no selve control) he is more than halve anymal may he bee, sheep, wolve, monkey or rino. As long as a man is afraid of a gun, afraid to dye he is not converted. Only anymals are afraid, a real man, a King is afraid of nothing in this world.

If a preacher says that Jesus Christ lived and dyed for us he is mistaken. Jesus lived and dyed only for the women and children and not for poor males.

In the World ware there were more than one Jesus that dyed or bleed for the Women and children.

And if our soldiers were willing to give their lives or limbs for them, our preachers should at least live for them instead of living for themselves.

I remain yours respectfully, the peace farmer from Harvey.

MAX WEISS.

COST OF THE PLEBISCITE

March 29, 1924.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir: It is said that economy is in the air. But would it not be better to have it in the budget? In the good old Summer time last year it certainly was in the speeches of the politicians. It is said that clergymen preach and doctors practice, so I suppose that it is rather too much for us to expect the politicians to do both of these things. They certainly preached well. Many of their sermonettes would have sounded well in a pulpit, accompanied by gown and bands.

It did one's moral nature good to hear them. They almost went so far as to misquote the Holy Scriptures and say the greatest of these is economy.

But now one involuntarily recalls the words of the popular song, "It is strange what a difference a few hours make."

Sandy was scarcely an hour in London before bang went sixpence, and our Provincial Treasurer was only a few months in office when bang went half a million dollars. But there is this great distinction between these two expenditures. I feel assured that Sandy received good value when he parted with his "sixpence," but the people of Ontario will receive no value whatever for their five hundred thousand 'iron men.'

And be it remembered that it is impossible to twist this item around so that it will look like a capital expenditure. It is absolutely a charge against revenue.

And it is a very notable charge at the present time. I will not say anything more about the sermonettes, but I refer to present business conditions. The majority of people in Ontario are carrying on with very moderate percentages of profit, and general business conditions in the province are far from being ideal. It is a time which calls for good business management.

This proposed expenditure therefore looks like a huge joke. In fact it looks like 500,000 jokes. But I am certain that the people will fail to appreciate the humor of it. The present is a particularly inopportune time to throw away such a large amount on this foolery which is proposed simply because some persons are unwilling that a law strongly approved by the people be given a fair trial for a reasonable length of time.

J. C. SMITH.

USE LOCO WEED IN CIGARETTES.

Addicts of the Drug Pay Thirty-Five Cents For a Pill--Every Known Effect on Smokers.

NEW ORLEANS, April 2.—(Associated Press).—"Marihuana," or "Marijuana" as some spell it, the everyday "loco weed" that formerly grew wild on the deserts of northern Mexico, now is being cultivated on thousands of acres in that country for sale to addicts of the plant in this country, according to Valdo Santos, arrested there with five pounds of it in his possession. Santos was charged with violating a city ordinance against the sale and possession of the product.

The weed, which Santos said is being sent from Mexico to agents in all parts of the United States for distribution, is smoked in the form of cigarettes and, according to Santos, "the business beats bootlegging because the fines are smaller and I sell it for thirty-five cents a cigarette."

Authorities say the stuff has almost every known effect upon persons who use it. In some it produces a feeling of exhilaration or grandeur, but instances have been known where crazed addicts have committed murder.

POLES DESTROY A CHURCH AS SYMBOL

Was Sign of Russian Regime and Destruction Has Commenced.

WARSAW, April 2.—(Associated Press).—The Russian cathedral of Warsaw, which to the Poles has always stood as a symbol of the hated Russian regime, will have ceased to exist in a few months. The decision to demolish this church was taken a year ago, but influential Russians and some people in art circles who admired the special architectural beauties of the edifice, endeavored to postpone its demolition, counting on a possible change of opinion.

Now, however, the destruction has begun. A commission of artists is dismounting the paintinge and mosaics which, together with the marble parts, will be used to decorate the church being constructed at the Citadel as a memorial to all Poles who perished in the fight for independence.

ONE KILLED IN COAST TRAIN WRECK TO-DAY

WASHINGTON, April 2.—(Canadian Press)—An Atlantic Coast Line railway passenger train, known as the Florida Special, was wrecked today near Weedford, Va. According to the reports reaching here from Fredericksburg, the engineer was killed and several passengers were reported killed or injured.

BRITISH STEAMSHIP IS ON FIRE IN MID-OCEAN

LONDON, April 2.—(Canadian Press). — The British steamship Frangestan, bound for Jeddah with 1,200 pilgrims abroad, is afire between decks, says a Lloyd despatch from Port Sudan. The fire, which is consuming the cotton in the vessel's No. 2 hold, is serious, and spreading, the message says.

The Frangestan is being accompanied by other vessels, and is due at Port Sudan to-morrow. The steamer Tangistan has left Port Sudan to assist her.

PRINCE OF WALES IS ON WAY TO BIARRITZ

LONDON, April 2.—(Canadian Press). — The Prince of Wales, travelling incognito as the Earl of Chester, left for Biarritz this morning for ten days' recuperation from the effects of his recent racing accident.

TWENTY-SIX BURNED TO DEATH IN MEXICO FIRE

MEXICO CITY, April 2.—(Canadian Press)—Twenty-six persons are dead and at least 56 injured in consequence of a fire and panic in a motion picture theatre last night at Tauhaya City, a suburb of the capital.

The majority of the victims were trampled in the rush for the exit or electrocuted by a wire hanging neck high in the main aisle. The fire was caused by a short circuit of the same wire which became loosened falling upon the audience.

Lady Astor's Town Is Soberest In Kingdom.

PLYMOUTH, April 2 (United Press).—This town, which is represented in Parliament by Lady Astor, now has the additional and appropriate distinction of being the soberest town in the United Kingdom.

During the seven weeks last year—according to the chief constable—not a single arrest was made for drunkenness. During fourteen weeks there was only one case of drunkenness per week.

The chief constable attributes his shining record to the publicans who can't be persuaded to sell liquor to customers beyond a certain point. "The excellent conduct of their business," is the way the C.C. phrases it. But no doubt Lady Astor can think of other factors—the cinemas and the free reading rooms, and all the other substitutes.

But whatever the cause, there is no question about the sobriety of the place, as may be seen from a comparison of Plymouth's statistics as to arrests for drunkenness per thousand of population with the statistics from other places in the United Kingdom:

Canadian Stock Exchange and Mines | New York Stock Exchange and Curb Prices

TO-DAY'S QUOTATIONS AND OPINION AND REVIEWS OF THE MARKETS.

MINING NEWS

The mining market was inclined to follow the trend of yesterday with the exception of Teck Hughes which had a run up to near the noon close but weakened off again. There is no particular news on Teck outside of what is already known namely a program of expansion 1.

The Toronto and Montreal boards were listless with a tendency to sell of the British Empire steel issues were a bit stronger from yesterday.

The New York market was stronger this morning but stocks did not get very far away. The rail acted the best of any and showed real strength. The industrials were inclined to be still weak.

Market Opinions.

Goadby and Co.— We do not think that all of the selling that has split the prices of industrial stocks to the lowest since 1923, came out of Florida, it came largely from holders of stocks who have reached the conclusion that the business tide has turned and that net earnings in most industrials are likely to fall off sharply. More persons have sold stocks short perhaps than ever before, but they are generally well margined and will probably hold their positions for months. We think that the market will go their way. Though many individual stocks may make trouble for the bears we look for a prolonged but not rapid decline of most industrials. The utility and some of the railroad stocks should hold strong.

Hallo and Steiglitz — Business slowing up. Some softening of commodity prices and an uncertain business outlook have to some extent been discounted market wise.

After close of market yesterday more cheerful feeling prevailed than for many weeks. The belief prevailed that various developments were close at hand that will essentially change the situation and create a general disposition to accumulate stocks. Increased attention was paid to the foreign exchange situation as a result of the advance in many continental exchanges to new high levels and the reports of the extension of credits and making of important loans to Belgium and Denmark. The first effect of the foreign financing will be increased demand for American products required in the expansion of industrial activity abroad, according to opinions expressed by prominent market operators.

Five Dead and Five Seriously Injured in Hotel Fire.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., April 2.—Five persons are dead, five are seriously injured and several are missing as a result of a fire which destroyed the Livingstone Hotel early to-day, with the loss of two hundred thousand dollars.

The dead are: Miss Bessie Marlow, 32, of Reed City; E. F. Sargent, Grand Rapids; Miss Jennie Evans, 60, address unknown; Giles Wade, 70, Grand Rapids, and John Kelly, 60, Grand Rapids.

The first three lost their lives when they jumped from the building; the other two died in the building.

Care of Mah Jong Tiles.

Owners of mah jong sets should keep the tiles in flaked camphor. A small white worm bores into bamboo and will ruin the set completely unless there is camphor protection.

More Decorative.

The telephone book is a necessity that can be made more attractive if a cretonne cover is made for the volume. The cover can be removed, laundered and put back as each new book is issued.

GOVERNMENT FAVORS USE SOUTH CENTRAL

Unconfirmed Report Says Department of Education Endorses Inexpensive Plan.

It is learned on good authority today that the government department of education is quite favorable to the taking over and remodelling of the South Central School as a technical training centre for a period of five years. That it is anticipated would provide for a start in technical education and tide the city through the period of depression, and the school would then be in condition for use as a public school, which it is conceded will be needed in that district shortly.

The Chairman of the Board of Education could not confirm this information, saying the report is in the hands of the secretary to be presented to the Advisory Vocational Committee at its next meeting, and until that time no pronouncement can be made.

AT THE ROYAL

ROYAL THEATRE SECURES MARSHALL NEILAN'S "MINNIE."

Marshall Neilan's latest picture, "Minnie," released by Associated First National, has been secured by the Royal Theatre and will be shown there for the balance of the week, commencing to-morrow.

Matt Moore and Leatrice Joy are featured in the story.

Even the followers of Marshall Neilan pictures will get a surprise in "Minnie" because Matt Moore for the first time in his career appears in character. As usual he does a clever piece of acting, full of wholesome human humor. And Leatrice Joy, who is known for her beauty, has covered up her prettiness and comes forth as a family drudge and she leaves the screen better for her excellent portrayal. Miss Joy and Matt Moore are going to win new laurels with the showing of "Minnie." They are going to give the whole motion picture world a good hearty laugh.

These two clever screen players are ably supported by George Barnum, Josephine Crowell, Helen Lynch, Raymond Griffith, Dick Wayne, Tom Wilson and George Dromgold.

New prices are: Matinees 10 and 15 cents. Evenings: 20 and 25 cents.

"THE WANTERS" IS NEW TRIUMPH FOR STAHL.

John M. Stahl, who made "The Wanters," the sparkling comedy drama woven around the romantic experiences of a lady's maid whose love affair with a millionaire places her in a most remarkable situation and now showing at the Royal Theatre, is known as the director who has never produced a failure.

He is adding materially to this reputation with the record-breaking success of his new picture in all of the big first run theatres of the country.

"The Wanters" is considered by many to be Mr. Stahl's best picture to date—a comparison that takes in such artistic triumphs as "The Dangerous Age," "One Clear Call," "The Child Thou Gavest Me" and "The Woman in His House."

Featured in the cast are such capable stars as Marie Prevost, Huntley Gordon, Gertrude Astor, Robert Ellis, Norma Shearer and little Richard Headrick.

LEATRICE JOY TEMPORARILY SHEDS BEAUTY IN "MINNIE"

How would you like to be the homeliest girl in town? If you were a reigning beauty would you, even if you were in pictures, be willing to cover up your beauty to appear as the homeliest girl? Yet that's what Leatrice Joy does in Marshall Neilan's new picture, "Minnie," released by Associated First National. The story, which is coming to the Royal Theatre next Thursday, revolves around Minnie's unlovely appearance.

But while Miss Joy has temporarily shed her beauty, Marshall Neilan did not ask her to make a blank of her mind; so that behind the homely face and the awkward manners of Minnie there is a power that makes the story speed along merrily, blending humor and pathos from which spring forth some of the most hilarious entertainment Marshall Neilan has put on the screen.

Matt Moore steps into the fun, too, playing the role of a forgetful, but inquisitive reporter. He looks forlorn. He wears a coat that for length would fit a giant. His face is freckled like Wesley Barry's.

In the supporting cast will be seen George Barnum, Minnie's father and the hotelkeeper who makes radio his hobby; Josephine Crowell, Minnie's seventh stepmother; Helen Lynch, Minnie's stepsister; Raymond Griffith, a chewing gum salesman, and Tom Wilson, hotel janitor.

NEAL BURNS APPEARS IN "CALL THE WAGON."

Neal Burns and Charlotte Merriam will be seen in the latest Educational-Christie comedy, "Call the Wagon," at the Royal Theatre on Thursday. Advance reports indicate that it is a riot of fun.

AT THE CAPITOL

Richard Dix had a glorious time playing Ben Jordan in William de Mille's Paramount production of "Icebound," the film version by Clara Beranger of Owen Davis' Pulitzer prize play which comes to the Capitol Theatre to-morrow, Friday and Saturday.

"Ben is real," said Dix. "He isn't all good or all bad. He's neither a hero with a halo or a villian with a cloven hoof, but just like most young fellows.

"I like Ben, I like him because he is willing to fight. I like him, too, because he has sturdy sentiments, and despite his rearing in the repressed Jordan family, lets his emotions sway him. Sometimes Ben is mean and says hard things and makes himself thoroughly disliked; at others he's gentle and kindly. In short, Ben isn't the conventional lead in a moving picture.

"He is one of the most unusual characters I've played on the stage or screen, and I like every moment of him. One moment the audiences will like him and the next they won't. In the end they will realise that he is just a human being, while they may not approve of everything he has done.

"I know Ben. I know many Bens. He went to war; he left his own people and sailed for the battlefields of Europe. His own people were cold—like the land they lived off. In France he met the cheeriness of family life, the smiles of children and the dancing eyes of a pretty girl. Here was warmth—warmth like their land.

"To return to his former life in New England to work a frozen farm, to live among his own people who never smiled and who wore no pretty clothes, was impossible for him. When a pretty girl in a bright dress came before Ben, he hugged her to him. It was this dress, made by the girl who loved him and stolen and worn by her rival, that created the climax in his life.

"That is the psychology of Ben—to me. Like so many he was the victim of environment, and the reason he rebelled against his surroundings was not that he was innately 'mean' but that his soul underneath was crying for a little warmth, sunshine and happiness. And, after all, how many of us are like that!"

Lois Wilson plays the leading role opposite Dix, and the other important parts are played by Vera Reynolds, Edna May Oliver, Ethel Wales, Mary Foy, Helen Dubois, Alice Chapin, Joseph Depew, Frank Shannon and John Daly Murphy.

SELECTED VAUDEVILLE AT CAPITOL THURSDAY, FRIDAY, SATURDAY.

A novel dance offering, with two boys and a girl, called "A Peach and a Pair," will be the vaudeville offering at the Capitol Theatre the last three days of this week. This is a delightful dancing number that is certain to please. The Capitol announces that some excellent acts have been placed under contract for an early appearance in Peterboro.

LITTLE THEATRE CLUB REHEARSING DAILY.

The Little Theatre Club is rehearsing daily for their appearance the first three days of next week in Kathleen MacCarthy's one-act comedy, "Melange" (or three women and a man), at the Capitol Theatre. Mrs. W. McKee Bingham is directing rehearsals with Mrs. E. H. Wood as stage manager. The cast is composed entirely of local people. Along with this comedy will be shown Thomas Meighan in "Pied Piper Malone" and Capitol selected vaudeville.

MARK STREET LADIES' AID HELD A CONCERT

The Affair Was a Splendid Success—Good Programme.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Mark street Methodist church had a very jolly time last evening and provided much entertainment for their pleased audience when they gave a real Old-Time concert in the basement of the church. The affair was a great success in every way and the ladies are being asked to repeat their efforts, which centred about old fashioned costumes and answering to old-time names, of the early Victorian era.

The concert opened with "God Save the Queen," instead of the regular wording of the National Anthem, followed by the address of the chairman, Rev. R. Bamfo-th. The "family album" was the means of introducing each lady in turn to the audience, the introductions being made by the leader, Mrs. I. M. Weir, with appropriate remarks for each. A musical programme by the ladies included recitations by Mrs. S. Holden, Mrs. J. Speer and Miss Alberta Throop, the latter entitled "Should Women Propose?" in keeping with the combined April First and Leap Year character of the entertainment. A recitation by Mrs. Speer had its sequel in a vocal duet by Mr. Speer and Mrs. S. Matchett. A chorus, "Bohangus and Bohunkus," was given by the Ashburnham Female Choir, led by Mrs. Weir, who also gave a solo, "Comin' Thru the Rye." A vocal duet was rendered by Mrs. M. Carr and Miss Ruby Kerr, a vocal solo by Mrs. Marshall, "When You and I were Young, Maggie," and a very funny number was the recitation and hoop drill by seven of the ladies, wearing enormous hoops.

Appropriate old-time music accompanied all the numbers, and the pantomime, "Old Folks at Home," by several of the ladies, also the closing piece, in a "nodding" drill, that ended a delightful programme, at the conclusion of which refreshments were served.

IN MEMORIAM

SULLIVAN—In loving memory of Mrs. Michael Sullivan of Douro, who died, Jan. 3rd 1924.

The sands of time run out, set is life's sun
Reached is the journey's end, the great goal won,
Folded her hands, upon her gentle breast,
Her toil is finished, Mother is at rest,
To weary one's, at length comes sweet release,
After the storms of life, eternal peace.

Long, as to her life's vital powers, were lent,
For others weal, that life, was gladly spent,
Nor, joy, was hers, nor purer pleasure here,
Than ministering to those she held so dear,
Though she has passed beyond our vision yet—
They greatly err, who deem, she could forget.

Mother, not all the beauty, and the bliss
Of Paradise, could make you so remiss,
Your loving care, one moment, e'en forego
For those whose hearts were knit, with yours, below,
Who, lone, unsolaced, now so badly shed,
Tears of affection, on they church yard bed.

Where fair St. Joseph's casts benison round,
A sacred shadow, on each silent mound,
There by her side, her kindred dead repose,
Softly enwreathed, in spotless wintry snows,
In God's strong Angel's keeping, safe, secure
Our loved one rests in certain hope, and sure.

That Christ's own promise, was not pledged in vain
At His appearing, she shall rise again,
When speaks His voice, in tones, so thrilling clear,
That all who slumber, 'neath the sod, shall hear,
Awake, and rise, triumphant, from the clay,
To life and light, in realms of endless day.

When He returns, with healing in His wing,
Where then O death, where, is thy cruel sting,
When at the glorious resurrection dawn,
This Mortal ,immortality puts on,
And soars unfettered, from thy bond age free
Where then O grave, thy vaunted victory,

O bliss unspeakable, that home to win—
And spend Eternity with souls akin,
In a bright country, far beyond the reign,
Of death, and sickness, lonliness, and pain
To share His many mansioned home, above,
Where all is happiness, and peace, and love,

We miss her every hour, yet would not mourn,
As void of hope, tho life of joy is shorn,
But may we tread, the straight and narrow road
Which led our dear one to that blest abode
That we may meet her some glad glorious day,
A day that all earth's sorrows shall repay.

SAYS "HON. PETER" SAT IN ON TWO OCCASIONS

Was Present When Commissions Were Paid on Government Deposits

TORONTO, April 2.—(Canadian Press).—J. C. Whitaker, who was general supervisor of the Home Band, and immediately under John Cooper Mason, general manager, gave evidence before the Public Accounts Committee of the Legislature this morning on commissions paid on Provincial Government deposits. He stated that on one occasion he had taken $2,500 into Mr. Mason's office and handed it to Mr. Mason. Hon. Peter Smith was in the office at the time. He also knew of another occasion when Mr. Calvert, manager of a Toronto branch of the Home Bank, took a sum of money into Mr. Mason's office while Hon. Mr. Smith was present. On neither occasion, although he knew Mr. Mason got money, did witness know what he had done with it. Mr. Whitaker said that Hon. Peter Smith was a frequent visitor to the bank and that on one occasion the general manager said, "Hon. Peter (meaning Hon. Peter Smith) is coming down for his money," and on another occasion Mr. Mason had said, "Hon. Peter isn't losing much time." Mr. Whitaker said he knew nothing about the $15,000 cheque alleged to have been made out to Mr. Smith, which is now missing.

"What did Mr. Smith make these frequent visits to the Home Bank for?" witness was asked.

"To make these collections, I would say," was the response.

Witness said it was a matter of general knowledge that commissions were paid on deposits. The first visit by Mr. Smith had been within two months of his becoming Provincial Treasurer. After 1921 his visits to the bank became more frequent.

Witness said that about the time he had handed Mr. Mason $2,500, in the presence of Mr. Smith, that the general manager had stated that "money was due" on Provincial deposits.

"You have no knowledge what was done with the envelopes containing money by Mason?" Hon. F. C. Biggs asked witness.

"No, I have no knowledge of that. I gave Mr. Mason an envelope containing money but I do not know what he did with it. Mr. Smith was in the room at the time."

"There was no one else present?"

"No."

Mr. Whitaker knew actually of only two occasions when Mr. Mason had got money while Peter Smith was visiting him.

MAY MAKE STATEMENT.

TORONTO, April 2.—(Special).—The Toronto Star asks to-day: "Will C. A. Matthews, suspended Deputy Provincial Treasurer, suddenly walk in on the Public Accounts Committee and make a full voluntary statement on the administration of the Finance Department since he was first connected with it, including its conduct under both the U. F. O. and Conservative regimes?"

"This is the expectation which is freely entertained to-day," says the paper, "According to Mr. Matthews' friends he is in the city. It is said he has already made a statement to Col. W. H. Price, Provincial Treasurer."

Diary of J. C. Cooper, manager of the Home Bank, was produced, showing an entry for an appointment with Hon. Peter Smith, on January 6th, 1923. "On that day $1,800 was paid out in commission for provincial deposits," said Col. Price. Diary also contained entries that Mr. Smith was expected at Mr. Mason's office on April 5th, 7th and 9th. Mr. Price said bank records showed that on April 6th, $3,000 was paid out for commission on deposits to some one.

A. E. Calvert, assistant general manager of the Home Bank and Gordon Chapman, accountant, will appear before the committee Friday to give evidence concerning payment of commissions for obtaining of provincial deposits.

TWO MEN TAKEN MONTREAL CASE

Had Eight Thousand Dollars and May Be Part of Robber Gang.

MONTREAL, April 2 (Canadian Press). — The discovery of $8,000 on the persons of two men arrested last night in connection with the hold-up of the car of the Bank of Hochelaga has led the police to believe that they are on the right track.

The men were taken into custody at a boarding-house at St. Henri Division of the city.

With them were two women, who were also held for interrogation.

The police declined to hand out the names of the suspects until their investigations are complete.

The money found will be examined to see if it had passed through any of the branches of the Bank of Hochelaga, who were sending the surplus earnings to the head office in the car held up.

MAY BE SAME MEN.

TORONTO, April 2 (Canadian Press). — It was stated at Toronto police headquarters to-day that there is a possibility that the gang which held up and robbed the Montreal bank messengers yesterday afternoon are of the same gang which stole 8,000 from the Toronto bank messengers on 24th July last after a gun fight.

It is believed that Stone, the dead bandit, may be one of the gang, as he belonged to Chicago, to where the bandits in the Toronto hold-up were traced.

Considerable sums of money stolen from the Bank of Nova Scotia and the Sterling Banks were returned through local banks from Chicago and St. Paul sources.

Police surprised suspects in their boarding house and when they entered one of the women was stuffing three thousand dollars into one of her stockings. The men had a heap of money in bills spread over their knees counting it. One of them is believed to have been a member of the gang arrested by Toronto police several months ago when seven revolvers and two guns were taken in a raid.

The police stated to-day that $140,000 was found in the gangsters' automobile after the hold-up, so that the bandits got away with $100,000. The Bank of Hochelaga will compensate widowed mother of Chauffeur Cleroux.

ONTARIO LEADS ALL PROVINCES IN AGRICULTURE

Half the Dairy Products of Canada Bear Stamp of Ontario, Said Hon. J. S. Martin — Great Surplus of Honey Last Year — Minister Reiterates the Importance of Quality.

Reviews Department.

TORONTO, April 3.—(Canadian Press).—Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture, took occasion in the Legislature yesterday when consideration was being given to the estimates of his department, to review the accomplisments of his department and indicate what it was proposed to do in the future. E. P. Tellier (Liberal North Essex) at the request of Hon. Charles McCrea, Minister of Mines, withdrew a bill by which the township of Rochester was to get confirmation of an agreement with a gas company. Mr. McCrea said this bill was unnecessary in view of the government legislation he was introducing which put all municipalities back in the jurisdiction of the gas commission which settles all disputes between companies at municipalities. By an amendment two years ago some municipalities were taken out of the control of the board but they all go back with the present legislation.

Sandwich Opposed.

Mr. Tellier also opposed a bill giving the Consolidated Essex Border Utilities Commission right to prepare plans for sewers and subdivisions for the municipalities along the border. He stated that the township of Sandwich west did not want to be in the scheme and also declared that they had not had an opportunity to present their case in full when the bill was before the private bills committee. Hon. W. F. Nickle who is chairman of the committee said he was surprised to hear such a statement as every opportunity had been given to those opposed to present their case. Mr. Tellier was told that he might move an amendment when the bill was considered in committee of the whole house.

Ontario Leads Others.

Hon. Mr. Martin in his speech on agricultural affairs said that in every branch of the industry Ontario led in the Dominion. In dairying Ontario he said produced half of the total of the country. He said that the farmers movement and party in the last election had lost heavily in the votes among the farmers themselves. He said that the U.F.O. co-operative had had $875,000 paid up capital which had gone down to $229,000, or a share that was worth $25 had dwindled to be worth about $7.

"I think that politics had much to do with that" said Mr. Martin. "I am a great believer in co-operation but politics must be kept out."

Honey Production.

Mr. Martin said that last year Ontario produced ten million pounds of honey. The surplus would easily be disposed of in Great Britain. The Minister said the whole market for farm products depended on quality. Mr. Martin spoke of schools fairs saying that last year there were 504 fairs. He criticized those farmers who belittled their own calling and maintained that farming could be made to pay at the present time. He pointed out that Canada was facing serious competition from New Zealand in the cheese market in Britain and said that it was Ontario men who put New Zealand on the map so far as its dairy products are concerned.

Cows Not Paying.

Mr. Martin speaking of dairying conditions in Ontario said he did not believe half the cows in the province were paying their way. Better sires and better selection would be the remedy for this. Mr. Martin will continue his speech when the estimate is again taken up.

To Spend Half Million On Port Arthur Harbor

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., April 3.—It is estimated that more than a half million dollars will be expended by the Federal Government Department of Public Works in the harbors of Port Arthur and Fort William this summer.

Included in the work to be undertaken is the extension to Port Arthur's south end breakwater, and dredging of elevator slips and main channels of navigation in either city. Three dredging outfits will be required to handle this section of the work.

Transfer Pilgrims From Burning Ships

LONDON, April 3.—(Canadian Press).—Twelve hundred pilgrims bound for Jeddah Wednesday had a narrow escape when the cotton cargo of the British steamer Frangestan caught fire in the Red Sea as the vessel was nearing Port Sudan.

Answering radio calls for assistance a number of craft rushed to the Frangestan, and stood by until all the pilgrims and other passengers, and the members of the crew were transferred to another steamer.

A message received by Lloyds from Alexandria, Egypt, last night said the captain was abandoning the steamer, and that he had all the assistance he required. An earlier report said the fire in the cargo was spreading.

EXPERTS' WORK NEARING CLOSE

Report Is Being Drafted For Presentation to the Reparations Commission —Final Plenary Session To-Night or Friday.

PARIS, April 3 (Canadian Press).—The committee, headed by Owen D. Young, of New York, which is drafting the report of the reparations experts to the Reparations Commission, met again last night to iron out the few remaining divergencies between the French and the British texts, and expects to complete its work some time to-day.

All of the sub-committees of the first or Dawes committee ceased work last evening awaiting the final plenary session of the committee to night or Friday morning, at which it is expected final approval will be voted unanimously in short order.

The committee charged with estimating the amount of German capital exported, of which Reginald McKenna is chairman, meet again today in order to arrive at a definite figure.

Mr. McKenna, when shown the estimate of French newspapers that eight milliards of gold marks had escaped, said,

"So that's your figure, eh? Well, that is just what we are trying to find."

However, it is expected that his committee will agree on an approximate sum and submit its report to Mr. Dawes and his co-workers.

These indications from authoritative sources seem to set definitely at rest rumours that the experts would "agree to disagree," handing in a report signed by all, but with French and British reservations on several points — like the United States Senate's ratification of the Versailles Treaty.

Furthermore, it seems evident that the projected moratorium will be for four years instead of from four to six as the British were at first inclined to recommend.

All this undoubtedly will make Premier Poincare's acceptance of the report easier and pave the way to a speedy co-ordination of the views of the Allies.

However, despite the unanimity of the experts, a fight is foreseen in the bosom of the Reparations Commission where the British are known to favour a fairly protracted debate in order to embody suggestions to submit to the respective Governments while the French members are desirous of placing the matter directly before the Premiers.

Louis Bathou, president of the Commission, is understood to be inclined to believe that in this case, the Commission should act as a mere forwarding agency, not advising the Governments in any way.

Estimates on Cost of Hudson Bay Railway.

OTTAWA, April 3. — Canadian Press. — An estimate of $2,000,000 as the approximate cost of completing the Hudson Bay Railway between mile 332 and Port Nelson was given by the Minister of Railways in the House yesterday afternoon in reply to a question by T. W. Bird, Progressive, Man.

Mr. Graham said that this did not include the railway terminals at Port Nelson, nor would it complete the railway for operation, as it would cost $4,250,000 to put the line from The Pas to Mile 332 in proper operating condition.

MONTREAL DETECTIVES HAD PROTECTED BANK'S CAR UNTIL SATURDAY

Loss of $142,000 in Battle With Bandits Borne By Insurance Companies, General Manager of the Bank of Hochelaga Stated — Car and Contents Insured For Half a Million.

SUSPECTS HELD.

MONTREAL, April 3.—(Canadian Press). — Interviewed here last night, Beaudry Leman, general manager of the Bank of Hochelaga, the collection car of which was held up Tuesday afternoon, cash stolen to the amount of $142,288, and the car's chauffeur and one of the bandits shot dead, made the following statement:

"The bank has no official statement to issue as to the amount of money stolen in the hold-up.

"It is now a matter for the insurance companies with which we were insured. The total insurance which we carried on the car and its contents was $500,000. As to the money taken, the figure of $142,000 is about correct, and the total sum being carried in the car was well below $300,000 — about $240,000 would be in line with facts.

"The monetary loss is not worrying us, for there is really no loss so far as we are concerned. It is the death of Cleroux (chauffeur) which has touched us."

Armored Car Ordered.

To the suggestion that an armored car of the type used by some other banks in this city might have proved valuable in the light of events, Mr. Leman said:

"Two weeks ago we ordered an armored car and we are awaiting delivery. I personally doubt, however, whether that would have proven of greater value. If four men, well armed cannot get safely through the streets of Montreal in a car like they had, what greater chance would there be for them even if the car were armored?"

Mr. Leman confirmed the report that early in March, city detectives warned the bank that a holdup of the cash collection automobile was in prospect, and that, after shadowing the bank car for two weeks, the detectives then gave the opinion that the danger was over. "When they said they would give up the protection, I protested and said that the robbers might yet do something," said Mr. Leman.

It has now been established that the chauffeur, Cleroux, died fighting, firing at the bandits as he fell in the road.

Marvellous Escape.

Maurice Thibodeau, the bank messenger who was sitting in the rear of the bank car, had a marvellous escape from death, according to officials of the bank head office. His overcoat was slashed by bullets in the left arm and left shoulder, and one bullet that struck just above the heart penetrated his clothing and hit the flesh hard enough to cause a red patch on the skin. This bullet was picked out of his clothes by bank officials.

Undaunted by their experience, the same messengers today made the tour of the bank's branches to collect surplus cash.

Detective's Statement.

Inspector Egan, Chief of the Montreal Detective Bureau, said:

"We protected the Bank of Hochelaga automobile for over two weeks and when we found that it was getting almost impossible for us to keep up this protection" I notified the bank people that they should do something for themselves. We were then assured that every precaution would be taken, but we were asked to keep on protecting the automobile until Wednesday of last week. This we did, and as a matter of fact we protected the automobile unknown to the bank officials until Saturday.

"The detectives have a large number of firms to protect and the work is a heavy strain on the staff. The only protest that the bank officials made to me was when I notified them that we would be obliged to discontinue protecting their automobile. It was then that we were asked to continue until Wednesday, after which they would see to their own protection as best they could."

May Impose Death On Armed Bandits

OTTAWA, April 3.—The latest outrage of bandits in Montreal may prove the incentive to a drastic move in parliament for suppressing that particular kind of lawlessness, states the Journal this afternoon. There is under consideration among members of the senate a suggestion that attacks with firearms for purpose of robbery be made a capital offence. It is believed that the penalty of death for such a crime would be the most effective deterrent to criminals, the paper says.

DEMAND NORMAL LEVEL OF LAKES

Requisite Condition to St. Lawrence Waterway Project — Chicago Canal Diversions Effects.

OTTAWA, April 3. Canadian Press—Diversion of water from Lake Michigan by the Chicago drainage commission was discussed in the Senate yesterday. Answering a question by Senator David, Senator Dandurand, Government leader, said tat there was no agreement between Canada and the United States on the question. His personal opinion was that the enlarged engineering commission which is to consider the St. Lawrence deep waterway project will have for a "very first duty" a consideration of water lebels and of necessity will have to discover the effect of the diversion of water by the Chicago drainage canal.

"If they find—as I have no doubt they will," continued Senator Dandur and, "that this diversion lowers the levels of the lakes, I am sure that the people of Canada will insist that no international work be entered upon until the normal levels of the lakes be restored. The acknowledged levels of the Great Lakes are the essential basis upon which will rest all their studies."

Senator Casgrain described the Chicago drainage canal, and its effects on lake levels and navigation.

British Chambers of Commerce Regret U.S. Bonus to Goods Shipped on U.S. Vessels.

LONDON, April 3 (Canadian Press). — The Executive Council of the Association of British Chambers of Commerce met in London yesterday and adopted a resolution declaring that it views with the greatest regret the United States' action as embodied in he Interstate Commerce Commission's decision to allow preferential railroad rates to United States goods shipped in United States vessels.

The resolution calls this to the attention of the United States Chamber of Commerce and the International Chamber of Commerce.

Recently the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce decided to bring this matter to the attention of the British Government and the Association of British Chambers of Commerce, contending that the action of the Interstate Commerce Commission directly contravenes decisions against flag discriminations in trade adopted by the International Chamber of Commerce and by the second general conference of communications and transit at Geneva.

P.R. SYSTEM OF VOTING DEBATED IN COMMONS CALLED FREAK SCHEME

Resolution Introduced By W. C. Good of Brant Condemned By Conservatives —Would Operate to Advantage of Liberals and Progressives, Donald Sutherland Declared.

DEBATE ADJOURNED.

OTTAWA, April 3. — (Canadian Press.)—Proportional representation came before the House of Commons Wednesday when W. C. Good (Progressive, Brant), introduced a resolution proposing that "the Dominion Elections Act be so amended as to use the transferable vote to secure, as far as possible, proportional representation in such multimembered constituencies as may be provided for in the next redistribution."

T. L. Church (Conservative, North Toronto), rose to a point of order and pointed out that the re-distribution bill had reached the committee stage and that Mr. Good's resolution was contrary to the rules of the house because it forestalled the action of parliament.

Rt.-Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the opposition, supported the contention of Mr. Church. The re-distribution bill was now before parliament and the proposed resolution was out of order.

The speaker ruled the resolution in order. It dealt with the mode of elections and not with the re-distribution that was before the house, therefore it could not be regarded as a measure that forestalled the bill under consideration.

Would Move Slowly.

Mr. Good advocated a partial adoption of the principle for three reasons. In the first place, he thought it well to go slowly in order to avoid the danger of reaction. In the second place he admitted freely that there were difficulties in working out the principles in sparsely settled areas, and thirdly, there was a scarcity of persons trained to act as returning officers in an election by proportional representation. He could see no objection, however, to applying this method of election for dominion purposes in Winnipeg, where it had already been tried out for the provincial legislature.

Mr. Good spoke of the stabilizing effect of proportional representation in Ireland. He reviewed several elections held during the past few years which revealed unfair representation. In the recent British elections in the City of Birmingham, he said, one-half the votes cast elected eight Conservative candidates who constituted the entire representation of that city in the British House of Commons. In the recent Ontario elections the Conservative party received forty-nine per cent. of the votes cast yet sixty-five per cent. of the members of the Ontario Legislature were Conservatives. Mr. Good said there was a movement to extend the operations of proportional representation from the City of Winnipeg to rural sections of the Province of Manitoba.

Resolution Premature.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, regarded the resolution of Mr. Good as premature. He suggested that some of the double member constituencies be done away with. If proportional representation was to be tried out it should be applied first to the large cities, he said. The Minister of Justice said the Government was going to introduce a bill very soon to give effect to the principle of the transferable vote.

He suggested that the report of the committee on redistribution be received before dealing with the proposal contained in the resolution.

W. G. McQuarrie (Conservative, New Westminster) expressed himself as being absolutely opposed to proportional representation and also to the transferable vote. Proportional representation had been tried out in British Columbia by a number of municipalities and as far as he was aware not one of them had adopted it after the experiment. If there were to be experiments, said Mr. MacQuarrie, he preferred that other people should make them. He advised the House not to entertain the proposal.

Another London Strike Settled

LONDON, April 2.— (Canadian Press Cable.)—The strike of the cold storage workers which was threatened unless their employers improved on their offer of an increase of 10 shillings a week in their wages will not take place. The dispute was settled to-day as the outcome of joint negotiations under the auspices of the ministry of labor between officials of the transport workers' union and representatives of the employers.

Rejected Capital Levy by 325-160

LONDON, April 3.—(Canadian Press).—The proposal of a capital levy was rejected by a vote of 325 to 160 in the House of Commons last night.

Chief interest centred in the admission of J. R. Clynes leader in the House, that the Government could no longer hope for the passage of such a measure in the present parliament, and that it was useless for any Government to introduce a levy without full consent of the electorate. He strongly maintained, however, that ultimately the country would be forced by its crushing burden of debt to resort to this remedy, because there was not alternative.. He was convinced that the people would soon realize that a levy was not a stupid thing, as its opponents contended, but a real, stern necessity.

LIBERAL PARTY CHECKED LABOR DEFEAT EVADED

Revolutionary Bill in the British Commons Providing For Non-Eviction of the Unemployed Tenant Evoked Ultimatum of Opposition From Asquith — Discussion Postponed For New Bill.

SCOTS SPONSORED IT.

LONDON, April 3.—(Canadian Press).—The Government evaded an otherwise inevitable defeat in the House of Commons last night in connection with the Rents Bill, which came up for its second reading, by consenting to a revision of the objectionable lause providing for non-eviction of a tenant if he was unemployed.

The Liberal party held a meeting during the course of the day to consider what action it would take on this question, and H. H. Asquith, the Liberal leader, announced in the House that unless this clause was eliminated he would be compelled to vote against the second reading of the bill. This ultimatum meant that both Conservatives and Liberals would oppose the measure, and that therefore the Ministers would be defeated.

Revolutionary Measure.

The opponents of the bill did not mince words in denouncing it. Neville Chamberlain, the former Minister of Health, and former Chancellor of the Exchequer, for instance, said he would not call the bill Socialism—it was revolution itself, by which self-constituted autocrats visited their personal vengeance on their enemies. This was aimed at the Clydeside section of the Labor party's extreme Left Wing, which strongly sponsored the measure.

Faced by this dilemma, John Robert Clynes, as leader of the House, announced that the Government had no intention of receding from the aim of the bill to make secure in his home the poor unemployed workmen, but since the House was opposed to the method suggested, the Government was prepared to substitute for the objectionable clause another throwing upon the public funds the cost of maintaining these unfortunate people.

Welcomed Delay.

Some discussion ensued upon whether the necessary change should be made in the existing bill or if a new bill was necessary. This being a difficult point to decide, further discussion of the bill was postponed.

This postponement is welcome to both the ministerial and Liberal parties so that they may consider future action. The Conservatives are expected equally to oppose Mr. Clyne's latest suggestion, but it is understood that the Ministers are fully decided not to make the question one of confidence, whatever course is adopted.

FEWER UNEMPLOYED.

LONON, April 3. Ministry of Labour returns show 1,120,000 persons registered as unemployed in England. This is 130,112 fewer than at the close of 1923.

CITY ENGINEER IS TO PREPARE SEVERAL PLANS

Paving, Sidewalks, Sewers, Oil versus Hydrated Lime and Other Matters to Be Reported On —Council Bound to Lay Concrete Although Some Members Favored Asphalt—Appeal to City Solicitor.

PETITIONS RECEIVED

That a by-law passed by last years' council virtually bound the city to construct concrete roadways instead of the asphalt, macadam, tarvia and other varieties that some of the members wanted threw the Board of Works into a discussion last night, from which emerged a motion to consult the city solicitor as to the rights of council to proceed with the construction with different materials than were mentioned in the by-law. Alderman Stocker said several residents on the part of Water street which it is proposed to pave this year, prefer asphalt, and Alderman McIntyre favored tarvia for residential streets in the north end of the city.

The difficulty about changing the plans now seems to be that money has been borrowed and used under last year's by-law and some of the work done. It was considered doubtful therefore, whether anything else than concrete could be used on the sections named. Aldermen Meyers and McIntyre declared they had no idea that they voted for concrete.

The by-law was produced and read.

Alderman Jones said he does not understand why last years' council passed a by-law binding the 1924 council to construct concrete roads whether it wanted to do so or not.

Alderman Phelan: "With the examples of asphalt we have now I wouldn't favor laying any."

Alderman McIntyre said the city should have a small plant for making repairs to the asphalt paving.

Alderman Phelan moved that the city engineer prepare plans and specifications and call for tenders for the street paving covered by last year's by-law, and also put in a tender himself.

As an amendment, Alderman Fife moved that Smith street, from George to Water be eliminated from the paving programme this year in view of the fact that the property to be charged on that stretch is non-productive. The amendment failed,

SECRET INDICTMENT UNCOVERS RUM RING.

A Prominent Real Estate Man Is Power Behind Big Bootleg Conspiracy —Canadians Involved.

BUFFALO, April 3— (Canadian Press.)—A secret indictment, naming William E. Hedley, prominent Buffalo real estate broker, as the "power" behind organized rum smuggling on the Lake Ontario frontier, was bared by Leland Davis, Assistant Federal Attorney, with Hedley's apprehension yesterday.

His arrest heralds action against nearly a score of Toronto, Rochester, Lockport and Buffalo men who are charged in the Federal bill with aiding and abetting a huge bootleg conspiracy.

The Federal authorities said that further arrests were only a matter of hours. Hedley, Federal officials say, was head of the great rum running ring which operated between Toronto, Olcott Beach and Rochester the greater part of last summer. His operators, officials declare, smuggled Canadian ale and whisky to these points on the American shore in speedy gas cruisers.

CAMPBELLFORD DREAMS OF SECURING CENTRAL HYDRO SYSTEM OFFICE

Business and Administrative Headquarters May Be Moved From Belleville—Inquiries For the Location Have Created Hopes Among Townspeople — Child Welfare Clinic On Wednesday, April 9.

SUNDAY CONCERT.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 3.—At the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last week Secretary Stephens was instructed to write Sir Adam Beck and the Hon. Robert Cooke, M.L.A. for Hastings, inviting them to visit Campbellford with a view to seeing at first hand the advantage of this town as a location for the Hydro offices that are now situated in Belleville. The Belleville building has been sold and new quarters must be found for the Hydro staff.

It is just possible that the ambition of the residents of Campbellford to secure these offices is nearer realisation than the people imagine.

A representative of the Hydro was here recently, and through a well-known real estate dealer negotiated for the purchase of a large business block in the centre of the town, this, if secured, to be used as a home for the Hydro offices in Belleville. A price was set on the property, and the visitor said that the offer would be given consideration.

An obstacle to the sale of the business block referred to has arisen, the owner having decided to withdraw it from the market pending the result of the vote on the O.T.A.

The building is regarded as suitable in every way for the Hydro people. If these offices are eventually moved to Campbellford it will mean the addition of at least 22 families to the town and a large staff of well-paid officials.

Campbellford is now the chief electric centre in the district, and when the two power houses now in process of construction are completed the town's claim for recognition by the Hydro will be strengthened.

Work on Power House.

Work on the new superstructure at the lower dam will soon commence, as the foundation put in by contract is completed. The remainder of the building will be put up by the Hydro instead of by contract, and a large force of workmen will be engaged as soon as the high water subsides.

At the dam further up the river the work on the tail race has been about completed by the Lumsden Engineering Co., Ltd., who had the contract and who carried on all winter.

The Sinclair Company, who have the contract for the tail race at the lower dam, but who were obliged to suspend work early in the season owing to high water, will resume operations with the coming of warm weather. The prospects for well-paid employment in Campbellford during the coming season are excellent.

Child Welfare Clinic.

A child welfare clinic will be held in the Ferris Block, in the room opposite the office of the Water and Light Commission on Wednesday, April 9th, from 2 to 5 p.m. The medical staff of the clinic will consist of the local physicians and Dr. Bell of the Provincial Board of Health.

Mothers are invited to bring their children up to 6 years of age. Each child will be weighed and measured and given a complete examination. Advice and instruction regarding the care and feeding of the baby will be given the mother and defects interfering with the child's development will be pointed out. No treatment will be given. Any child who in the opinion of the physicians requires treatment will be referred to its own family physician for the same.

The aim of the clinic is to promote health and to reduce to a minimum physical or nutritional handicaps.

Band Concert.

By kind permission of Lieut.-Col. F. D. Boggs, M. C., the Northumberland Regiment Band will give a sacred concert in the Regent Theatre on Sunday evening, at 8.30. Major J. M. Bygott, commander of the local company, will occupy the chair. A silver collection will be taken up. The following is the programme:

Firemen had Run.

The firemen had a call about 11 o'clock on Wednesday to a chimney fire at the home of Richard Bush, Raglan street. There was no damage.

Real Estate Transfers.

A. L. Reindeau has sold for Mrs Dan Richardson her residence on Ranney street, to George Ivey, Jr., accountant for the local branch of the Peterborough Cereal Company. Mr. Ivey will take possession of ihs new home at once.

T. L. Diamond has sold the house on John street, belonging to James Cranston, to W. J. Hatton, of the Bell Telephone staff, who will move in about May 30. Mr. Cranston is building a new residence for himself.

Mr. Diamond has also sold to Garnet Curle, Seymour, 75 acres of land, on the 8th concession, West Seymoru, formerly owned by John L. Hay.

A. L. Reindeau, who for some time has been associated in business with T. L. Diamond, has purchased from W. A. Diamond the store now occupied by E. Singer, which he will fit up as an office building and then conduct business alone.

At the Regent.

The regular fortnightly dance of the Twelve O'clock Club will be held in the Regent Theatre to-night, Friday and Saturday, with the usual Saturday matinee; the picture "The White Tiger," with Priscilla Dean in the star part will be shown.

PROVINCIAL PROBE HAS EXTENDED INTO OFFICE OF ROADS DEPARTMENTS

Expert Accountants With Engineers to Give Assistance Are Examining Records of Money Passing From Treasury for Highways Expenditure--Peter Smith Retains Eminent Counsel.

MATTHEWS STILL ABSENT

TORONTO, April 3. Canadian Press. — The provincial probe has extended from the offices of the Ontario Treasury to those of the Highways Department. Expert accountants from the firm of Clarkson, Gordon and Dilworth have been put to work on the books of the Highways Department under instructions from Premier Ferguson and Attorney General Nickle.

For the present this phase of the inquiry is centred on moneys passing from the treasury for highways expenditure. Efforts are being made to find out if any commissions were paid for supplies in connection with road building, chiefly stone and motor trucks. The accounts of the contractors during the past four years are also being made the subject of close scrutiny.

To show the extent of the probe now beginning several well known engineers have been engaged by book keeping experts to act in a consultative capacity.

It is expected that the results of this probe will be given to the public accounts committee of the Legislature before very long.

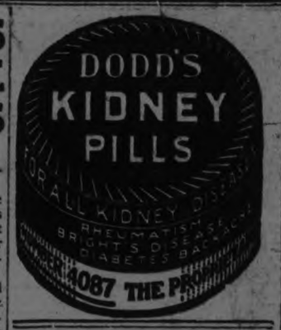
That the task of examining the books on highway construction is huge, may be deduced from the fact that the expenditures for last year came to about four and a half million dollars.

The Dominion grants for road building made to the province are also being checked up as they roughly amount to 20 per cent. of the year's expenditure.

Police officers last night were exceedingly reticent concerning the whereabouts of C. Matthews, suspended assistant provincial treasurer It was stated definitely that he was not in Toronto, but beyond that no information could be obtained. L. C. Mason, his son-in-law, has not yet returned to Toronto from his reported week-end trip. Some assurance, however, was given last night that these two men will not be out of range of the law, when required here.

Lawyers Retained

Legal Counsel, because of the extent to which they have become involved by the evidence of the public accounts committee of the Ontario Legislature, have been retained by Hon. Peter Smith. Provincial Treasurer under U.F.O. and by Charles Matthews suspended Deputy Treasurer. No proceedings had been taken against either party by the Government but the retention of counsel became known following sensational evidence before yesterday's sitting of the public accounts committee. Hon. Peter Smith has retained Peter White K.C., Charles Matthews has retained Seymour Corley, K.C.



P. R. SYSTEM

Multiply Groups.

The tendency of proportional representation would be to multiply groups in the House, said Hon. H. H. Stevens, (Conservative, Vancouver Centre). The members should ask themselves whether it was desirable to change the British Parliamentary system to a group system. The genesis of the British Parliamentary system was that each member was elected to represent the interests of all the people of Canada. He was opposed to the resolution said Mr. Stevens.

Proportional representation and the single transferable vote had been tried in the city of Vancouver for three years, said Mr. Stevens. During that time the voters lost interest in elections and though there were 40,000 names on the list only 8,000 ballots were cast under the last proportional representation election. It took a week to count the ballots and it was necessary to bring in trained accountants to find the results. In June, 1923, proportional representation was rejected by the Vancouver electors by a vote of 3,800 to 1,705. With the result of that plebiscite in view it would be unfair to apply any system of proportional representation to the City of Vancouver.

Makes Government Unstable.

Mr. Stevens argued against the adoption of proportional representation further on the ground that France, Switzerland and Belgium, which had this system, had a less stable government than that of Great Britain. He urged Parliament to consider carefully before it departed from the principles of the British constitution, with the nice balance of power between the King, the House of Lords, or Senate, and the Commons. He pointed moreover to another danger in that those who advocated proportional representation were generally also advocates of the initiative and referendum methods of Government, unsuited to our conditions.

Conservative Opposition.

A. R. McMaster (Liberal, Brome) opened by expressing a wonder why the Conservative party was opposed to these reforms.

Donald Sutherland (Conservative, South Oxford) immediately rose and offered to answer McMaster's question. "It is well known," he said, "that this debate will close at six o'clock. If the hon. gentleman will give me ten minutes,"—(it was then twenty minutes to six).

"In vain is the net set in the sight of any bird," quoted Mr. McMaster in repl yto Mr. Sutherland. He then went on to express an opinion that the reason why the Conservatives were opposed to proportional representation and the single transferable vote was because the Conservatives had never won an election in the country unless there was a division in the Liberal thought of the country.

Proportional representation, he thought, might not be practicable in the rural districts, but it was the only way in which to obtain true representation of every division of political thought. The fact that Toronto had returned only Conservatives and Montreal only Liberals was sufficient proof that the present system did not make for representative government.

Like Cromwells' Time.

He accused Hon. H. H. Stevens of speaking on this subject "very much as the Stuarts talked at the time of Cromwell." It was quite within the bounds of possibility that a minority group in the House should govern, because it represented more nearly than any other party the prevailing public sentiment. This had come to pass in Britain. It might be that Canadian public thought could be no longer represented by two big parties. He did not think proportional representation would make for a multiplicity of parties, but if it did that would be better than having considerable blocks of public opinion unrepresented. At all costs true representation should be obtained.

Freak Legislation.

Donald Sutherland (Conservative, S. Oxford) said he was absolutely opposed to "freak legislation" and the scheme of the "most impractical member of the House," (referring to Mr. Good). He urged that proportional representation would give the Liberals and Progressives an opportunity to back one another up in election and in the House. He quoted the utterances of prominent politicians to support his contention that there was "no difference between Liberals and Progressives."

Mr. Sutherland had not finished his speech when the House was adjourned at 8 o'clock, until this afternoon.

NEWS FROM KEENE AND THE DISTRICT.

Interesting Letter From Florida—Accident While Loading Logs.

KEENE, April 2. — A meeting of the Sunshine and Service Class of the Methodist Sabbath School was held at the home of their teacher, Mrs. Andrew McLauchlin. An item of interest during the programme was the reading of a letter from one of their former classmates, Miss Stella Ellis, written from Vero, Florida, where Miss Ellis is spending some months, describing graphically the delightful trip form Toronto to Florida, and ending with the wish that all the girls could share with her the sunny breezes of the south.

The remainder of the evening was spent in the making of picture books to be sent to three missionaries in the west, who have asked for them, to brighten the lives of their little pupils. Refreshments concluded the evening enjoyed by all.

Alex. Wedlock returned home on Monday from Peterboro where he spent the week end with his grandparents.

David Kempt has been quite ill the past week with the flu.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Ellis motored to Peterboro on Saturday to visit friends.

Dislocated Shoulder.

While loading logs on Tuesday Mr James Richardson had the misfortune to dislocate his shoulder. Mr. Richardson will be laid up for a time with the accident.

"Best Thing in the World For Delicate Girls"

Mrs. John Bennett, Boggy Creek, Man., writes:

"My little girl had organic nervous trouble, could not sleep, had severe headaches and fainting spells. This went on for three years, and three doctors helped her very little. After reading of what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food had done for others, I got some for her. She is now so well that she is like a different child. She is fourteen years old and looks the picture of health.

"We have used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for different members of the family, when recovering from "flu" and scarlet fever, and it has always helped them."

FEELING OLD AT FORTY

You Can Regain Your Vitality by Building up Your Blood.

Middle age comes too soon if you let the cares of life exhaust your blood, leaving you tired and worn out. Women, especially, are apt to neglect their health. All their anxiety is usually for other people. Housework consumes their vitality. They become middle-aged too soon and suffer in the process, merely because their blood is exhausted.

Not so the woman who realizes that the real unselfishness is to preserve her youth as long as she can. She does not cause anxiety to those who love her by being ill or by always having headaches or backaches or a pain in her side. Her blood is kept in good order—rich, red and pure; she is cheerful and active.

The vitality and youthfulness that abundance of good blood gives can all be yours if you like. To make rich, red blood you have only to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You will soon feel the new blood tingling in your veins; your headaches and backaches will go, your appetite will improve; you will be happy yourself and give happiness to others.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

JUDGMENT IN THE RICE LAKE TRIAL

Company Given Nominal Damages of Five Dollars

COBOURG, April 3—Judge Ward has given judgment in a case that is of special interest to residents in Rice Lake district in connection with the action brought by the Rice Lake Fur Company, against Daniel McAllister. The Company is given nominal damages of $5.00. After stating the purpose for wrich the action was brought and dealing with the objection in the written agreement put in by the defendant that the court had no jurisdiction, Judge Ward cited previous actions in proof that the court had jurisdiction. If the defendant had desired to remove the matter into the Surrogate Court the judgment states he should have given his notice of dispute of jurisdiction after he entered his appearance or in his statement of defence. The judgment goes at length into the question of title, location of the disputed properties, the defendant's statement as to where he trapped and the ownership of the property from the Crown patent.

Regarding the adding of the names of Clarence R. Dean and Alfred E. Harris as plainiffs upon application by the plaintiffs, the judgment says:

"As to the question of damage claimed the defendant knew from the pleadings that the actual damages were sustained in April 1923. The Company was not then in existence and the owners of the property at the time were Clarence R. Dean and Alfred E. Harris and Plaintiffs applied to add these as parties' plaintiffs. I do not consider such an amendment necessary, the judgment continues, but under Consolidated Rule 183, in order to secure the advancement of Justice and determining the real matter in dispute, and giving of Justice according to the very right and justice of the case, I allow the application.

The judgment concludes:

"In my opinion the plaintiff company is entitled to a declaration that they are the owners of the two islands at the mouth of the Otonabee River, as shown by the survey made by Mr. F. F. Miller and filed on the trial as exhibit No. 40 of ot 17, Con. A, Township of South Monaghan, shown on the plan of Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald and filed on the trial as aforesaid, and that the defendant is not entitled to hunt and trap muskrats upon the said lands, as long as the proper notices are maintained by the plaintiffs, or their successors in title under the Game and Fisheries Act, and as a consequence of said declaration, that the plaintiff's company is entitled to an injunction restraining the defendant from trespassing upon the said lands and hunting and trapping thereon.

The defendant having admitted trespassing upon the said lands, I think that now that Messrs. Dean and Harris are added as parties' plaintiff, that the plaintiffs are entitled to the sum of $5.00 as damages. No mention was made as to what was the amount of the damage but with the added plintiffs I think the plaintiffs are entitled to nominal damages.

I therefore direct judgment to be entered for the plaintiffs as above set out with costs. Fifteen days stay was allowed.

THE PROVINCE'S PRINTING BILL.

Premier Ferguson has expressed a desire that Ontario's prigting bill shall be materially reduced, and those who have given any thought to the subject will agree that such a reduction is decidedly needed.

A considerable saving has been made in recent years at Ottawa in this department by the elimination of many Government publications and blue books, and a similar cutting down should be possible at Queen's Park.

All Governments seem more or less affected by a mania for turning out tons of printed matter, reports of this, that and the other department or sub-department, masses of statistics, page after page of minute details that nobody reads.

The mails are cluttered up with such volumes which are generally many months out-of-date before they are issued, and the usual destination for most of them is the wastpaper basket.

Government reports and publications should be boiled down to essentials, for a summary would in most cases do the work much more effectively than the issuing of books containing hundreds of pages.

Many of them could be eliminated completely without any public loss, or, to be exact, at a public gain, for the saving effected would be considerable.

Ontario paid $231,000 last year for its official printing.

T... is too much, and the fact that the Federal expen... be for this work has been reduced by $797,000 in five years shows that there is ample room for an improvement at Toronto.

THE TRAGEDY OF CARELESSNESS.

The fact is very sensibly pointed out by the President of the Royal Automobile Club of Canada that every year there must be increased endeavor on the part of "safety first" leagues and other bodies to inculcate in the minds of pedestrians and drivers of vehicles the growing necessity of exercising greater care to prevent accidents, says the Montreal Star. When it is considered that every spring there are thousands of new drivers, and thousands of new citizens, the vital need of augmented educational methods is keenly appreciated. Amazing carelessness is still the principal cause of accidents. Figures show that in a single year twelve thousand persons were killed in the United States by automobiles, that close upon a million were injured, and that want of forethought was the main cause of this slaughter and widespread misery.

Despite all teaching, that curious product, the "joy rider," is in evidence in all other cities. It has been very aptly pointed out that the furious driver is a first cousin of the fool who "rocks the boat." Were such drivers only a menace to themselves there would be precious little to worry about—they would deserve their fate whatever it might be; it is often the case, however, that the man who is careless of others is ever mindful of his own skin. Repeatedly juries in this city have deplored the number of fatal accidents in our thoroughfares and have adopted strong recommendations asking the courts to pass more severe sentences on intoxicated and careless drivers.

While it certainly devolves upon pedestrians to exercise the utmost precaution before crossing streets, they should not be in almost certain peril from an incompetent or furious driver if perchance they happened to be off their guard for a moment. In the mind of a driver there should be ever vividly the fact that he controls a powerful force and that it brings responsibilities. There are very plain laws against furious and careless driving of all kinds of vehicles, but it would appear that they are not very vigorously enforced; perhaps the cause of this may be found in the complaint of the Chief of Police that the police force is still inadequate in numbers. Here is a weakness that certainly should be remedied.

THE GYPSY TRAIL.

How many different towns have you lived it? How many times have you moved from one house to another? How many miles have you traveled since birth?

Most of us find that, as the years slip by, we travel more, move oftener and change jobs more frequently.

Gone are the days when son followed in father's footsteps generation after generation, living in the same town, the same old family homestead, generally the same line of wo rk as his parent.

There are many indications that we are becoming a race of Gypsies—rovers." It is the natural result of better transportation facilities, especially the auto.

Twenty years ago, a man or woman taking a trip of 1,000 miles was the talk of the town. Today one attracts more attention if he doesn't take an occasional long trip than if he does. People move from house to house, city to city, job to job, farm to farm.

Covered wagon days are returning—nearly everyone a pioneer, yearning to be somewhere else, doing something different.

One symptom of our Gypsy tendency is the increasing custom of not building for permanence. Houses used to be built to last forever, if possible. Now they're thrown together. Owners don't care. Most of them expect to move in a few years.

Same with auto ownership—the buyer, when he buys, already is looking ahead to the date when he'll "trade in the old car for a new one."

E. W. Forbes, head of Fogg Art Museum of Harvard, warns that the paintings of some of our modern artists may not last more than 50 years because of the use of inferior canvas or paints. Excellent materials are on the market for the artist, but often he is careless in buying and using. Bad paint, improperly varnished, may fade to a blur instead of lasting centuries like the masterpieces of the old-time painters.

All this is typical of our generation's attitude: "Today's the thing. Let tomorrow take care of itself."

Two definite reasons why we are becoming Gypsy rovers, and do not build for permanence. First, we realize more than ever before that life is merely a journey, a training school or gymnasium for self-improvement.

We view life as a Pullman car—and are quite willing to leave peanut hulls and banana peels behind us.

Then, too, we build only for permanence in big projects like the Panama Canal, because we are busy creating new ideas, processes and devices—and willing to replace repeatedly the material things expressing these ideas, processes and devices. Former generations, for instance, were content to use a horse and buggy and make them last as long as possible. We conceive or build the IDEA of the auto—and that idea is permanent even if individual autos are not.

A WESTERN VIEWPOINT.

The urge behind the construction of the Hudson Bay Railroad is accumulating like a snowball. It is true, as is pointed out by everyone who mentions the Bay Road, that it has been a public matter for forty years and that the case for the building of the road has been pressed more or less consistently ever since. It is true, also, that ten years or more ago a start was made on the road and its completion looked like a matter of only a few months. However, it is safe to say that even at the time that gangs of men were working on the grade running eastward from The Pas and while dredges were scouring out the mouth of the Nelson River and men were unloading supplies from steamers on the shores of the Bay, there was not even at that time as much interest in the road and in its possibilities that there is right at the present moment. It has been borne in upon the people of the West that the route is one of the means of their economic salvation. Conditions on the prairies during the past five or six years have been such that the people have been forced to the conclusion that unless they bring their products nearer to the consuming market, the task of growing agricultural exports at a profit must become more and more difficult. Consequently there has been an agitation for the completion of the road. The agitation has not been confined to a few enthusiasts: it has not been left for one or two men to carry on the battle. The West is interested and determined. Public men of all shades of political opinion and representing every variety of business are serving in the battle line. The daily press, quarreling among themselves on almost every question under the sun have agreed on the point and the service they are rendering to the cause cannot be overestimated. Now it is proposed that an army of politicians, business men, economists and agriculturist should descend upon Ottawa with such overwhelming force that the great end will be attained. It has been proved by senatorial investigation committees, by private research and by historical records that the route is a feasible one; it has been promised by both the great political parties; it is backed up with practical unanimity by the third political party. It is not being proceeded with because interests inimical to the West (or perhaps it would by fairer to say, "biased towards the East") are putting obstacles of every description in the way. The time has come for a showdown. The West wants the Hudson Bay route completed as a national undertaking or it wants to know the reason why.—Saskatoon Progressive.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The C.G.E. bylaw should be carried by a huge majority—and will if the voters realize that it is their duty to express an opinion on this question.

Hon. Peter Smith declares that he knows nothing in regard to the missing $15,000 cheque. He should volunteer to make that statement formally before the Public Accounts Committee.

MRS. MISENER'S ACHES AND PAINS

Vanished After Using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"Branchton, Ont.—"When I wrote to you for help my action was mostly prompted by curiosity. I wondered if I, too, would benefit by your medicine. It was the most profitable action I have ever taken, I heartily assure you, for through its results I am relieved of most of my sufferings. I have taken six boxes of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine, and I can honestly say I have never been so well before. I had suffered from pains and other troubles since I was fifteen years old, and during the 'Great War' I worked on munitions, and, in the heavy lifting which my work called for, I strained myself, causing inflammation from which I suffered untold agony, and I often had to give up and go to bed. I had doctored for years without getting permanent relief, when I started to take your medicines." — Mrs. GOLDWIN MISENER, Branchton, Ont.

Sick and ailing women everywhere in the Dominion should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before they give up hope of recovery. C

WARSAW HIGHWAY NOW OPEN AGAIN

North and South Roads Are Still in Bad Shape—Warsaw News.

WARSAW, April 3.—Since last Wednesday cars and trucks have been running on the Dummer Road Mr. Storm takes the truck with the mail daily.

Wallace Anderson, Chester Hamilton, Joe Miles, Ed. Bell and some others from this district were in Peterboro with syrup on Saturday.

There will not be much to take in next Saturday if this weather keeps up. Everything is frozen solid in the bush.

The snow on Tuesday is good for the fall grains and meadows, which were stripped and looking well. The frost made farmers a little anxious but the snow storm is fortunate. Saturday's thunderstorm was the first of the season, but was not heavy.

Roads running north and south are still very bad some of them are bare with a few very dangerous spots where the beaten, high drifts remain, the boundary though broken is still deep snow, practically all the way from the Dummer Road to Anderson's corner. An odd waggon or sleigh is seen passing, but except the two families who cannot get out without going on it, it is left severly alone and people walk.

Mail carriers are supposed to deliver mail the day it arrives but the condition of the roads, may delay the delivery.

Sunday's church attendance was slim.

The Dummer S. S. Association Executive had to be postponed indefinitely.

Charley Morrison is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Fitz-Patrick.

Glen Crowe went to Belleville, Friday to see his cousin Miss Helen Bowen. Saturday he went to Toronto to join his father, on Mrs. A. L. Davis' farm.

Ed. Moore has bought the old Middleton house and lot.

MONTREAL DETECTIVES

ing every clue and "tip" in an endeavor to trace the gunmen responsible for the holdup. Eight persons were arrested on suspicion, of whom five—three men and two women—are still being held. Three of these are Italians. A number of trunks and suitcases checked in the Windsor Street Station for New York were traced by means of receipts found in the room occupied by the bandit who was shot dead. Some of the suitcases bore labels marked London, Paris, Lausanne, Lyons and Milan. Their contents have not been divulged.

The headquarters of the holdup gang is thought to have been in a rooming-house on Coursol street, St. Henri, a western suburb of this city. According to statements of neighbors, five or six men and several women, attired in the height of fashion and using flashy automobiles used to come there at all hours of the day and night, generally carrying mysterious bundles or parcels. They never mixed with anyone living around them. It was in this rooming-house that detectives arrested a man and a woman on whose persons they found about $6,000.

It is thought that some of the gang made their way to the Mile End railway station, boarding a train for Quebec or Ottawa. A report from the Chief of Police at Terrebonne that four suspicious-looking men had been seen there brought Montreal detectives rushing to the town. When they arrived the birds had flown.

Had Roll of $9,000

One man was arrested yesterday as he stepped out of a cigar store. He was carrying $9,000 or so, but was able to explain satisfactorily how he got the money and why he carried it in his pockets. Another man, well-known to the police, was able to establish a satisfactory alibi and was released.

It was reported that Salvators Rino, at present before the local courts, charged with being one of five gunmen who held up the Chess and Checker Club here on February 14 had expressed willingness to divulge highly important statements in connection with certain suspects. Asked to confirm this rumor, R. L. Calder, K.C., Crown Prosecutor, said that he had not been informed. He will, however, consult with inspector Egen and further investigations will be made from the office of the Assistant Attorney-General in this city.

Dead Bandit's Records

The dead bandit, Harry Stone, was according to police records, arrested fourteen times under twelve aliases in Canada and the United States. It is understood he was linked with one of the largest drug traffickers who left Montreal last year to organize a "service" in Belgium and Germany that would insure a continuous supply of narcotics for the dominion.

At the Coroner's inquest this morning on the bodies of the slain chauffeur and of the bandit, only witnesses as to identity were called and the hearing was put over until Wednesday April 9.

In Calgary Riot

CALGARY, Alta., April 3.—Paul Webster, the bandit killed in Montreal, Tuesday, was well known to the Calgary police. He was identified in the rioting here in 1916 when a local restaurant was raided by soldiers and great damage caused to the interior of the place. The police say that Webster was one of the leaders of the gang and was arrested. He was fined $50 for his part in the rioting and soon after that the military unit to which he was attached left for the east.

SOVIETS BREAK UP CONFERENCE WITH RUMANIA

Demand Plebiscite In Bessarabia Contrary to War Settlement That Gave This Territory to Roumania — Russians Defiant and Threatening

TALK OF RUPTURE.

VIENNA, April 3.— (Canadian Press)—The Russo-Rumanian conference for the settlement of questions pending between the two countries broke up yesterday over the insistence by the Soviet representatives on a plebiscite in Bessarabia to determine the disposition of the territory.

Bessarabia was awarded to Rumania by the Allies as part of the war settlement, but Russia has stoutly opposed Rumanian possession and this has been one of the chief points discussed by the delegates since the conference opend some days ago.

The Rumanian delegates declared that they will leave for Bucharest shortly. Responsibility for the rupture is placed by most observers on the Russians, who were informed beforehand by the Rumanians that they came to Vienna on the assumption that the Bessarabian question would not be raised.

At the request of the Russians the conference was adjourned Wednesday to give them an opportunity to prepare a reply to the Rumanian statement of the case with respect to Bessarabia. This reply charged the Rumanians with falsehood, murder and robbery, and concluded by declaring that while they would absolutely refuse to countenance Rumania's presumption in regarding Bessarabia as a component part of Rumania, they were prepared to discuss jointly, the organization of a Bessarabian plebiscite.

If Rumania declined, the Russians contended she would prove her desire to hold that territory against the will of the people, and must therefore bear the responsibility of a rupture.

The Rumanian delegation answered this by repeating their refusal of a plebiscite, adding that if Russian recognition of greater Rumania did not follow straightaway the Rumanians would return to Bucharest.

Neither side last night expect a resumption of the conference in Vienna.

Wheat Pool Members Paid Better Price.

CALGARY, Alta. April 3.—Members of the Alberta wheat pool will receive more for their 1923 wheat than those outside the pool, according to present indications, S. W. Wood, chairman of the pool, stated Wednesday. He was not prepared to give out any information as to the additional amount pool members will receive.

Mr. Wood emphatically denied that he had told Manitoba farmers that the pool members of Alberta would receive five cents a bushel more for their wheat than farmers outside the pool. This statement was attributed to Mr. Wood while speaking in Manitoba last week in the interests of Manitoba's pool.

SOUND WAVES BEATEN.

LONDON, April 3.—The broadcasting of Big Ben's chimes has shown that the sounds are carried by wireless much quicker than they travel in the ordinary way. People listening to the chimes on their wireless sets in a block of flats near Hampstead Heath find that they hear the notes about 18 seconds earlier than those listening at the open window.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Premier Ferguson May Be Secured to Open the High School,

CAMPBELLFORD, Apr. 3.—When the new high school is completed, and the carpenters and painters are putting the finishing touches on it now, the building will be the chief show place in the town, an institution in which every public-spirited citizen can find a cause for civic pride. The present outlook is that the structure will be ready by the end of the week for the furnishings and that the classrooms will be occupied after the Easter vacation. The building, the members of the Board of Education have been given to understand, will be rated A1 of its class by the Department, and the increased Government grant will be paid to the board this year.

The school has been built with an eye to future expansion of population and the further development of the local, educational system. In the basement are two large rooms, the one ultimately designed for a domestic science and the other for a manual training department. Until these departments are established the rooms will be used by the students who bring their lunches with them to school, and will be comfortably fitted up for that purpose, the girls using the one and the boys the other. At present some of the students who come in by train every morning are obliged to remain in town until 7 p.m., and they have no place in which to find shelter after school is dismissed, except in the basement of the public library. It has been suggested that when the new school is opened that the two rooms referred to be used by the students from a distance.

Appearance of Building

There has been a good deal of criticism of the external appearance of the building, which some regard as being too low, height and size being out of proportion. Whatever ground there may be for this opinion it would be a captious person indeed who could find fault with the interior arrangements and finishings. The building has been planned by an architect who has specialized in that class of structures and who has designed all the leading high schools and collegiate buildings in Ontario, and who has a long established reputation to maintain. T. A. Brown, formerly a Campbellford business man and still regarded as a local citizen, had the contract for the building and from the day the first sod was turned for the foundation no detail of Mr. Brown's work has been challenged either by the supervising architect nor by John Nancarrow, a local builder, who watched the construction on behalf of the Board of Education. Whenever possible, local mechanics were employed. Geo. Dunn, of Campbellford, was head carpenter, and the plumbing, one of the most important parts of the work, was done by Mason and Hawkrigg, also of town. Fred G. Roberts and Company, of Toronto, had the sub-contract for the painting, but a number of local painters were employed.

None but the best material has been used throughout. The floors are hardwood and all the rest of the woodwork is Georgia pine, which presents a handsome appearance. The windows are large and in every room the light will not only be ample but will come from the proper direction to save the eyes of the students. The ventilation system is of the most modern type. The building will be heated with steam, generated by two large boilers, and in every room there is an automatic apparatus which holds the temperature at any degree desired.

There are shower-baths in the two toilet rooms, the water for which is heated by a separate boiler. The building is piped to supply drinking water and modern cups have been provided. It is likely that a well will be sunk on the premises from which to secure a supply of water. At all events the piping has been put in and the system can be easily connected with that of the town when Campbellford pulls itself abreast of other towns and furnishes the residents with drinking water that comes through pipes instead of from wells, and which has been purified by scientific treatment.

Different Departments

The entrance for the girls is on the south and that for the boys on the north side of the building where the larger portion of the playground is located. All the stairways are broad enough to permit easy egress in case of fire and further safety in this regard has been provided in the shape of fire hose on each floor connected with the town system and ready at all times for instant use.

There are six class-rooms, large, well lighted and ventilated, besides the domestic science and the manual training departments already referred to. The office of the principal is on the first floor to the right of the main entrance and this room will be fitted up with furniture in keeping with the building. New desks for the students will be placed in two of the rooms, the other four class-rooms to be fitted up with desks taken from the old building. New desks for the teachers will be put in all the rooms.

On the top floor, in addition to a class-room, there are the chemical, physics and art departments, these three rooms being being already partly furnished. A comfortable room, which will also be used as the library, has been provided for the lady teachers.

The assembly room is a large apartment, and the town will have a place in which to hold public meetings, a place to which the most distinguished educationists and others may be invited without any misgivings as to the accommodation.

Fixing the Ground

The members of the board are talking of disposing of some lots which they own and which adjoin the grounds, the proceeds to be used in fitting up the latter. It has been promposed to unite the co-operation of the public and to give every person so disposed the opportunity of planting a tree, the work to be done at actual cost by experts in the employ of the board. There are a number of citizens who believe that the site should be converted into a park and playgrounds, not for the benefit of any private athletic or sporting organization, but for the use of the people as a whole. There is ample room for a baseball diamond, cricket grounds, lacrosse and other sports, and the place could also be used by the local company of the Northumberland regiment for drilling.

A people's day will be designated later by the board when the public will be invited to call and inspect the new building. The formal opening will be arranged for and the announcement made in a short time. It is planned to invite A. P. Knight, really the first high school teacher Campbellford ever had, and admittedly one of the best; Judge Huycke, of Peterborough, and other prominent citizens who received their secondary training here and who were among the first and most distinguished graduates. An effort will also be made to secure the attendance of Premier Ferguson, present minister of education.

ALNWICK TOWNSHIP COUNCIL

ROSENEATH, Apr. 3. — The regular meeting of the Alnwick Township Council was held in the town hall, Roseneath. Those present were: Reeve Thos. H. Honey and Councillors Wm. Arnold, H. Blodgett, E. T. Shearer, Gordon Parker. The minutes of last meeting were read by the clerk, J. McMillan, and on motion of Councillors Blodgett and Parker, were adopted as read, with the corporate seal attached and signed by the reeve and clerk.

The reeve welcomed The Examiner's press representative. Words of welcome were also expressed by the councillors and clerk.

Communications were read from McLaughlin and Wright in regard to engineering, and from the Ontario Municipal Association, asking for membership to the association, but after discussion it was thought to be of no benefit to this municipality; also from the Ontario Bridge Company; this letter was in regard to a road drag which is not needed by the township for this season, after which communications were fyled.

It was found necessary to borrow an amount of money to cover the incoming bills for this present session, as the balance on hand was $6.59.

Reeve Honey reported on committees which sold timber along the roads, the first piece in front of Wilfrid Carew's and David Yule's farms, which sold for $18. The second piece was the timber bordering on the farm of James Timlin. Councillor Shearer was instructed to dispose of this but he had difficulty, through disagreement of certain parties. Finally, the reeve took it in his own hands to instruct the clerk to give notice and then sell by auction. He offered it for sale and received $15 from James Timlin. Mr. Honey asked the council to sanction him in this work, which they did, complimenting him on the sale.

A discussion arose over the brush at the side of the road near Stoney Creek which is a source of danger to public safety. Councillor Shearer insisted on steps being taken to have it removed. The council was in doubt what steps should be taken as the adjacent land was owned by the Alderville Reserve. A resolution was moved and seconded by Councillors Arnold and Blodgett, that the reeve and Councillor Shearer be a committee to interview the Indian council on cutting brush at Stoney Creek, which was carried.

The reeve appointed Councillors Parker and Arnold to measure plank who reported 1,020 feet.

The following by-law was introduced by the reeve: To appoint overseers of highways, fenceviewers and poundkeepers. Be it enacted by the Municipal Council of the Corporation of the Township of Alnwick. That from and after the 28th day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-four the persons herein after mentioned as overseers of highways, fenceviewers and poundkeepers, for the Municipality of Alnwick be and they are hereby constituted and appointed to fill the said respective offices set forth in the schedule hereunto annexed marked A., B and C., That each of the said officers hereby appointed shall on or before the 28th day of May next after the passing of this by-law make and subscribe the necessary declaration of office and shall continue to hold such office as aforesaid until his or their successor has been duly appointed and qualified or until otherwise relieved by this council and be it further enacted that the schedule A, B and C hereunto annexed shall form and be a part of this by-law.

Pathmasters—Beat 1, Cephas Linton; 2, John Elder; 3, Kyle Brown; 4, Delbert Sherwin; 5, Astin Sherwin; 6, George Herrington; 7, Chas. Fenceviewers—Chas. Down, Wm. Brown, Chas. Sherwin and Thos. McCracken.

Poundkeepers—Andrew Brown, Jos. Timlin and Robt. Graecon.

The by-law received its third reading and was passed signed by the reeve and clerk with the corporate seal attached.

Moved by Councillors Parker and Shearer that the reeve sign orders on the treasurer for following accounts. Carried.

John Braithwaite, breaking roads, $19.81; Thos. Parker, breaking roads, $8; Joseph Linton, breaking roads, $15.25; Harry Cayle, plank, $40.80; Thos. H. Honey, committee work, $3.50; E. T. Shearer, committee work, $3; H. Blodgett, committee work, $1.50; Bruce Parker, breaking roads, $6.25.

Moved and seconded by Councillors Arnold and Blodgett that this council adjourn until 2 p m. the last Saturday of April.

Omemee Church Affairs

Presbyterian Guild, Anglican and Methodist Young People Assemble in Social and Spiritual Activities.

OMEMEE, April 1.—The missonary department had charge of the Guild meeting of the Presbyterian Church, on Monday evening. The President, Mr. Harry Lamb occupied the chair. Miss Eileen Black had charge of the topic and gave a splendid reading on the work of Dr. Mackay as a missionary. Short readings were given by Mrs. Lamb, Miss Evelyn Bland and Mr. Campbell Mackey. It was decided to send for a number of song sheets to be used when occasion called for community singing. A discussion arose as to the advisability of reorganizing the Tuxis Square but on account of the number of boys being few in the congregation, it was decided to leave the matter in the hands of the pastor as regards a communiy organization.

Next Monday will be Literary night and Mr. F. G. Sandy will have charge of the subject.

A.Y.P.A. Debate

A very interesting debate was held at A.Y.P.A. meeting on Monday night the subject under discussion being "Resolved that great events, make great men, not that great men great events." The affirmative was taken by Mr. Horace Hill and Miss Mabel Rowan, while the negative was upheld by Miss Alta Moncrief and Mr Harry Burgess. The subject was well debated and after careful consideration judgment was given in favour of the negative. The judges were Rev. Mr. Weir, Mrs. Fred Bent and Miss Edna Morton. Mr. Jack Bent was time keeper and each speaker was allowed fifteen minutes Rev. Mr. Weir in his criticism of the debate gave many valuable tips to the debaters.

Among the interesting points brought out by the afirmative were, President Wilson, Dr. Banting, the late Lord Kitchener, the late Sir Sam Hughes, Lloyd George, Columbus, etc., while among the points of the winning side were the typewriter, telegraphy, cure of diabetes, process of steel, Isolation of disease germs, James Watt, Geo. Stephenson, X-ray, wireless telephone, etc.

The debate was very interesting to the large gathering of interested listeners.

Next Monday night will be historical night and the Rector and Mrs. Weir will have charge of the service.

Methodist League.

The young people of the Methodist Church met on Monday evening in their regular weekly meeting, the president, Miss L. Parsons, presiding. Following the opening hymn and prayer, the Scripture lesson was read by Miss Marion Rea. A letter of appreciation for flowers sent to her son Gordon was read by the secretary from Mrs. J. Bradley. A splendid piano selection was contributed by Miss Lillian Race, and a short reading on "Church-going" by Miss Jean Sandy. Following another rousing hymn, Mrs. Bushnell gave the following splendid paper, which was much appreciated:

The topic for this evening deals with one of the problems confronting the church to-day, that of the special place of the young people in the church. Their relation to the church naturally falls under four headings: worship, study, training and work, and the church that fails in the development of any one of these, is losing some of its power. Often we find that the church is used by the young people merely as a help in social fellowship, and to these it has lost its greatest value. It is only when the young people appreciate and value it as a great school, teaching first, how to live the life of a Christian, and then how to serve Christ and His cause, that they find themselves in proper relationship to their church.

Christ's first command, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest," which is to say, "Come to me and get your purpose in life fixed and then, go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature. But, it is only by following the first command and devoting part of our life to preparation that we shall be ready to obey the second.

Public Worship.

The first essential in preparation for service is attendance at the public worship. Here, we get our first teachings and impressions of the great Founder of the Church. Here, we are introduced into the realms of holiness and clean living. Here we learn reverence for God and His house and receive inspiration and encouragement to press onward.

The Psalmist seems to have had some such thought when he said, "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord." Can we then afford to stay away or neglect the public worship of God, when it means so much to our spiritual welfare?

The next important factor in our relation to the church is the training we receive in the church. In this training both the Sunday School and Young People's Societies play a very important part. The Sunday School is an outcome of the church and the church is to the world of humanity what salt is to the world of life, a preservative.

As before mentioned, the young people's societies are important training organizations. Their efforts are directed toward the physical, mental and spiritual training of the young and the successful society is one that does not neglect any of these phases of training. A good healthy body is essential to success and therefore all things which would impair the body must be avoided, and such exercise and training as are needed to develop it.

Spiritual Training.

Lastly, we mention the spiritual training and it is not merely we may be able to take part in the exercises of the League that this is so important, but that we may be helpful both in private and public to others. Our relation to the church is the service of love that we owe it. If we have heard the Master's voice, "Come unto me" and have responded our work is the duty that lies nearest. Willingness often leads to success, and so it is in the Master's service, not what we want to do, but what He needs us to do. These small services will soon bring us abundance of work and very speedily swing ajar the gates into a field of greater usefulness.

Interesting Letter From Florida—Accident While Loading Logs.

KEENE, April 2. — A meeting of the Sunshine and Service Class of the Methodist Sabbath School was held at the home of their teacher, Mrs. Andrew McLauchlin. The remainder of the evening was spent in the making of picture books to be sent to three missionaries in the west, who have asked for them, to brighten the lives of their little pupils. Refreshments concluded the evening enjoyed by all.

Alex. Wedlock returned home on Monday from Peterboro where he spent the week end with his grandparents.

HEART'S AFIRE

by May Christie

The Brilliant Novelist of Modern Society

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Prudence Page, a charming country girl, has fallen in love with

Bert Traymore, a fascinating philanderer, who is in no danger of losing his heart over any woman.

Janet Mercer, Prudence's dearest friend, an older woman, plain but clever, is in love with Will Ogilvie. She is masseuse to the delicate child of Mrs. Vansittart, a pleasure-loving woman-of-the-world, owner of Winston Towers, a beautiful summer home, which she fills with visitors.

Virginia Dale, her ward, is a blase beauty, who counts Traymore among her many swains. She is genuinely interested in

Peter Armstrong, a brilliant young inventor, clever and ambitious, who has evinced considerable admiration for Prudence. Virginia finds nothing to admire in the country "chit," as she calls the girl.

Traymore is attempting to convince both Virginia and Prudence of his love, and Prudence is suffering deeply.

In an outburst to her father, Prudence tells him that she is not content with life on the farm.

Meeting Prudence on the road, Peter invites her to visit his laboratory. Prudence tells him of her desire to live a different sort of life, to be something else but a "dull, stupid country maid."

Prudence is mystified at finding Traymore digging at the foot of an elm tree.

CHAPTER XXXV.

The Challenge.

What was Bert doing in the spinney at this hour of the morning?

Odd that Prudence's curiosity should get the better of the pulsing emotion she had experienced at sight of him!

Was he coming towards her? Had he seen her? And what was his mission underneath the tall elm tree?

Why that particular elm? There were others further back from the spinney; indeed, there were other trees all round that spot.

He stood for a moment, hesitant; then, looking down at his suit, started to flick it with his right hand, which he had just freed from a gardening-glove.

Prudence crouched lower behind her screen so that he might not see her.

Let him find her of his own accord. She wouldn't help him. He had behaved—oh, yes, he had!—abominably!

From this angle she could see his face. Now he was taking off his hat and wiping his forehead. His face was red and hot, and his hair disturbed from its usual boot-button smoothness. Queer how she had fancied him an Adonis of good looks! Why, surely his chin was weak? It lacked the square line, the forcefulness, of Peter Armstrong's determined jaw.

And why was he looking around as though he were afraid? She remembered noticing once or twice in the past that Bert's eyes often had an odd look in them—furtive, suspicious.

Janet Mercer had called them "shifty." That, of course, was going too far. It simply was because Bert and Janet had no liking for each other.

Still, his behaviour did seem queer just now.

What did it mean?

What would he say if he came over here and found her? Ought she to rise and show herself? If not, would he accuse her of spying on him?

Traymore solved all these questions by suddenly swinging round again in the direction of the denser woods and making off.

This movement coincided with the clopety-clop of horses' hoofs upon the road. Someone was approaching, and Bert betook himself away in an opposite direction.

The riders were only a couple of farmer's boys. The spell, however, was broken for Prudence, and she came out of her hiding-place at once.

But curiosity still urged her to discover Traymore's mission at the bottom of the elm tree.

Indeed, the whole thing was most mysterious.

Had he a hidden secret in his life?

If it weren't for the fact that his air had been so furtive, his ear attuned to approaching sounds as he stood waiting, listening, his work evidently accomplished, Prudence might have thought that he'd been merely digging primrose-roots, or amusing himself with turning over last year's withered leaves.

Afraid that he might not be far away, however, she slipped out to the open road and proceeded on her delayed journey to the library.

How doubly awkward it would be were she to return now to the wood to investigate the mystery, then raise her head from the bottom of the tree, and maybe find Bert's eyes puon her, furiously indignant at her inquisitiveness, and at the same time suspecting that he himself was the magnet that had drawn her back!

No! That wouldn't do at all. She could come back later.

Or maybe Bert himself would solve the riddle for her.

(Queer how the former agony of pain had gone! Queer how she could look on Bert's face with—if not yet equanimity—a measure of composure, and a freedom from the keen suffering she had recently endured!)

As she walked the highway, head upheld, eyes brave to face the future, her thoughts were back on Peter Armstrong, and their interview in the laboratory.

How kindly he had been! Somehow, he radiated sympathy and understanding.

And—strangest thing of all!—he hadn't seemed at all delighted over the advent of Virginia Dale! If he had once loved Virginia—and Prudence hitherto had thought he had—could he have been so indifferent in his manner towards her now?

It wasn't because she didn't like Virginia that Prudence was glad over this new knowledge. It was . . . because . . . her own opinion, her own feeling toward the young inventor . . . it had changed of late.

"If he had loved Virginia, he would still be suffering. I don't want him to suffer." So she explained the matter to herself, little realizing how inadequate that explanation was, and not knowing the real state of her feelings in the least.

And, again: If Virginia had been the woman he had loved—(and there was some woman in his past)—then I could never think quite the same of him, or of his judgment—because she's so—so obvious!"

Prudence reached her destination, got her books on sweet-pea growing, then walked up the main street of the little country-town, gazing in the shop windows at the new spring fashions. Exhilarating to feel interest in the styles again! If falling in love with Bert had been intoxicating, what comfort there was in falling out of love that had only brought such pain into her life!

"I'm through with romance, and I'm going to be happy, minus love"?

Daringly, imprudently, she flung the challenge to fate, little reckoning that fate has ways and means of making the too-daring pay for such a speech!

STILL ADVISING PETER TO UNLOAD

One Time Provincial Treasurer Shows No Sign of Taking Stand

TORONTO, April 3.—(Canadian Press).—Discussing disclosures before the Public Accounts Committee of the Legislature yesterday, one paper says:

"Friends of Hon. Peter Smith do him a grave disservice in advising him not to come at once voluntarily before the Public Accounts Committee and tell the story of his relations with the Home Bank management. The evidence presented, in documents and by witnesses who can have no object in perjuring themselves, is arousing an ugly feeling throughout the Province. It has been shown that over $112,000 of the funds of the bank contributed for the most part by depositors, whose savings were meagre and hard won, were paid out in the course of two years and a half as commissions to some unknown persons believed by the management to be able to control the Ontario Government bank deposits and direct them to the Home Bank.

"Assuming that money was paid to some one, and that Mr. Smith, as a matter of record, was a visitor to Colonel Mason's office on one or more of the days on which the books of the bank prove payments were made on commission account, it becomes the obvious duty of Mr. Smith to present himself before the Public Accounts Committee and swear that he did not get money or any part of it."

At 80 Years of Age Was Troubled With Shortness of Breath Palpitation of the Heart And Fainting Spells

Mrs. M. O'Connor, Whitestone, Ont., writes:—"I have been troubled, most of my life, with shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart and fainting spells. I was advised by a friend to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which I did, and at once found relief, and I have never had a really bad spell since.

I am 80 years of age and always keep them in the house, and when I feel any symptoms of my old trouble coming on all I have to do is to take a few doses. With the help of your Pills I expect to see many years yet. I always recommend them to any one who is suffering from heart trouble."

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Do not use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can not possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified. Beware of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.

YOUR GARDEN

GARDEN SCHEDULE.

There are a number of crops, such as snap beans, lettuce, radishes and beets which should be planted at intervals throughout the season in order to insure a continuous supply.

But, do not set in the open vegetables such as peppers, squashes, eggplants and peppers until the soil has been thoroughly warmed, because these varieties thrive best in hot or fairly warm weather.

Snap beans can be planted as many as five times during the season.

Remember that late planting or transplanting in the garden gives hardier plants and prolongs the season of usefulness.

Don't take risks in the open too soon. While danger from possible frost exists, make use of your window boxes, hotbed and coldframe. That's what such things are for.

They'll help you beat any tricks Old Man Winter tries to play in the way of unexpected return visit.

The following information, based on the needs of a family of four, will enable the beginner with a small garden to plant correctly:

TURNIPS—Plant 1-2 inch deep; rows one foot apart, plants from 2 to 6 inches apart. About 600 feet is required for family of 4.

TOMATOES — Plant 1-2 inch deep; rows 3 feet apart; plants 3 feet apart. About 90 feet required for family of 4.

LETTUCE—Plant 1-4 inch; rows from 12 to 18 inches apart; plants from 8 to 10 inches apart; plants from 8 to 10 inches apart for heading. Lettuce is a particular food for slugs, birds and pests. Hence great care is required in raising it successfully. About 40 feet required for family of 4.

CARROTS—Plant 1-2 inch deep; rows 12 to 18 inches apart; plants about 2 inches apart. About 60 feet required for family of 4.

RADISHES—Plant 1-2 inch deep; rows of 12 to 18 inches apart; plants one inch or more apart. About 30 feet required for family of 4. Plant every 10 days.

PARSNIPS—Plant 1-4 to 1-2 inch deep; rows 18 inches apart; plants 3 or 4 inches apart. About 45 feet required for family of 4.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

THE RACE

One clown was riding the wooden elephant.

"Hurrah for the elephant!"

"Hurrah for the giraffe!"

The people at the Humpty Dumpty Circus in Doofunny Land got so excited that they couldn't sit still, but stood up and stamped and whistled until it was worse than a baseball game.

One clown was riding the wooden elephant and another one was riding the wooden giraffe, and they were having a race.

One minute the elephant was ahead and the next minute the giraffe would be ahead.

Mr. Fuzz Wuzz, the pipe cleaner man, got so excited that he laid his high silk hat on his seat when he got up to yell, and then sat down on it.

The tin mouse found himself asking his enemy, the patent leather cat, if he didn't think the giraffe was longer winded than the elephant, on account of his neck.

And the patent leather cat forgot that he was hungry, and replied that he didn't know, but the elephant certainly could cover the ground, as his feet were larger.

The judges for the race were the canton-flannel monkey and the Teddy bear.

The bear stood with a watch in one hand and a bell in the other.

"Hurrah for Jumbo!" yelled Nick, for at that minute the elephant was ahead. On turning a corner the big fellow had cut in behind the giraffe and passed him.

Every minute people got more and more excited, and Nancy did a dreadful thing. She was sitting beside the ginger bread man eating a ball of pop-corn, and she went to yell something in the ginger bread man's ear and take a bite of pop-corn. Instead of that she yelled at the ball of pop-corn and bit off the ginger bread man's ear.

But the ginger bread man was so busily watching the race that he never felt it! He never noticed that his ear was gone until the next morning when he went to wash it.

On went the elephant! On went the giraffe! Only a few steps to go to cross the line—and now they were exactly even.

But what did the giraffe do but stretch out his neck straight ahead of him and that put him four feet ahead of the elephant!

"The giraffe wins! Long Neck wins by a neck!" yelled the crowd. "Hurrah!"

But they weren't quite over the line yet, and quick as a wink the elephant stuck out his trunk. And it put him three inches ahead of the giraffe! At that minute they crossed the line and the Teddy Bear rang the bell.

"Hurrah! Hurrah for Jumbo! He won by a nose!" yelled everybody.

LOTS JAZZ MUSIC IN CHURCH ORGAN

Something More to Disturb Bishop Manning of New York.

NEW YORK, April 3. — (United Press).—Musical adjuncts, hitherto unheard of except in movie houses and baser places, will soon screech, resound and roar through the cloisters, alcoves and halls of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, of which Dr. William Norman Guthrie is rector.

Among the various attachments of the new $17,000 organ now being installed there are the xylophone, snare and bass drum, castanets, tambourines, tom-toms, triangles, cymbals, a "Chinese block," a "thunder-roll," a "crash cymbal", and a "grand crash."

Musicians who have seen the specifications for the new organ are wondering what Dr. Guthrie intends to do next. Programmes at his church have recently incurred the displeasure of Bishop Manning.

Wild Man of Woods Died in His Cabin Alone--As He Lived

NANAIMO, B.C., April 3.—(Canadian Press.)—James Davis, 55, recluse, known throughout this district as the "Wild Man of Englishmens' River," died yesterday.

For twenty years he roamed the woods, living virtually a Robinson Crusoe life. A goat and a huge black dog were his constant companions and he shunned human companions.

It is said that for days and weeks he lived on berries and goat's milk and for years the police have been sending provisions to the Davis cabin during his absence. When the police went to his cabin yesterday to aid the man who was reported dying, they were obliged to kill the dog, which fought desperately to keep them away from his master.

The couple were alone in the house, which is a frame building, situated on Cotter street and had only time to snatch some clothing and escape with their lives. The house was utterly destroyed.

GRENFELL LABRADOR MISSION

Harrington Hospital, Canadian Labrador.

In all probability the Grenfell Station in which Canadians are most interested is the one at Harrington Harbour, which serves a coast-line of over 200 miles, and provides the only medical or surgical aid available for over 2,500 French and English-Canadian residents between Natashquan and Blon Sablon, near the Straits of Belle Isle. In addition to these residents on that small portion of Labrador there are also a large number of schoonermen, with families and crew, to whom this mission ministers during the fishing season.

Mal-nutrition is the bane of the Labrador. The nutrition classes established, under the direction of graduate nurses, have proved invaluable in getting babies and undernourished children started on the road to good health. It is impossible to stress this preventive work too much.

Dr. Theo. M. Yates, from Roosevelt Hospital, New York, who took charge at Harrington a year ago, is the right type of man for this work. Not only has he medical and surgical skill, but a big, sympathetic heart and kindly ways. He has the esteem and confidence of the whole north shore. A graduate dentist traveled with Dr. Yates during the summer and rendered valuable service. Dr. Yates writes: "Things are going very well. I am getting to know the people and believe in my heart that I can do them good—I know they have done me good."

Nurse Murray is still on duty at Harrington, having served with this mission for over six years, and completely won the confidence and affection of the coast people. The branches sending bales to Harrington will have pleasant recollections of her appreciative notes of acknowledgement on receipt of same.

Subscriptions will be received by The Examiner or may be sent to Mrs. F. M. Somerville, 16 Inverlea street, Peterborough.

ORGANIZERS OF LABOR UNIONS VISITED CITY

Three Very Interesting Addresses Were Heard By Members of Local Trades and Labour Council Last Night.

OBJECT NEWCOMERS

At the meeting of the Peterboro Trades and Labor Council last evening, in the Labor Hall, three addresses on the present labor situation in Canada were given. The meeting was presided over by Mr. T. McMurray.

The first speaker was John Noble, of the Toronto Branch of the Electric Workers, who gave a very interesting address on immigration. He said that the country is full of unemployed men, but that the government is still bringing in immigrants. Last year four million dollars was spent on immigration, which was practically a total loss, as for every four immigrants that were brought in one Canadian was forced out of the country. He said that he could see no reason why the taxpayers of this country should be forced to pay four million dollars for other men that come in and force Canadians out. These men and their families when they are forced out of Canada go to the other side where a better living can be made than in Canada. A city in Ontario has been boosting patriotism to your country for the past few weeks. Their motto is to stay in Canada and build it up. But, the speaker asked, how are the people to stay in Canada and build it up when the government is bringing in imimgrants. These men must find employment to be able to make a living for themselves and their families if they want to stay in the country. Mr. Noble asked how was it that very few Americans ever left their country and go to others in search of work? Americans can make a higher wage and obtain a better living in their own country than in any other and that is why they stick to their home land. When these immigrants are brought in and they can not find work they have to be kept by the people's money until they do obtain a job. Every city in Canada has its streets littered with the unemployed ,but still they are bringing in immigrants. On Sunday 13 train loads of these work seekers left St. John's for Ontario and the Western Provinces. These people come out here with hardly a cent of money and if they have no friends or relatives to keep them until they get work they practically starve to death, or do some other fellow out of a job because he will work for a lower wage, and thus the pioneers of this country who were born here, and whose parents helped to build up the country is forced out to the other side to supply work for the immigrants.

At the present time the bank managers and other business men think the laborer is getting too much pay, and are trying to cut them down to the same pay that is paid by the farmer. The wage that is being paid by the farmer is between $15 and $25 per month. On this wage any laborer with a family would starve to death.

The Workmen's Compensation Act (which is claimed by the workers to be the best act in the world) a short time ago was threatened with extinction, but through the efforts of the labor men it still remains. If the present workers get behind their labor unions they will not be threatened with any lower wages than they are getting at the present time, and they will make advancements that will be better for themselves and for those who come after.

Mr. E. W. A. O'Dell, a representative of the Shoe Workers' Union, said that a great many of the men think that they are members of the Union and that is all that is needed. Instead of this they should get right into the work and do all in their power to get other fellow workers to join, and help to make it stronger, There are members in the unions and without who jump at the officers at every move they make and say that they are all wrong. As long as this kept up the union will never amount to anything. At a meeting at which the president of the Shoe Manufacturers' Asscoiation was present he said that "your union has now a 90 per cent. organization," but told them not to stop increasing their membership until they had 100 per cent. In Manitoba while the Workers Union is falling away, the manufacturer has stepped in and is now trying to do away with the Compensation Act of that province. Mr. O'Dell said that there were a number of shoe workers in this city, but that not one of them was a member of the Shoe Workers' Union, and that he was sure that they were working for lower pay and longer hours than the shoe workers in other cities where unionism is kept up. The employer of labor has a good deal more respect for a man who is a member of a union than for the one who has to beat about the bush if he wants to get a raise and not let the other fellow know about it.

Should one man who is doing the same work as another get twice as much pay or should they get equal pay? They should get equal pay, said Mr. O'Dell, and this is one of the main reasons for having a union.

John A. Flet, American Federation of Labor representative, said that unions must be built up strong again, as it would not be long before the older members will be passing out and the younger ones will have to fill their positions, and carry on as before. He said that a few years ago in England when a man made an attempt for his rights he was given the name of an agitator, and was tried and convicted, and then shipped out of the country. The trades unions are free institutions. By the work of the unions the working hours have been cut down from 60 hours a week to 44, and the wages have been increased. At present over 50 per cent. of the workers of Canada have an 8 hour day.

In 1919 it was agreed that the printers were to have a 44 hour week but when the time came for this to go into force the workers had to go out on strike to get it. At present there are a number of printers in Toronto who have been on strike now for over two years. The union has been paying these men from $20 to $25 per week for every week that they have been out. In referring to the immigration question, Mr. Flett said that every town in Ontario looked like an incubator for the United States.

The mailmen's situation was brought up, and it was decided upon that a letter should be sent to the Postmaster-General and the Premier, stating that the Labor Council of Peterboro passed a resolution endorsing the postmen's claim for a living wage that a man can more than exist on. During the war these men were not paid as much as the street cleaners although they have to serve a four year apprenticeship before they get on a route and receive maximum pay.

The meeting closed after a vote of thanks had been passed to the speakers for their excellent addresses.

KING'S PROPERTY TO BE RETAINED

New Republic of Greece to Confiscate All That Is Left.

ATHENS, April 3. — (United Press).—The new Government in Greece is about to confiscate all that is left of the estates of the recently evicted Royal Family. On behalf of the King a recent application for permission to sell some private property in Greece was flatly refused. A good deal of this property has already been disposed of, and some of the private Royal effects have been removed to Roumania, but whatever is left will be held by the Republic.

The Government has ordered that no more furniture or property of any kind shall be removed from the Royal Palace. It is understood that these have already been seized and used to furnish the residence of the new President of Greece.

Some of the Royal estates presented to the family by some of the Greek provinces have been returned to the original donors.

THE ART AND STUDY CLUB

A meeting of the Art and Literature Study Club took place on Tuesday evening, at the home of Mrs. J. John, 362 Simcoe street, when there was an appreciative audience of members for an evening devoted to the study of the older Spanish school of art, with especial reference to the paintings of Velasquez and Murillo.

A brief review of the Spanish school of painting preceded the reading of interesting papers on these two great artists, by Mrs. J. John and Mrs. F. A. Hodgson. Although it is said that a history of the Spanish school reveals but few great artists, the short list includes names that rank among the very greatest of the world's masters. Ribera and El Greco were mentioned as examples of this, who are better known now than in their own day.

Until the 15th century, Spain was in posssession of the Moors, and it was not until the time when Spain regained her independence that she had time to devote to the arts of peace.

The study of Velasquez was taken up by Mrs. J. John. Velasquez was one of the greatest of the artists of Spain and one of the most wonderful colorists and realists in Art ever known. Although not acclaimed to a great extent in his own day his vogue has increased in modern times. He was born in Seville and spent most of his left in Madrid, where forty years was spent by him in painting at the Court, where he executed many portraits of Philip and the royal family. Many portraits of the king by Velasquez are still in a state of good preservation, and also many that are forgeries of his work, untouched or merely retouched by his hand. He was an outstanding realist in art, his motto being "Truth, not painting," and this characteristic is noticeable in all his work, and especially in two examples referred to; "The Surrender of Breda" and "The Maids of Honour." Twice he made excursions to Italy and on two occasions was visited in Spain by Rubens, who influenced his work to a certain extent, but not sufficiently to cause him to depart from his own original methods. It is only within the last century that Velasquez has been acclaimed such a great painter, but artists from the world over will now journey to Spain to study his work. The majority of his pictures are displayed in his own country, in the Prado at Madrid.

The study of Murillo was taken up by Mrs. F. A. Hodgson. Murillo was also born in Seville and spent most of his days there. Although he was popular, particularly among the people of the lower and middle classes, during his lifetime, his popularity declined later, and today he is not considered as great an artist as he was adjudged in his own day, although his subjects are always pleasing, charming and interesting, and, while not Puritanical, still are never crude, or rough, or harsh, being in distinct contrast to the realism manifested in the work of Velasquez. Murillo's art was more that of the mystic and was colored by the religion of Spain. He delighted in portraying life-size folk subjects particularly those of peasant children, and was the creator of many beautiful religious paintings. Pictures delineating the youthful history of Christ were a favorite with him, and he took as models for many of these the peasant folk of his native land. He received commissions for religious paintings from many countries, and it was really through Murillo that knowledge and appreciation of Spanish art became widespread. Unlike Velasquez, whose work remained in his own land, Murillo's paintings may be found in many parts of the globe. In Mexico many of the great cathedrals possess examples of his art, and they may be found in Great Britain and in France, where, in the Louvre, hangs his best-known delineation of "The Immaculate Conception" a subject which he painted in different ways. Other favorite subjects were those connected with Christ and St. John, such as "Christ and the Lamb" and "Children of the Shell."

Last night's programme proved extremely interesting to those in attendance. At its conclusion, it was announced that the next, and final, meeting of the season's series of evening devoted to the study of great artists and their work would be held in two weeks' time at the home of Mrs. C. C. Cragg, Rubidge street, when the English school of art will be considered, with special reference to the work of Hogarth, Sir Joshua Reynolds and William Mallard Turner.

MARBLES COMPETE WITH MOVIE SHOW

Boy Confesses to Mayor He Doesn't Know Which to Take—Calls His Worship "John."

This is Johnny Freckleface who calls His Worship Mayor Turner "John" and is wondering whether he will go to a picture show on Saturday or go with all the other boys and girls of the city to where the Mayor will give away marbles and jacks.

Johnny walked into the Mayor's office last night, where His Worship was sitting alone at his desk. "Are you John?", the boy asked.

"Yes."

"Well your brother told me you were going to give away some marbles. Is that right?"

"Yes."

"Well can I have some?"

"Certainly, if you come around with the other boys and girls."

"Oh gee! I want to go to the show."

Johnny is still puzzled as to which he will do, but it's safe to say that there will be enough boys and girls to take away all the 15,000 marbles and all the jacks when Mayor Turner distributes them on Saturday.

"HOME FOR EASTER."

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., April 3. — The Birmingham police recovered a razor from a canal by means of an electric magnet at a spot about 30 yards from where the body of a woman was found with a gash in her throat. Suicide was considered probable but a touch of mystery was adde by the absence of a weapon.

BRITISH HOUSE HAD BIG DEBATE

Army Bill Was Up and House Sat All Night

LONDON, April 3. — (Canadian Press). — The House of Commons rose at 5.20 this morning after sitting all night discussing the Army and Air Force Annual Bill, to which extremists proposed several amendments.

Secretary of War Stephen Walsh stated at the outset that, in view of big changes which the amendments suggested, the Government was unable to accept any of them, but he promised that the Army Council and representatives of the armed forces would investigate all the questions raised.

One of the amendments sought to abolish the death penalty for desertion, cowardice. It was rejected. The next which sought to give the condemned soldier the right to appeal to the civil court, was also lost as was another which proposed giving a soldier the option on enlistment of refusing duty if called to aid the civil power in a trade dispute.

NEW MACHINE GUN.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The Lewis machine gun, famous during the war, is being eclipsed by the new model Browning, which weighs less than 15 pounds, can be fired from the shoulder or the hip, and fires 20 cartridges in less than two and one-half seconds.

PLAY WAS REPEATED.

The bright play, "Martha Made Over," was repeated last evening in the lecture hall of Knox Presbyterian Church, with a packed hall, and many people turned away from the doors. It was decided, on account of the success of the production and the enthusiasm of those attending, to repeat the play next Monday evenig. An innovation last evening was a finale, in which the entire cast joined in singing "Silver Threads Among the Gold."

The story of 'Martha Made Over" deals with a homely and true-to-life situation, portraying the change which takes place in the hard-working, home-centred "Martha" when she goes away from home for a visit, and returns with a changed viewpoint, realizing that her tired, worried life is largely of her own making.

YOUR HEALTH

DR. CLIFFORD ROBINSON

REDUCING.

Many people who are overworked, according to their story, are far more often the victims of worry over their physical condition.

Bodily poisons from bad teeth, infected tonsils and gastro-intestinal trouble may be to blame. Then the fat worry comes and one kind or another of heart trouble appears.

It is a simple matter to remedy this fat worry and improve your general health by the primary adoption of a sensible, satisfying diet with the amount of exercise which your special type may require.

If one can reduce the fat burden by getting rid of useless tissue, which loads up the carrying muscles with undue strain, interferes with normal respiration and drives the heart to greater increased labor, the action would be worth any effort.

You do not have to be on the dot in this weight business. It is no disadvantage to be 10 pounds over the average for your class and age, from 21 to 40. After this period a 10-pound deficiency in weight is more to your advantage than otherwise.

The non-fattening diet is a life process. Never attempt any sudden reduction in weight. Rapid attempts frequently cause great nervous depression with bad effects on both the heart and the nervous system.

Before giving you a full dietary program, I wish to say that if you will carefully follow its prescribed amount in the reduction of energy food and take the proper exercise, no power on earth can avert your reduction in weight.

The simple dietary program will follow this article.

SCIENTIFIC BURGLAR.

PARIS, April 3.—A scientifically constructed burglar's instrument for making false keys to fit any lock has been discovered by the Paris police. It was left in a lock by a burglar who had been disturbed by a watchman. Placed in a lock, the instrument registered on a sliding scale the position and size of every one of the wards which it would be necessary to cut on a blank key to enable it to open the lock.

CONSUL AGAIN AT NEWCASTLE

Controversy Between Britain and United States Settled and Consulate Will Be Re-opened.

LONDON, April 3. — Settlement of the Newcastle consulate dispute between Great Britain and the United States was officially made known last evening when the corespondence between Prime Minister MacDonald and United States Ambassador Kellogg on the subject, was given out.

Great Britain withdraws her charges against the former United States consular officers at Newcastle. Ambassador Kellog's letter briefly states the intention of the United States government to re-open the consulate and appoint W. A. Smith as consul, and asks for the necessary recognition.

Premier MacDonald, in his letter said:

"I have the honor to inform you that after further consideration His Majesty's Government are prepared not to insist upon the charge of exceeding their consular authority, laid about a year and a half ago, against the then American Consul and Vice-Consul at Newcastle, and it has there fore been recalled."

Both the letters are dated April 2.

Ambassator Kellogg, in his letter of reply to Premier MacDonald said: "I am instructed to inform you that it is the intention of my government to re-open the consulate at Newcastle-on-Tyne, and I have the honor to state that Mr. Charles Roy Nasmith has been appointed as Consul of the United States at that post. I beg, therefore to request you to be good enough to take the steps necessary for his recognition in that capacity in case the appointment be found agreeable to His Majesty's Government."

HASTINGS, April 3.— A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Hess, Albert street, at eleven o'clock on Wednesday morning April 2nd 1924, when Eva Isabelle Ellis and Hedley Cecil Whitred son of Mr. and Mrs. George Whitred both of Hastings were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The bride was dressed in a grey silk taffetta trimmed with silver and entered the parlour on the arm of her uncle to the strains of "Lohengrin's wedding march played by Mrs. Roy Watson of Norwood The two little cousins of the bride, Master Errol Hess and Miss Evelyn Watson acted as ring bearers, carrying a silver basket of flowers which contained the wedding ring.

FINAL EFFORT TO SAVE MUIR

Appeal From Sentence of Death Facing Montreal Man Who Was to Hang On Friday.

MONTREAL, April 3. — In a final effort to save Walter Muir of New York, sentenced to be hanged on Friday for the Valleyfield murder of September 23 last, counsel yesterday afternoon filed a notice of appeal from the sentence of death. The appeal is based on the allegation that the indictment against Muir is illegal, "as it adds another count to the count of murder."

Hearing of the appeal will be heard before five judges of the Court of Appeal about the end of the month.

Request is made that the notice of appeal be filed with the registrar of the Court of Appeal and that the Registrar notify the Sheriff so that the execution automatically be stayed.

The Late Vernon McGregor.

Although there has been nothing like the epidemics of previous years the 'flu has been prevalent of late in some homes, and to that of Mr. and Mrs R. H. McGregor, of Haldimand Township, came a great grief when their son, Vernon, passed away of pneumonia, which followed the 'flu. His sister is also ill, and has been confined to her bed for a couple of weeks. Besides this sister and his parents, he is survived also by another sister, Mrs. H. Varcoe, Toronto, and a brother, Clayton, at home.

The Spring Meet at Picton.

A string of horses, belonging to Mr. Robert Weller, of Trenton, in charge of George Powell, was sent to Picton a few days ago to train for the spring meet to be held on May 24th. Dr. D. R. Benson's horses, in charge of Matt. Wilson, are also there.

Bazaar at Coldsprings.

The W.M.S. of the Coldsprings Presbyterian Church held a bazaar and sale last week that was very successfull and well patronized. The many and varied articles offered for sale found ready purchasers. Afterwards, Rev. J. S. Ferguson presided over an interesting programme. A large choir, under the direction of Rev. F. J. Horwood, sang Handel's Hallelujah Chorus, and The Heaven's are Telling, from Haydn's Creation —truly an ambitious programme for a country chorus. Mrs. Kenneth Cruse, Messrs. Wilbert Coles, Douglas Westington and Clifford Manley took solo and trio work. Rev. F. J. Horwood and Mrs. Westington played "Annie Laurie" for an organ solo. The Plainville choir furnished a mixed quartette, and Miss Thompson and Mr. John Grieve gave readings. These members, with two pretty tableaux, made an interesting and enjoyable programme.

New Stage Coach Service.

Mr. William Sabine has inaugurated a new stage coach line between Cobourg and the village of Grafton. Mr. Sabine is the west end garage man in that village. He is making two trips each way daily. The innovation is a great convenience to the ten pupils from Grafton who are attending the Cobourg Collegiate Institute, as they go back and forth between Cobourg and their homes each day. A significant incident in connection with the new line, is that it stops at a hostelry that stands upon the site of the one that was the stopping place of William Weller's famous line of coaches which, many years ago, ran between Hamilton and Montreal. This was before the Grand Trunk Railway was built, and Mr. Weller had the honor of carrying many distinguished passengers. Even then speed was regarded as the big element in catering to the travelling public, and Mr. Weller had stables established every ten miles throughout the route, at which relays of fresh horses were obtained. Weller's line of stage coaches were justly famous in their day but few are left who ever patronized them.

Besides his work for the Century Magazine, he won considerable reputation as an oil painter. He went to Mountainside, N.J., fifteen years ago, and has since maintained his studio at that place. He is survived by three brothers and two sisters —J. Wilmot Gordon, Arthir E. Gordon, Toronto; D. Wight Gordon, Nebraska; Mrs. Mary Gray and Mrs. Kate Crowle, Toronto.

Death of Capt. Fagan.

The Bay of Quinte district has lost a well-known sea-going man in the death at Belleville, at the week-end, of Capt. Fagan. He was well known throughout the district. He was considered a safe and competent officer, and had the distinction of having brought many a vessel safely to port through stormy seas. Capt. Fagan was one of the owners of the Grace M. Filer, a well-known vessel on the lakes. He leaves a widow and three daughters residing in Belleville—Mrs. H. Fenn, Miss Francis and Miss Mildred Fagan. Capt. THE GIRLS ABANDON CORSETS AND DRINK

Startling Indictment of a Wealthy Manufacturer -- Getting Hard-boiled.

NEW YORK, April 3.—(Canadian Press).—Women's suffrage with its attendant heightening of a woman's active interest in politics and worldliness has brought in its wake a flock of evils to mankind, including the abandonment of decorum and corset and the development among young women of heartlessness, brutality and kindred indelicacies, according to A. B. See, wealthy manufacturer, whose views on modern woman gained wadespread publicity in November, 1922, when he refused to aid the building fund of a woman's college. To-day he launched another broadside on the subject in a letter to the Lucy Stone League, which advocates women's retention of their maiden names after marriage. Since the advent of suffrage, he said, women drank more rum and cocktails and smoked more cigarettes than ever before; they walked the streets swaggering with brazen faces; they abandoned their corsets and used more cosmetics than ever before.

"When woman dances with man," he added, "she lolls on his shoulder and tries to sit on his hips."

Young girls, he declared, had become insolent to their parents, heartless and brutal and brazen in their demeanor at school.

POLICE HAVE SET DRAGNET

The Police Now Have Seven Men and Two Women Under Detention Held as Material Witnesses -- Messenger Will Lose Finger.

MONTREAL, April 3. — Canadian Press. — The dragnet thrown out by the police for the perpetrators of Tuesday's sensational hold-up of the collections here of the Bank of Hochelega, in which the bank chauffeur and a bandit were killed, and $142,000 stolen, this morning caught another suspect.

The police now have seven men and two women under detention, being held as material witnesses. Eight men are reported to have taken part in the robbery.

Messenger Loses Finger.

Roland Fortier, the young bank messenger, wounded in the gun battle around the collection car, will lose a finger off his left hand, the bullet having practically severed it.

The police have now completed their check up of the cars used by the bandits. It has been found three were operated, two small sedans and a large touring car. The larger car was abandoned in the north end of the city with the body of the dead bandit. A small car was picked up deserted farther n an the suburbs, at Bordeaux All the cars had been stolen. The indications are that the hold up was committed by a band of foreigners, mostly Italians.

The announcement was made last evening by the management of the Banque D'Hochelaga that they were making arrangements for an impressive funeral service for the late Henri Cleroux, the bank's chauffeur, who was murdered by the bandits in the Tuesday highway robbery.

Search Ottawa.

The attention of the police was turned this morning towards Ottawa in their search for the bandits. A full description of the wanted men has been wired to the police in the capital. The police here have a theory that some of the bandits boarded an Ottawa train at Bordeaux, where one of their cars was found. The police have information that possibly two of the men went to Ottawa

NO BONUS FOR ALBERTA COAL

Says the Fuel Committee After Discussion of London Resolution.

Alberta coal was the principal discussion at last night's Fuel Committee meeting, with Alderman M. McIntyre in the chair. A request was received from London to support a resolution to bonus Alberta coal to the extent of one dollar a ton, but no action was taken by the committee.

Alderman Fife was the first to express disagreement with the proposal.

Mayor Turner asked if there is any reason why Ontario should bonus the Alberta industry. "Alberta would be helping her people by giving more employment to citizens of the Province by bonusing her own industries. In any event if there is a strike there all summer there would be no coal to come out. There is no guarantee that there will be any coal.

"The whole Dominion will benefit by the sale of Alberta coal, but there is no word from the Alberta Province to guarantee a supply of coal or the price of the coal."

While the members of the committee did not object to the Alberta coal they did not approve the proposal to bonus it.

Mayor Turner suggested that the city inform the Premier of Ontario that it will co-operate with the Province in bringing in Alberta coal if the Alberta Government will guarantee the supplying of coal and that the price will be right.

Check Up Wood.

Alderman Fife staunchly fought for a system of checking up wood being vended in the city by dealers to see that the proper measure is being given. He said wood should be sold by the cord and not by the load, and a by-law should be introduced to govern the sale of wood.

The matter was taken under advisement and a by-law will probably be drawn up before the fall season.

INSANE GIRLS RAN BACK INTO BURNING BUILDING

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 3. — (Canadian Press). — Stampeding back into a burning colony house from which they had been led among a score of inmates, two State wards from Rome School for Mental Defectives, died in the midnight fire at Verono Station, near here. The bodies were found in the ruins at daylight, when a check up of the girls sheltered in farm houses showed two missing, identified as Violet Hughes, 19, and Alice Bunton, 21.

Mrs. Laura Peasley, supervisor of the colony house, from which the girls went out days as domestics, checked all her charges after getting them out. As neighbors led scantily-clad girls away several broke and ran into the house.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of The Examiner,—

Dear Sir,—Would you give me a little space in your valuable paper. Just to give to the public my opinion with regard to hens. I have had quite an experience with hens. I don't find any better than the Plymouth Rocks. Take them all around I find them, very good layers and they are about the best table fowl we can get. My hens are extra good layers. They lay the year round. They stop a little while to moult and then into the laying again. Their eggs are so large they run about three pound to the dozen. Some people won't believe this statement of mine. If you go to the Examiner office you can see a sample of those eggs, or call at my home 218 Carlisle avenue, East City, Peterboro'. I just keep twelve hens and one cockeril. They lay as many as eleven eggs per day. Those large eggs are not confined to one egg or two nor a dozen. So you see this is pretty hard to duplicate. There is something in the feed and in the care they get. I find they don't require a very warm place. It is more in the feed and good management than any thing else I know of. The floor of the hen house wants to be thoroughly dry if you have a little short straw to spread over it all the better, especially for the winter and keep the house clean and ventilated.

Your truly,
MR. JAMES MARTIN,
218 Carlisle avenue,
East City.

CITY ENGINEER

and the motion to call for tenders was carried.

Mayor Turner and Alderman Fife moved that the Hydro-Electric Commission be informed of the Council's intention to pave George street from Romaine to Lansdowne streets and asking them if they so desire to move their tracks from Lock to George in order not to interfere with paving operations.

Alderman Turner moved that notice be given the Hydro Electric Co. that paving will be done on Water street north in order that they may pave between the street car tracks.

Commissioner Evans reported that the concrete roadway at the Westclox has been badly cracked by frost resulting from water penetrating under the end of the concrete.

Wants Money's Worth.

Mr. T. Butcher, of Stewart street, said he was charged for sewer connection which was not made. The board was informed that the connection had been overlooked and a motion was passed instructing that it be made.

A protest was made of conditions in the district near Sherbrooke street and Bolivar street caused by surface water.

Walter Hughes who sent this protest said he would take legal action against the city.

Alderman Stocker: "Just the same old story."

Street Commissioner Harry Evans said this is the natural channel of the water.

The objection taken in this case is that a pipe leads the water to Mr. Hughes' lot. Alderman Morrison suggested carrying the pipe down as far as John street, but the matter was left until the annual tour of inspection.

Tree Trimming

The Utilities Commission resolution asking the City Council to take over the tree pruning necessary in the city was again brought up for consideration.

Alderman Stocker said the Board of Works should not expend its appropriation on this work.

Aldermen Turner and Stocker moved that the Commission be informed that the city engineers' department would do the work to increase the effectiveness of the work to increase the effectiveness of the lighting of the commission will pay the expenses.

Alderman Turner said it is illegal for the Bell Telephone Co., or anyone else to touch a city tree, and this was confirmed by an appeal to the by-law covering tree planting and pruning. "If they are destroying the trees," Alderman Turner said, "they should be brought up short."

"Trees interfering with the light of street lamps . . . . may be removed under direction of the city engineer," the by-law reads.

New Dust Settler

Alderman McIntyre suggested that a report should be received from the city engineer on the use of calcium chloride (hydrated lime) for dust settlement instead of oil. The big advantage is that a whole roadway can be done at once and the material is much cleaner than oil.

A lengthy letter was received from Finland boosting a snow melter. In view of the spring-like weather the suggestion was passed up.

The city engineer and the street commissioner were instructed to examine the street at 274 Westcott street, where water gathers.

An offer from F. C. Riddell to supply 82 street name signs on the east side of the river and 587 on the west side was discussed. The city engineer will be instructed to obtain prices on different makes of signs.

Several Petitions

A petition for accommodation for vehicular traffic over the creek at the north end of Centre street was signed by six ratepayers. A report from the city engineer is awaited.

Another petition requested a concrete sidewalk on the north side of Dublin street and the East side of Waterford street to London street. This was held over until all requests for sidewalks are received.

A third petition dealt with Sherbrooke street drainage and was left for inspection.

Alderman Meyers moved that the matter of the caretaking of the sewage disposal plant ground be left to the chairman.

Alderman Stocker moved as an amendment that G. Gillespie be caretaker. The motion carried.

Clean up Sidewalks

Alderman Fife drew attention to the mud and grass projecting on the sidewalks on George street south and lilac trees that overhang the sidewalk on the east side of George street south of Sherbrooke. The street commisioner was instructed to clear the sidewalks.

New Car

The chairman and the city engineer were authorized to obtain a new car for the board of works, trading in the present car.

Alderman Stocker suggested advertising that property owners desiring sidewalk construction or sewer connections must have their applications in the hands of the Board of Works by May 1st.

A QUESTION OF INTERPRETATION

(By Rev. J. J. Black of Burnbrae)

Those who attended the church union discussion for the past two Sundays in St. Andrews' Church, Campbellford, and those who have followed the accounts of the same in the local press find themselves in a dilemma. They are deeply confused by the fact that two reputable ministers of the Presbyterian Church in presenting the case for and against union and starting from the same scriptural basis and from identical tests should move forward to diametrically opposite conclusions. If scriptures can be so handled and texts so expounded that they may mean two things, and these two things quite opposite, it would seem as a matter of simple logic that we can never arrive at any understanding of the mind of God at all either as concerns Church union, or any other consideration of the moral religious life.

I think it should be mentioned (quite apart from any predeliction of mine in connection with the union agitation) in the interests of accurate scriptural interpretation either one or other is mistaken in their exposition of the passage when the conclusions are opposite. I also say to clarify the matters in the minds of my own people, that the interpretation of it by Dr. Crawford Brown, as a spiritual unity of believers through faith in Jesus is accurate and quite unassailable. It is not a worthy use of sacred scriptures to connect this passage of the mystical union of believers with Christ with the movement for organic union. There is only one kind of union in the New Testament and that is the mystical union already mentioned, common alike to Paul and the Gospel of John, which inherited the Pauline influence.

I think it would be more credible to discuss the question on its merits and to recognize frankly the organic union was not contemplated in the New Testament Church. It was not a problem to them. On the other hand to recognize just as frankly that the New Testament Church is not a norm for all time. "I have many things to say unto you but ye cannot hear them now." The illumination of the spirit or His guidance of the Church has not ceased, when Paul and John died. "He abides with us for ever." Organic union is our problem, not Paul's or John's. A 20 century problem, not a 1st Century one, and we can find no support for it in the New Testament except we distort the plain meaning of Scripture to support our prejudice one way or another. I should even go farther and say we do not need any support for it from the New Testament. The spirit of God is still present in His Church and if it is His operation that is guiding the collective mind of the three great denominations towards union, we cannot overthrow it, let hapily we be found to fight even against God.

BELLEVILLE DEPENDS ON OULETTE AND KUHN

Walter Gerow Re-appointed to Manage the Quinte Outfit—Most of Regulars Will Be Back In Line With Several Newcomers

BELLEVILLE, April 3.—The sun shining on both sides of the fence has brought the ball and bat from its hiding place and from now on till the opening on May 21 many will be the comments heard, pro and con, of the Belleville entry in the C.O.B.L. race this year.

Ever since this league started Belleville has always had a team that was in at the finish and likely this year when the records are written, and the season has passed into history, the Quinte City will have its full share of the honors passed around.

A meeting has been held and the president, secretary, treasurer and executive committee, also the manager, appointed for this season.

Hon. Presidents are—Mr. J. D. MacMillan and Mayor Kikel; the president is Chas. E. Hanna; vice-presidents are N. P. North, N. M. Kerr and R. D. Ponton.

Mr. M. P. Duff, President of the C.O.B.L., retired as the chief executive of this club and Chas. Hanna has been elected to the position. Charlie has good executive ability and with the committee chosen the game should not suffer from that end.

Newton Thompson has given whole-heartedly his time for the betterment of the game in Belleville and as secretary-treasurer will be able to look after that end.

The commitete selected—Rev. D. C. Ramsay, Newton Thompson, Stan Hagerman, George Savage, to work with the president—are men who understand the wants and needs of the baseball public and who also know the game. Harmony should be the keynote of the team as it has been in the past with this executive to guide.

The first official act of these officers was to appoint a manager and they chose Walter Gerow, who has guided the destinies of this club for three years on the field. Walter in 1919, was playing first base regularly when his team won the Ontario championship under Tomas Fegg. The next season he unfortunately severely wrenched his shoulder which put him out of active competition and the next year he was given the managership which he has since continually held. Gerow, during his regime has taken the team through to the finals of the Ontario championship once and has been in the play off of the Central League every year. There are few managers of amateur ball in Ontario with that record.

Mistakes have been made, but none are infallible. So let all get behind the team and manager and boost.

The team was dealt a severe blow this spring by Jack Williams taking the jump, but the hole will be be filled and when the umpire says "play ball," the teams around the circuit will find that Belleville is a better balanced team than ever before.

It is understood Oulette and Kuhn will be the mainstay of the team on the mound with Mills again as catcher. Stan Hagerman will act in a utility hole and is capable of subbing as catcher. Harry Mills, Meagher, Weir and Williams will carry the burden of the infield while the old regulars, Ross and Casey will be in the outfield with one or two newcomers to senior company.

TERRY PLEASES GIANT'S LEADER

Bill Terry May Replace George Kelly at First Base — The New York Nationals Fail to Show Favorably in South.

NEW YORK, April 3.—The possibility that Bill Terry, whose sensational play has been one of the few encouraging spots so far this spring on the surface of Giant hopes, may replace the veteran George Kelly at first base, looms in reports from the camp of the National League champions.

Terry, who came from Toledo, is characterized by Manager John McGraw as "the sweetest-looking batter I ever saw step up to the plate," and, coupled with reports that Kelly is off form, observers see prospects of another switch in the club's inner defence."

McGraw frankly admits that his team has not shown up well so far in the south. Hugh McQuillan, he says, is the only pitcher in first class condition, while Frank Frisch and Ross Young also are hitting far below their usual form.

"Our showing this year depends chiefly on the pitchers," he says. "McQuillan is the best now, but Jack Bentley, the big southpaw, has reported weighing 21 pounds less than he did a year ago and should go great. Ryan has had a sore arm and Nehf is starting slowly. But I have high hopes for several youngsters. Maun, the Wichita, Kansas, boy, looks very good, and so does Howard Baldwin, who came from Newark."

McGraw's real finds, however, in his belief, are Terry, Wilson, a Virginia League outfielder, and Fred Lindstrom, semi-pro, infielder, who may step into the breach at third base if Heinie Groh is not in condition to start.

Bowling

EXAMINER LEAGUE

Last night's bowling in the Examiner League at Solomon's Alleys was productive of many surprise. The Directors three straight wins from the Jobbers was an awful shock to the latter engagement. No wonder it was either for it just knocked them right out of the running. And baby talk about another shock! The Proofers, who are the league leaders, received a rude jolt when the Inters, who are the cellar team, knocked 'em for a goal when they took two out of three. The Inters won just shot the Proofers chances of walking away with the league flying. They are now tied with the Directors with only one week to go. The Comps took three straight from the Casters but these games did not affect the standing of either team. The Casters lay, the blame of the three straight losses on their Capt. who did not show up. They claim he would have given them 600 if he had showed up, but they had to be content with 375.

Great rolling featured all around, and as Lou Marsh would say Wow! three wows! and another wow! what scores. Ten men were well over the 500 mark and two over the 600 line. Maurice Dunkley was the high man of the evening with a great score of 614. Dunkley was hitting 'em better than the guy who invented the game and the high score resulted. Gray was next in the limelight with 603 and Sharpe rang up 583. Sharpe had the high single, and it was some peacherino too, for the sorrel topped kid knocked 'em for 275.

Following are the scores:

MAYOR J.J. TURNER PRESENTED MEDALS

De Laval League Winners —Office-Bearers Elected For Season 1924.

Nearly fifty enthusiasts turned out last evening for the special general meeting of the Peterborough and District Junior Football Association in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. Mr. Willis, the President, occupied the chair and was supported by the Executive of last year.

Presented Medals.

Mayor Turner, in presenting the medals, spoke on the vital necessity of clean, healthy, physical development in all sports, and no doubt made the players better men of the highest character; also complimented the Junior Association on the charitable games that were played last year for a senior player who was injured. He handed over the medals to Capt. Ward, who made a suitable reply.

The De Laval players entitled to medals were: A. Frick, J. Ward, D. Grant, J. Cooper, J. Ashmore, J. Haw, N. Bell, M. Strudley, R. Evans, R. Elliott, J. Smith and H. Tulley.

The Juniors receiving the medals participated in most of the games during 1923 season and defeated the C.P.C. in the final game. In the Mayor Taylor Trophy the C.P.C. defeated the De Laval after a very strenuous game.

The medals were of solid silver with gold centres that were highly engraved which gave them a splendid finish. On the back of each the following inscription was block engraved thereon: "P. and D. J. F. A. League Winners 1923."

1924 Officers Elected.

President, Mr. Charles Lloyd; Vice-President, Mr. J. Willis; Secretary, S. Calladine; Treasurer, J. Ball; Executive, W. Williams, E. Millard, H. Chard, E. Abraham and H. Hotston.

Will Not Affiliate.

It was unanimously agreed that the Junior Association shall not affiliate with the senior body or even the Ontario Football Association under any consideration.

Hornsby is Big Hope of Cardinals

HORNSBY AT BAT, O'NEILL CATCHING, WEIR UMPIRE, SNAPPED IN GAME WITH BOSTON BRAVES.

STAR OF ONE-MAN BALL CLUB GOING GREAT IN SPRING TRAINING.

Rogers Hornsby, National League Champion Batsman, Continues His Great Hitting in Exhibition Games in Florida—His Timely Swats Have Enabled the St. Louis Cardinals to Beat Brooklyn, Boston and New York.

BY JOE WILLIAMS.

BRADENTOWN, Fla., April 2.—Being somewhat of a one-man ball club, it inevitably follows that as Rogers Hornsby goes so go the Cardinals.

The thing to do, then, when you visit the camp of the St. Louis Nationals is to watch Mr. Hornsby, the gifted right-hand hitter who again led his league last season with .384.

It is especially the thing to do this spring, since Mr. Hornsby and his manager, Branch Rickey, do little more than smile superficially as they exchange the greetings of the day.

Mr. Hornsby has not forgotten that Rickey soaked him on the whiskers in the clubhouse late last season following a sulphuric dialogue in the course of which Mr. Hornsby intimated that if Rickey could manage a ball club he, Mr. Hornsby, could make a watch with four-brake attachment and baloon tires.

It was later disclosed in the public prints that the two had shaken hands over a banana split and agreed to let bygones be bygones. For once this was not a lot of apple sauce.

Hornsby for Hornsby.

It s happens that Mr. Hornsby is a regular guy, and while he unquestionably would welcome a deal which would carry him elsewhere, preferably to New York, where, as he says, "McGraw would make a regular second baseman out of him" he has no intentions of laying down on the job at St. Louis.

Rickey will get just as much out of Hornsby this year as he ever did, possibly more. Indeed, Hornsby may be more inclined to play for Hornsby this year than for the Cardinals. And if so, he may surpass all his previous individual accomplishments.

Indirectly, of course, the Cardinals would profit thereby. You can prattle all you want to about a "team player," but a man who is out there hitting .400 isn't exactly a handicap.

Hornsby is one of the most remarkable right-hand hitters of all time. This spring he seems already to be hitting in mid-season stride. Brookly has one of the best pitching staffs in the old league but Uncle Robbie's pitchers were unable to get Hornsby out in an exhibition game here.

Later, at Sarsota, John McGraw sent his first-string pitchers against the Cardinals and Mr. Hornsby tore them to shreds with a devastating bat fire.

Cards' Weak Spots.

Rickey hasn't nothing to worry about his headliner. It's his catching staff and the right side of his infield that should demand his concern. With Eddie Ainsmith gone Rickey probably has the worst catching staff in the league. At present Tubby Clemons is rated as his first-string catcher. Tubby is merely a good Democrat who writes to the the home folks regularly.

Rickey is using Bell, a Houston rookie, at third in place of the veteran Stock who is a holdout, and Freigau, an Ohio collegian who was with the team last year, at short. Old Doc Lavan is the reserve. Whether Bell and Freigau will measure up remains to be seen.

The outfield is unchanged, likewise the pitching staff; with the exception of Sothoron, who was pulled back from Louisville, presumably to show the boys how to wear the Ascot scar correctly.

The Nut Cracker
by Joe Williams

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., April 3.—Christy Mathewson, who is here with his Braves, insist baseball is faster than it ever was. Judging by divorce records, or what?

Mr. Casey Stengel wishes to deny the report that his legs have gone back on him. "As a matter of fact" states the indolent Mr. Stengel, "they have not stirred in any direction whatever since the world series.

One of the native sat in the stand watching Stuffy McInnes do his stuff at first base, pulling down high ones from the blue, and digging low ones out of the sandy loam.

"That baby can catch anything," was his comment.

"Well, you better keep him away from the hospital then," added a solicitous neighbor."

The well-known Mr. O'Goofty is not at all surprised to hear that Senor Firpo wishes to become an actor.

"I always suspected there was some ham in him," declares One Punch person.

THAT'S WHAT THEY GO THERE FOR.

We stood in the shade of a royal palm watching a strenuous struggle of checkers between two white-bearded octogenarians. The fortunes of war changed constantly as drive and counter drive were launched with great ferocity against the two king rows. Presently the 87-year-old battler from Indiana scored a win and his opponent retired to the side lines for treatment.

Fixing us with a confident, challenging gaze, the exultant victor demanded: "Well, sit in, sonny, and see what you can do."

We replied we did not play checkers.

"Well, what the Heck are you doing down here in Florida then?"

"There's one thing you can say about our ball club," confides Dave Bancroft. "None of us is personally acquainted with Mr. Daugherty."

Old Dick Rudolph is working out with the Braves again and he doesn't look a bit different than he did when we saw him last at Valley Forge with Washington's squad.

McTIGUE'S ARM SWOLLEN.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Mike McTigue, world's light heavyweight champion, is suffering from an injured left hand and arm as a result of his match Monday night with Young Stribling, Georgia schoolboy, at Newark, it became known to-day.

McTigue's arm is swollen twice its natural size and there is evidence of a possible fracture of the hand, according to Dr. S. L. Meylackson, who examined the titleholder. According to Paddy Mullins, manager of McTigue, the injury occurred in the sixth round of the bout, in which Stribling was a decisive victor.

BELMONT TOURNAMENT IN FULL SWING LAST NIGHT

Last night at Solomon's Alleys, the Belmont Club Tournament was in full swing. Over 45 bowlers were in action and great enjoyment was the result. There was a good crowd of fans on hand to watch the players in action and like the players, they derived a great amount of enjoyment out of the clashes. Some of the bowlers were eleminated from the tournament last night, but there are still thirty left to bowl it out next Wednesday.

FOR THE GOLF LINKS

By "THE STROLLER."

NEW YORK, March 29.—(United Press).—"In the spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of—his golf score. And so does the fancy of the not-so-young man. He whose ears have become cauliflowered throughout the winter through intimacy with radio headphones, or whose disposition has become soured through none too successful communions with the goddess of luck in poker games, now starts brushing up on the great pastime of chasing a harmless, little ball all over the landscape.

What to wear on the golf links is a matter of personal choice. Some fans prefer the oldest, slouchiest outfit in the clothes closet. Others feel that their game must be improved due to the fact that they are wearing the latest sport models from Hammacher, Schlemmer & Co.'s expensive stocks. Some fellows' scores could be improved only by supernatural intervention—but that's a nasty crack that has no place in a discussion of what's what in the clothes line for X-country chases in pursuit of a perfect "eighty."

One advantage of the golf suit is that the purchaser is provided with both regulation trousers and golf knickers. This is obviously intended for those who consistently "swear off" golf after a dub periormance. It offers them a possible consolation in the knowledge that their hard-earned cash wasn't entirely thrown to the winds when they bought that sport suit.

* * *

The sport models displayed thus far have differed in no important particular from those worn during the last open season. Tweeds and cheviots are the thing and light greys and browns are the colors. Of course, here and there one will find a light green.

Some suits have four pieces—coat, vest and two pairs of trousers; others eliminate the vest. The latter are more adaptable for summer wear, though, and it is with climatic conditions in mind that the "weskit" is eliminated. Most of the golf suits now shown in men's clothing shops are made good and roomy in the back. Around the shoulders especially is this true. They are made to give plenty of "swinging room," the pleating in the back being so devised that it "gives" when the arms are raised at the completion of a stroke at the ball. The coat has all the elasticity of a sweater, thanks to this important feature.

Of course, there are a great many sport suits, the coat of which is cut like an ordinary sack suit, with no "pinching" in the back. These sport suits are mainly designed for town wear, and it is advisable to discard the coat and don a sweater for a tour around the links.

* * *

Pockets are huge affairs again, for the secretion of such commodities as are essential to a perfect golfing day. Why, certainly, there is a hip pocket and, although no Congressional investigation has been made, it is suspected that the hip pocket can be forced to contain more than a handkerchief.

Golf stockings both murmur and shriek. Saw some good looking ones the other day in grey plaid. If the golf knickers are to be tucked into the stockings, then the stockings have the fold at the top. If the trousers have the band at the bottom, the plain, ribbed wool stockings are d'accord. Shoes with felt soles are enjoying great popularity, although, naturally, they bring a better price than the ordinary heavy walking shoes.

A prominent sporting goods concern boasts that the psychological reaction due to wearing one of their golf suits is lopping off at least a half dozen strokes from the wearer's score. We're from Missouri—also from New York. We'll trying anything once. Let's go.

WOMAN CHAMPION SE EKS TO WIN BRITISH TITLE.

EDITH CUMMINGS.

The United States will be well represented in the coming woman's British golf championship.

Edith Cummings, who holds the American title, has positively announced her intention to compete.

Miss Cummings has been playing on the coast the greater part of the winter and is close to the peak of her game.

Recently in one of the big California tournaments she avenged her defeat of earlier in the season at the hands of Marion Hollins, by defeating the former title holder in fairly easy fashion.

MASON FAILED TO REACH FRANK ASH

Bout Stopped at End of Six and a Half Rounds—Fans Disappointed.

TORONTO, April. 3.—(Canadian Press.) — Frankie Mason, of Fort Wayne, failed to show anything like his old time form in the main bout of last night's show at the coliseum against Frankie Ash of England, who is billed as the successor of the great Jimmie Wilde, and Referee Lou Marsh stopped the engagement after six and a half of the scheduled ten rounds had been covered. The disappointing showing of Mason spoiled the show to a great extent as the fans were unable to get much of a line on Ash, who is to meet Pancho Villa here in a couple of weeks.

Ash did all the leading and had his left jabbing away at Mason's face all the time and he frequently called his right into action. But he hasn't the punching ability of Wilde or Villa or else the bout would have terminated earlier and without the referee's intervention. Ash can in no way be blamed for the affair as he was trying all the time and did everything he possibly could do to give the crowd a real battle, but Mason was unable to hold up his end of the argument.

Referee Marsh urged Mason on several times and between the fifth and sixth rounds visited each corner and the opening of the sixth was more spirited than any of the others, but Mason soon fell back into a receptive mood and half way through the seventh he was sent to his corner and Ash indicated as victor. After the bout Mason took off his bandages and showed his right hand that appeared to be swollen.

OTONABEE CHAPTER HELD A SUCCESSFUL MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., was held yesterday in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A.

The Regent, Mrs. H. Stenson, presided. Miss Burgess was present, and gave a splendid account of her holiday trip to Europe last year, with special reference to her visit in Scotland and England.

A letter was read from Dr. A. J. Vining, Toronto, thanking the Chapter for co-operating with the 57th Regimental Chapter in adopting an Armenian boy. This child has been named Gregory King, the Anglicised version of his own name.

Mrs. Arthur Robinson was appointed delegate of the Chapter to the Hamilton Provincial Conference, to be held at the beginning of May.

At the conclusion of the business session, refreshments were served.

BREAKS SILENCE TO DENY CHARGE

Hon. Peter Smith Has Decided on Policy of Reticence, But Says He Firmly Denies Implications.

STRATFORD, April 3.—(Canadian Press.) — Hon. Peter Smith, Provincial Treasurer under the Drury government, against whom have been cast serious reflections by witnesses before the Public Accounts committee in regard to Department dealings with the defunct Home Bank, has decided upon a policy of silence for the time being. When interviewed in Stratford today he intimated that he had nothing to hide but thought it wiser at the present time to keep his counsel. "I can only firmly deny the implications," said Hon. Peter.

Mr. Smith pointed out that he had already denied that any influence had been used on him to secure deposits of Provincial money in the Home Bank. When questioned on the more recent inference that he had made some visits to the general manager of the Home Bank, the late J. C. Mason, and had been present when a mysterious envelope of money was brought in by J. W. Whittaker, a Home Bank employee, to Col. Mason, he declined to answer directly at the present time. The inference that this was money for keeping the Provincial account in the Home Bank was covered by Mr. Smith in his general denial.

LICENSE STUDENT... DESPITE CHARGES

Private Bills Committee Hears That Matriculation Papers Were Forged--No Evidence of Medical Education.

TORONTO, April 3.—(Canadian Press).—Following the introduction of a bill by the Hon. Dr. Jamieson to the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature this morning to authorize Joseph P. Savage, of Oakville, to practice medicine and surgery in Ontario came a charge by Dr. E. E. King, of the Medical Council, who opposed it, that the matriculation papers of the applicant had been forged in 1904 when he presented them for admittance to the University of Toronto.

I. B. Lucas, representing Savage, said his client had failed in Greek, algebra and mathematics for matriculation, but held that matriculation was not essential as long as the students passed the examination of the Council of Medicine. He charged that the action on the part of the Council was nothing less than blackmail. The figures in the papers were "forged not by my client. They were altered when in the hands of the Medical Council. It was an easy way to get rid of persistent applications on the part of my client."

"The figures on the alleged forgery show that he passed his matriculation in 1904. If that was admitted by my client why would he again try his matriculation on three subjects on which he failed in 1905 and 1906, and again in 1906, if the papers were forged?"

E. R. Wigle (Centre Huron) stated that the Medical Council was too autocratic and not the friend of the student. The papers that Savage had failed in were not essential to medical practice.

A representative from the Faculty of Medicine of the University gave the figures of the examinations tried by Mr. Savage, and declared he could submit no evidence that he had a medical education.

The committee, however, passed the bill by a large majority.

MARKET NOTES IN PETERBORO AND DISTRICT

Innovation is Central Egg Grading Bureau--Dairy Prices on Toboggan -- Synthetic Oysters.

IN GRAIN MARKET

An innovation in the city that will doubtless be welcomed by merchants who have been harassed by egg-grading regulations is establishment at a central point by a well-known local concern of a grading bureau, where eggs may be taken and graded at a nominal cost. The advantage of this system is the service avaliable of a grading expert, who can give his entire time and attention to the work For the ordinary retail grocer to sit down and attempt to grade eggs properly means that he must devote a long time to the work, if it is to be done thoroughly, with a consequent disorganization of his business and increased expense to the ultimate consumer, or else a negligent examination will be made that is calculated to nullify the intentions of the legislation regarding egg grading.

Prices for dairy produce are described in large Ontario and Quebec points as being "on the tobaggan," with the demand only "from hand to mouth," a very descriptive phrase. The market in butter is weak generally under large supplies. Locally prices have decreased several cents on the pound for both creamery and dairy, during the past few weeks. Eggs, also, in their various ramifications, are low-priced. The law of supply and demand, which usually sends egg prices up during the heavy Lenten consumption season, has been set aside this year by reason of the heavy shipments into Ontario of American eggs. However, during the last week shipments from across the border have fallen off, but egg production in domestic markets is increasing, and the putting on the market of large supplies held up on account of bad road conditions has had a tendency to keep the price down.

The cheese market is characterized as "unsatisfactory." Cheese dealers generally are waiting for the new make, which starts to come in about the middle of April. In Montreal alone, over $400,000 worth of cheese, in which, it is said, much United States capital is involved, is tied up. Operators in cheese made a handsome turnover last spring in Quebec markets, but their fall venture proved a disaster from a financial standpoint. Cheese purchased by them last fall, costing well over twenty cents per pound, now has practically no market and remains stored in warehouses. The British market, on which the operators relied for unloading, is practically flooded with cheese, mostly from New Zealand, laid down there at prices too low for Canadian competition. The new Canadian make, coming in soon, will glut the market still further, although a smaller make than usual is anticipated this spring, on account of very low prices prevailing for cheese as compared with butter prices, and also because of the high prices offered for cream, "increasingly large quantities of which," says the Canadian Grocer, "are being shipped from Quebec and Ontario points at fancy prices." An added worry to the holders of large unsold stocks is the depreciation in weight suffered by the product, which is estimated to shrink anywhere from four to six pounds in a ninety-seven pound cheese, unless paraffined. This difficulty is offset slightly by the increased prices obtainable for the older variety.

Honey prices remain unchanged. An interesting innovation planned some months ago by the Beekeepers' Association of Peterboro County was later rendered impossible by restrictive legislation/ The local Association intended to bring into this district three or four carloads of bees in full colonies from the Southern States, instead of, as formerly, bringing them in to Canada in packages or nuclei. Legislation recently enacted forbidding such action, on acount of the danger of importing the dread foul brood with the colonies, rendered this plan inoperative.

The sugar market is described as "easy" with a weak inclination, owing to the rapidly accumulating stocks of raw and poor demand for refined product. The United Kingdom, says a trade journal, has ceased for the time being as heavy buyer of raws, probably anticipating a reduction in duty, which at present is about five cents per pound.

Prices on live hogs have decreased slightly recently, but the dressed variety has advanced in price. In the grain markets, the latest arrival is alfalfa, with buying price of $13 a bushel. For alfalfa grown in Peel County, "the home of alfalfa," Number One grade retails at $15 a bushel, while the Number One Northern from the United States is priced at $14. Number One red clover seed is $15 a bushel and alsike of the same quality is $7.50. A miniature war in local buying circles recently sent the price of fall wheat up to $1.10 a bushel.

A recent regulation of the Government with regard to seeding appears to be about to develop into the unfortunate position of an object which attains to such rigid perfection that it is unable to stand the strain and collapses completely. Extremely stiff rules promulgated last year, in the hope that the results would show themselves in a splendid quality of Canadian grain have made the Number One type of seed so very good and therefore so very expensive that the farmers are not buying it, but are resorting to the expedient, it is said, of exchanging ungraded seed among themselves, with the consequence that as much of the lower grades of seed are being sown as of the high grade. Another factor in the poor seed situation is the complaint from European markets, who have been for years in their sheep pastures, a refuge for poorer grades of practically uncleaned Canadian seed. Now, the European pastures are becoming so over-run with weeds that their owners are protesting against a continuance of the practice.

In this weed connection, an interesting illustration of difference in point of view is given. A writer in an Ottawa paper last year used up considerable ink and turned out a really very fine article, that occupied itself mainly, in poetical language, with the beauties of the purple vetch. And the vetch is listed in the grain-man's illustrated book of harmful weeds as one of the pests of the farmer. The bladder campion is another instance; that rather delicate, pretty flower that the children love to find for their wild bouquets. "One of the worst plants in Canada" is the way the devout grain-dealer describes this innocent-looking member of the flower and weed family. In this interesting volume are pictures of many of these agricultural thorns; the hated ribgrass or "buckhorn," as it is popularly known, that looks like wild timothy, and has a resplendent Latin name in "plantago lanceolata"; the "silene noctiflora," or night-flowering catchfly, that is so destructive to alsike; the "Lychnis alba," or white cockle; and all the rest of the great weed family, that includes such queer names as fumitory and vervain, dock and yarrow and the Biblical tare, the chess and the stinkweed, the dodder and the lady's thumb and the sowthistle, the toadflax and the green foxtail. Greatly enlarged views of the seeds of these unwanted members show peculiar formations, the cockle with its many burrs; the field Cromwell, with its centipede shape; and the catnip seed, with its two queer little light dots at the top, exactly like cat's eyes.

From the vegetable reports comes a note of shortage in lima bean holdings. Lovers of the big, flat specimens of the bean family, which have had an increasing popularity in recent years, will regret that, unless heavy rains come to the relief of the California growers during this month, the total production this year will scarcely equal the tonnage normally purchased by the city of New York alone.

An optimistic note in fish circles is the declaration that business this season has been better than in any year since war time. April being the last month boasting of an "r" in its make-up, brings the oyster season to a close for a time. From the other side of the border comes a report of a process recently devised for increasing the oyster crop by the manufacture of "synthetic" bivalves, by means of artificial fertilization which is designed to fertilize ninety per cent. of the eggs. Nature's method at present produces fertilization in only one egg in a million, and of this result, only one in about a hundred million grows up to be an oyster.

An aristocratic arrival in tea circles this week in Peterboro was some real "Ming Cha," handled by one of the large retail grocers of the city. In handsome little blue and gold packets of half a pound, that retail at 97 cents apiece, this tea is said to be the real, pale yellow, fragrant potion so loved by the Chinese, who declare that our system of adding sugar and cream to the beverage spoils the natural aroma of the drink. This tea is especially designed for exclusive afternoon affairs.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL

LEATRICE JOY STARTED AS STAR, THEN BEGAN AGAIN AS EXTRA.

Star of "Minnie" Won Beauty Contest—Yet Hides in Homely Guise For New Triumph.

Can you imagine a girl who entered motion pictures by winning a beauty contest becoming the most homely girl in a screen play? Yet this is true of Leatrice Joy who is "Minnie" in Marshall Neilan's production of that name, now showing at the Royal Theatre.

In other pictures Miss Joy has always worn clothes that helped to make her beauty stand out on the screen. But now it is like camouflaging a diamond to make it look like glass. Yet when such is the case you can always scrape away the covering and bring forth the diamond. That was Marshall Neilan's thought when he signed Miss Joy to be one of the principal players in "Minnie."

Leatrice did her job so well, however, that very few would guess she was Leatrice Joy, the beauty, were it not for the fact that her name appears on the screen. When the picture opens Leatrice's beauty has vanished completely. Gone are the bright sparkling eyes; gone the radiant coiffure, the daintily shod feet, the gorgeous gowns with easily flowing lines, the aristocratic poise of head, the pleasant outline of lips, the soft hue of delicate cared for skin. No longer do we see Leatrice Joy, the sparkling beauty, but Minnie, poor homely Minnie; the drudge, the slavey of a small town hotel owned by her father. Her heart is craving for a beau, like the other girls have. And she gives a remarkable performance.

Miss Joy was born in New Orleans and was educated at the Sacred Heart Academy there. A small organization looking for publicity, and having the hope that it might obtain a leading lady, started a beauty contest. Miss Joy outstripped all competitors. She went westward with the company which went on the rocks in California. By this time acting was in her blood. She joined the San Diego stock company and remained there for nine months. But beauty such as hers goes ever screenward.

Leaving Los Angeles she went to New York to begin again as an extra, though she had been leading lady. In fact, Leatrice needed a job so that she could eat. One who is wise does not starve while waiting to become a leading lady. She lived in a boarding-house in Eighty-Fifth Street with her mother and little brother. This fact is important to her new picture, "Minnie," because in this boarding house she met, sympathized with and became attached to a typical slavey who went to the actress with her many trials and tribulations. Miss Joy admits that she had this girl in mind all the time she was playing the part of Minnie in this new First National release.

Miss Joy did not have to wait long for "bits and then important parts and soon leads. She played opposite William Farnum in "The Man Hunter," then in "Just a Wife," "Ladies Must Live," "The Right of Way," "Down Home," "Bunty Pulls the Strings" and many others.

Of course, Miss Joy gives to Marshall Neilan most of the credit for her consistent performance in "Minnie." And Neilan on his part praises Miss Joy for the intelligent manner in which she carried out his ideas of "Minnie." Neilan is a smart director, after showing you the homely Minnie for nearly seven reels of real life and happy humor he brings Miss Joy forth as her self. It impresses one with the lengths to which Miss Joy went to be the homely, awkward, heartbroken Minnie.

AT THE CAPITOL

BIG DANCE TRIO IS VAUDEVILLE AT CAPITOL TODAY

Following their policy of carefully selecting their vaudeville acts the Capitol theatre has booked Thatcher, Devereaux and Adams in their big time act "A Peach and a Pair" for the last three days of this week. "A Peach and a Pair" is a snappy singing and dancing act and is certain to be liked. Many excellent acts have been booked ahead by the Capitol and vaudeville lovers will shortly see some excellent bills at the Capitol.

RICHARD DIX FEATURED IN "ICEBOUND" AT CAPITOL

In an old family Bible used by William de Mille in his production of "Icebound" is a photograph of a handsome boy of about five and a half years old. The picture is really that of Richard Dix when he was a youngster, and plays an important part in the development of the story.

"I had all the confidence in the world then," said the popular leading man, as he smiled at the picture. "I had two choices for a profession—to be a street car conductor or a preacher.

"I used to get up and declaim whenever I could find an audience, using the back of a chair for my pulpit. My congregation consisted of my mother, my Aunt May and Aunt Carey, and after announcing that we would 'sing Number 24' I would use as my text the following: 'if a man wants to do it, let him do it; if he doesn't want to do it, don't make him.' Sometimes my Aunt May would laugh and I would cry out to my mother that she was laughing at me. Then I would step down from my pulpit and refuse to preach for the rest of the day."

Dix plays the role of Ben Jordan, the youth who was raised on the farmlands of New England, got a glimpse of warmth and joyousness during the war in France and returned to the Jordan home a rebel against the cheerless and restricted life. He finds the people about him "icebound" in their natures and cannot return to the routine of his former existence. He leaves home under a cloud, returning after his mother's death and knowing that he faces arrest.

Lois Wilson is featured with Dix in "Icebound" at the Capitol Thursday, Friday and Saturday. It's a picturization of the immensely popular stage play of the same name.

LARRY SEMON IN NEW COMEDY AT CAPITOL TODAY

Larry Semon is at the Capitol theatre today, Friday and Saturday in his newest comedy "Trouble Brewing." Laughter lovers who remember Larry's last comedy will not miss this one, his latest and his best yet.

AT THE REGENT

1007 BEAUTIES ENHANCE NATURE IN FOX PICTURE.

"The Temple of Venus" is Set on Santa Cruz Island in Pacific.

Spectacles in the movies have become so general that neither public nor reviewer find them extraordinary as a general thing, but now and then one comes along that is different. Spectacles, in the movie sense, usually mean huge crowds, enormous sets, costly equipment and elaborate costumes. But, in the William Fox production of "The Temple of Venus," the spectacle is one of nature, some of it unadorned, some more or less adorned in bewitching bathing costumes. The picture opens a 3-day run at the Regent to-night.

In order to get the beauty of Nature unadorned, Director Henry Otto took his cast to Santa Cruz Island, where he filmed the splendor of the grottoes and the winding beach, the verdure of the little gem in the Pacific and the magnificence of the rolling ocean beyond. Then, he adorned a thousand west coast bathing beauties in the prettiest little costumes to be found. The adjective "little" is used advisedly.

Phyllis Haver and Mary Philbin have the principal feminine roles, with David Butler in the male lead. The story compares the lives of two girls, one a native of the island, accustomed only to the simple beauty of her surroundings, the other a New York debutante, reared in the luxury of her parents' millions. Aside from the wealth of its settings, the picture has exceptional artistic merit and the story is particularly interesting.

It is easy to look at from the first scene to the last and not a minute or a foot of film is wasted in the whole production.

POLICE FIND "STRAD."

BERLIN, April 3.—When police made an unexpected visit to a small hotel in the Kolnische fish market, they discovered what is stated to be a priceless Stradivarius violin, which the proprietor declared he had bought long since from an unknown by the police, who are looking for the rightful owner.

On His Feet Again After Thirty-Seven Years Suffering

Dreco Helps Mr. Farley's Weakened System Despite His 59 Years and the Long Standing Nature of His Troubles.

Mr. G. Farley, of 426 Gunns Road, Toronto, had scarcely known a well day for thirty-seven years. To-day he is a different man, thanks to Dreco.

"For the past 37 years," says Mr. Farley, "I have suffered from the effects of pleurisy. This trouble has kept my system run own. I tried many remedies right along, but the best I ever received from them was temporary benefit. I always felt weak and tired out, and my rest at night never seemed to refresh me.

"Dreco has benefitted me wonderfully. My system in general is much stronger. I sleep better and feel greatly refreshed in the mornings. I no longer have that tired out feeling, and feel more energetic than for years. Dreco is the best general builder for the system I have ever heard of, and I do not hesitate to recommend it."

Dreco regulates and restores the weakened organs so that they properly digest the food, retaining all the nourishing values to up-build the body. Dreco also purifies the blood. It contains no mercury, potash, or habit-forming drugs, being a thoroughly reliable remedy of purely vegetable content.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterboro by Bond's Drug Store. It is also sold as follows:
Lakefield—E. H. Northey.
Campbellford—J. E. Birks.
And by a good druggist everywhere.

The Edtior of The Examiner:

In my monthly report to the Board of Education, under the heading of Absentees, I stated that one was absent on account of having scarlet fever, two for chicken pox, and eleven pupils were quarantined at the Children's Shelter, owing to a case of measles there, but none of our pupils have taken it.

I did not report that there were eleven cases of measles and I wish to correct this impression getting abroad.

LONDON, April 3.—Odd shoes, one red and one black, or any other colors to match the gown of the wearer, are a fashion novelty now in London. The stockings vary with the shoes.

PRICES.

Wholesale prices continue strong, which indicates the sellers have confidence in their ability to find lots of customers.

The authority, Dun's Review, reports average wholesale prices almost exactly the same as last October. These prices average a fourth higher than the low point of 1921.

The purchasing power of the consumer's dollar marks time at 60 cents on the dollar. That is, a dollar buys only three-fifths as much as before the war. To break even, a man must be making a correspondingly larger income.

POCKETBOOK.

Pig-iron production continued rising in February, it's announced. The output was nearly twice as big as February, 1922. This means that the steel industry expects lots of customers and heavy orders—which, in turn, means jobs.

Railroad freight traffic continues big for this time of year.

The banking situation is strong.

Retail trade is a bit quiet in some lines, but indications are for a brisk spring pick-up. People have plenty of money and credit to keep things going in good shape. This is shown by the manufacture of 349,141 motor vehicles in February, a gain of more than a fourth over the previous February record, in 1923.

Society

Mrs. T. Geo. Tremain has returned from a week's visit spent with relatives and friends in Toronto.

The many friends of Mrs. N. B. Buchanan, who was seriously ill during the past few months, will be pleased to learn that she has returned home in good health.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Sisson spent the week-end in Toronto, guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. C. Hanna.

The condition of His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, who was taken ill suddenly on Sunday last, and who has been in St. Joseph's hospital during the past few days, is described as being much improved this morning.

A birthday party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Terrace, 105 Auburn Street, on Saturday last, in honor of Mrs. T. Barnes, who was the recipient of many useful and beautiful presents. About thirty-five guests were present, and spent an enjoyable evening, in playing games and dancing, followed by the service of a sumptuous repast. Contributors to a pleasant musical programme were Mr. Andrew Pattison, brother of Mrs. Terrace, and a recent arrival from Scotland, who was heard in vocal solos, Miss Jessie Pattison and Mr. Alexander Mitchell in a vocal duett, and Mr. Terrace in comic songs.

The Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O. D.E., opened their season of bridge parties with a large bridge tea, held at the home of Mrs. J. K. Hughes, Weller Street. The tea table was beautifully arranged with daffodils in green baskets, green tulle and yellow candles in silver candelabra in a very attractive colour scheme of green and yellow. Assistants in the tea room were Misses Geraldine Glover, Hazel Buller, and Gladys Mulholland. The committee in charge of arrangements was composed of Mrs. Hughes, Mrs. Fred Hooper, and Mrs. F. C. Weber. The prizes for bridge were won by Mrs. F. Hooper, Miss Ruby Clegg, and Miss Gladys Mulholland (consolation).

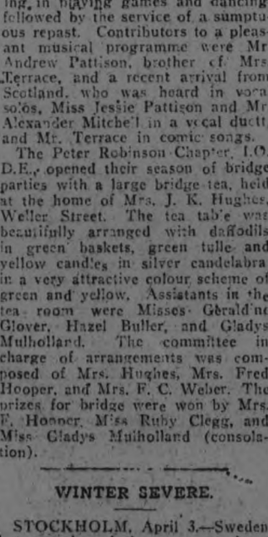
WINTER SEVERE.

STOCKHOLM, April 3.—Sweden has experienced the severest winter in a century. Conditions along the seaboard, which have, for many weeks been exceptional, now have culminated in the closing of the Baltic sea by an immense ice barrier which the most powerful ice breakers have found impossible to penetrate.

INFANT TRAVELLER.

LIVERPOOL, April 3. — Mary Paton, seven months old, reached Liverpool recently after voyaging 3,000 miles alone from Toronto. She was cared for by a woman passenger and the ship's nurses.

Boy, He's Hard!



"The toughest guy that ever came through our cells." That's the way Chicago detectives sum up Harry C. Thomas, 41, described as "the greatest single-handed burglar in the business." Thomas has confessed to 250 burglaries and robberies, 18 attacks upon women, one murder and sundry other felonies and other misdemeanors. Thomas "got religion" and walked into the detective bureau and made a clean breast of everything.

Canadian Stock Exchange and Mines | New York Stock Exchange and Curb Prices

TO-DAY'S QUOTATIONS AND OPINION AND REVIEWS OF THE MARKETS.

The market is firm but not especially cheerful. Some stocks have been covered but the short interests continue large. On the other hand, industrial conditions appear a trifle slower. Unseasonable weather is holding back many industries, particularly the motors and the oils; this condition would be straightened out with a few days of fine weather. Retail sales are large, but car loadings on Western lines indicate declines. The steel revives point to remarkable earnings by almost all the big companies in March, and indicate the bookings show moderate expansion.

Opinions on Market.

Hornblower and Weeks: Having almost uninterrupted success on the side of re-action during recent days it is idle to expect complete cessation of attack because certain big operators have ceased their aggressiveness. We are more interested in the different character of yesterday's operations than we are with the moderate amount of rally permitted.

Hirsch Lillienthal: The entire business world is only waiting for a satisfactory tax bill to become a law to speed up and expand general business. If nothing is accomplished at this session of Congress business will decline, and stocks especially. The industrial issues would sell lower.

At the close yesterday St. Paul Preferred, in the rails, was looked upon with favor, and buying in this issue indicates something more of importance than speculative activity. Directors of U.S. Rubber meet for consideration of preferred dividends at 3.30 this afternoon. Standard Oil of California obtains an additional 1,000 acreage lease in the Baldwin Hills, near Los Angeles.

The Mining Market did much better this morning; all stocks scored advances in which transactions took place. The most prominent of these was castle Thy which sold up to 82 but later reacted a couple of cents. The close was firm with a good demand for stocks.

The Toronto and Montreal boards were somewhat better. There was no great activity in any one stock, however. On the unlisted section Rouyn Cold had a further sharp break selling down to 25c and later recovering to 31c. This stock was selling at 45c a few days ago.

The rails were the outstanding feature of the New York market, all showing strength especially among the dividend payers, some advancing 3 points. The industrials were quiet and did not show any strength whatever.

ANSWER TO THE REDUCING CRAZE.

The Women Who Come to the Health Foundation First Undergo Physical Examination.

By MARIAN HALE.

NEW YORK, April 3.—Every woman these days has her periods for exercise and her own favorite reduling system, and is pursuing the Venus proportions.

"But not in order to catch a husband," according to Estelle Bertine of the Health Foundation, "but to have more pep, get better jobs and a bigger salary in the business world."

Incidentally, she admits, they often acquire the husband too, because the new charm, vivacity and slenderness which may be acquired in the gymnasium, is much more alluring to men than the cosmetics you get in the drug store.

In her health classes, Miss Bertine numbers women attorneys, dentists, secretaries, department managers, and practically every type of business or professional woman.

"Of course," she admitted to me, "we will always need doctors. But it is safe to say that the woman who exercises every day and follows a definite program for health is going to need medical attention less frequently than the woman who has nothing to do, and who can have a 'sick spell' whenever she feels like it.

"The women who come to the health foundation first undergo a physical examination. And our doctors are all psychologists as well as doctors. Temperamental clashes in the home are just as hard on the nerves as too much, or too little, food is to the body.

"Each woman exercises to correct her own particular defects. There is no standard to reach but each individual's perfection. The old gymnasium, where the exercises were copied from military drill and done to one-two-three commands, has given way to a less rigorous system where control rather than mechanical gestures is the rule."

Miss Bertine insists every woman must know what her defects are before she tries to correct them.

"If a woman stands badly, she will probably stand incorrectly while exercising and she gets no benefit from what she is doing," she explains. "For this reason the exercises done while lying down or while in a sitting position are much better for beginners."

There now are 8,500,000 women employed in the industries of the United States, an increase of 474,000 during the past 10 years.

HAD THE FUN.

Two Irishmen employed on a man-o'-war, finding things a bit slow one morning, decided to liven things up a little. So Dennis, instructed by Mike, placed himself astride one of the big guns and held a deck-pail over the muzzle.

Now, said Dennis, let'er go!

Whereupon Mike touched her off and she went, sure enough—likewise Dennis and the pail. When the officer in charge came running to find out the cause of the explosion, he said:

"Michael, what has become of your friend?"

"Oh," said Mike, "he just wint afther a pail of wather."

"I see, but when is he coming back?"

"Well," answered Mike, "I'm sure I can't tell exactly, but if he comes back as quick as he wint, he'll be back yisterday."

REPEALS LEGISLATION ALLOWING SINGLE TAX

TORONTO, April 3. — The Municipal Committee of the Legislature this morning passed F. G. McBrien's bill repealing the legislation passed by the Drury Government enabling municipalities to adopt a system of single tax. Harold Fisher, of Ottawa, protested against the repeal of the legislation, but the committee decided to send the bill on to the House without any amendment. Toronto voted on the single tax question at the New Year under the legislation Mr. McBrien now proposes to repeal.

EXECUTION IS POSTPONED ALLOW TAKING APPEAL

MONTREAL, April 3. — The execution of Walter Muir, of New York, set for to-morrow, was to-day postponed by the Supreme Court, until July 11, so that an appeal in the case can be argued. Muir shot and killed Henry Laviolette on Sept. 11, 1923, in a Valleyfield hotel, while on a motor trip.

POSTAL STRIKE IS NOT EXPECTED BY OFFICIALS

NERVOUS MESSENGERS TOOK ALARM AT PARTY OF TELEPHONE LINEMEN

Repair Car at Ontario Street Subway Where the Montreal Holdup Occurred Turned Bank of Hochelaga's Messengers Quickly Back With Visions of Tuesday's Ambush Giving Realism to the Prosaic Scene.

CALLED OUT POLICE.

MONTREAL, April 4.—(Canadian Press).—Messengers of the Bank of Hochelaga who were held up, fired at and robbed of $142,288 on Tuesday afternoon in the Ontario street subway, received a shock yesterday afternoon at 1.45 when their collection car with $150,000 aboard approached the same spot where the holdup had occurred. Some distance ahead and directly in their path in the subway they sighted an automobile athwart and blocking the tunnel road with four men standing around. It was stationed in the same spot where Tuesday's murder and robbery occurred.

The bank car immediately turned in its tracks and came back to the bank's branch at Fullum street where the messengers at once called for police protection. Nine constables and two police lieutenants were rushed to the spot. They found the stationary automobile to be one belonging to the Bell Telephone Co. engaged in repairing wires. The bank car then proceeded on its course.

For a time what was generally rumored throughout the city to be the "second holdup" overshadowed Tuesday's affair in the public mind.

Examining Bills.

While detectives continued their search for the missing bandits yesterday, efforts were also concentrated on identification of the bills totalling about $6,000 which were taken in the raid Tuesday night in the Cursol street boarding-house. So far no definite results have been obtained, but police are confident that some of the bills will be identified, thus linking the men and women who were arrested during that raid.

On Saturday clerks from various branches of the bank will visit detective headquarters and take their time in a minute investigation of the bills recovered so as to ascertain whether they can recognize any of them.

The suspects held have been separated and distributed throughout police stations in different parts of the city. No more arrests have been made and no more money recovered.

Ends in Potter's Field.

Preparations for the burial of the chauffeur and of the dead bandit are complete.

Henri Cleroux, bank chauffeur, was buried this morning from his parents' home and St. Jean de La Croix Church. Bank representatives, personal friends and delegates from Montreal Chauffeurs' Protective Association attended.

In striking contrast will be the interment on Saturday afternoon at Potter's Field, Bout de L'Ile of the body of Harry Stone, the thug of many aliases and of lurid crime career. He will be buried by the city whose protective officers killed him.

Evidence Accumulates.

Evidence incriminating the five men and two women suspects in connection with the hold-up is hourly accumulating, police denied last night and as the result of discoveries made late yesterday afternoon they insist that they have their hands on members of the gang implicated in the killing of the bank chauffeur, the wounding of the bank messenger and the theft of $142,288.

Two hours after Alderman Lyon W. Jacobs, K.C., counsel for the two men held by the detectives announced that his clients would be released unless wanted by the Toronto police, headquarters here let it be known that the latest results of investigations makes it certain that nothing—legal procedure included — will ever secure freedom for the seven persons now being held until they have been charged and arraigned and perhaps subjected to heavy bail.

Word from Toronto is awaited as the result of a visit here by Sergeant Detective Walter McConnell who

Poisoned Liquor Kills Nineteen

Toledo, Ohio, April 4. — Denatured alcohol and poisoned liquor continues to take its toll here with three additional fatalities on Thursday, bringing the victims to nineteen.

One of the victims died in the county jail, where he was taken after arrest as a witness in the case of Meyer Selzman, druggist, accused of selling the poison. Selzman with two clerks was held to the grand jury on a charge of conspiracy in connection with the alleged sale of denatured alcohol without labels. Later warrants charging manslaughter were sworn out.

HIKERS' QUEST FLAT FAILURE

Claims For Maintenance Refused By the Deputy Minister of Agriculture--Get Neither Money Nor Work.

OTTAWA, April 4. — The Federal Government, through W. J. Egan, the Deputy Minister of Immigration and Colonization, yesterday afternoon refused to grant the claims for maintenance advanced by a reputation representing the thirty-one British harvesters who walked here from Toronto.

The hikers came to Ottawa with the expressed intention of asking the government for work or maintenance and a change in the immigration laws which would prevent more immigrants being brought out from the United Kingdom than could be satisfactorily absorbed in Canada. The first two of their claims having proven unavailing, there remain only the request for the change in the immigration laws. So far the men have received no returns for their arduous journey from Toronto.

The hikers were cared for by the Salvation Army last night, and again reported at the Government Employment Bureau this morning to seek work.

They are considering holding a public meeting to-night to explain their position to the public, but no definite plans have yet been made.

Quebec Postal Clerks Have Voted to Strike.

SENATE WOULD REFORM ITSELF

Reduction of Membership and Retirement at 75 Years Proposed By Progressive Senator Turiff—Disarm Critics and Opponents.

OTTAWA, April 4.—(Canadian Press)—Reduction of the membership in the Senate of Canada, and the retirement of Senators at the age of seventy-five, was proposed in the Senate Thursday by Senator Turiff, the Progressive member of the Senate. The debate on his resolution was adjourned, after some discussion by the Government Leader, Senator Dandurand.

It would be better, Senator Turiff said, in presenting his resolution for the Senate, to reform itself than to have the people reform it. There was criticism of the Senate and of the manner of its appointment, especially in Western Canada. Senate reform was always the policy of the party in Opposition. There would be a reduction in the cost of this body. The excessive cost of Government must be reduced. Canada was overgoverned. More work should be provided for the Senate which also should be provided for the Senate, which also should not be permitted to become one-sided. The opposition party should have the right to appoint a certain number of Senators after the Government had a majority. He was not in favor of the election of Senators by provincial legislatures. He preferred an appointed Senate. That system so far had proved satisfactory.

Senator Bradbury, seconded the resolution to give Senator Turiff a chance to place his views before the Senate. He did not endorse the proposal. The present system was wise and safe and any departure from it would be detrimental.

Senator Turgeoen thought that it would be difficult to improve on the wisdom of the fathers of Confederation. Canada had a good form of Government. Senate representation was a solemn agreement with the provinces and no change could be made without the approval of the provinces.

Debtae was adjourned without action being taken on the resolution.

STAMP COLLECTORS HAVE BANKRUPT POST OFFICE

LONDON, April 4.—(Associated Press).—The fact that stamp collectors apparently are overstocked, for the moment, with the issues of Somaliland, has brought about a financial crisis in the affairs of the post-office department of that country. In explaining that the department was insolvent the official in charge said the revenue for 1923 was $6,100, a decrease of $9,310 over the previous year "due to the demands of philatelists being satisfied." The government expects to bring out a new issue of stamps this year.

LETTERS SPOKE LOVE FOR WIFE WHO KILLED HIM

Essie Gross Built Up the Defence of Husband's Brutality As Motive of Murder — Endearments Shake Her Story—Trial Nearinrg End.

TELLS OF SHOOTING.

NEW YORK, April 4. — The future, black and bodeful, dropped its impenetrable curtain before the hesitant step of Essie Gross at nightfall yesterday when she was led from Judge Mancuso's Court across the Bridge of Sighs to her cell in the Tombs.

In that last hour on the witness stand, where she had sat for nearly two days like a creature more dead than living, a bitter cup had been given her. In a handful of letters, written by the husband she is charged with having slain, lay the dead dust of all the tender moments of her past, restless now in their tomb of violence.

These letters, their pulses measured on the Celtic tongue of James E. McDonald, prosecuting attorney, were read to the jury in reply to the young wife's testimony of five years of cruelty.

Identifies His Letters.

As, one by one, she identified these letters and the handwriting of the man who, she swore, had beaten and vilified her, Essie Gross's white face and bulging eyes grew distorted from weeping.

McDonald read:

"Dear ittle Wifie:

"First of all, because I know you are anxious to hear, your mother and father are feeling fine—especially your mother. But I can't go any further without telling you that I still love you, because I do and always will——".

This addressed to Mrs. Gross by her husband in the summer of 1922 when she spent some time with his sister in the Catskils. And during the same period, this:

"To say that I was glad to hear from you would be putting it mildly. I was tickled. But why a post card? Why not a letter? Had you no time?"

"Sealed With A Kiss."

Then news about her family, his own activities and purchases she had instructed him to make for her. The letter concluded:

"Well, about ourselves. I had a dream last night about ourselves. We seemed to be up in a tree in a chicken coop, and you loved me. I wonder if it is me you love or another."

On the flaps of the envelopes that enclosed these and all his other letters appeared an "S.W.A.K." McDonald urged that Essie Gross explain what this meant, and the Courtroom was filled with her sobs. He persisted:

"Doesn't it mean Sealed With a Kiss?"

She whispered yes, and nodded her head.

Once Irving Gross addressed her as "Honey Bunch," told her to "put out the light before going to bed," and to love and kiss him. He signed himself "your loving husband," and ended his letters with numerous crosses for kisses which he multiplied by "million and billions."

Renews Vows of Love.

In the summer of 1921 when Essie was in Boston, he wrote:

"Your loving cards received, and to say I was glad would be putting it mildly. But, most of all, know my little Sweetie, that I love you. Listen, dear, anything you want (except money?), let me know. Listen, always keep in mind that I love you and always will."

Mrs. Gross had described the miserable brutalities her husband subjected her to on each of the two occasions when she expected to become a mother, telling how once she had been too ill to perform her household tasks, and had gone to her mother's. At this time Irving wrote, in a note he left on the centre table of her humble home.

"My dear Forelady.—In answer to your communication of the 13th inst. about cleaning the furniture and washing the dishes, allow me to say that all is completed, and I trust it will prove to yours also. If it please your Honour, may I say in closing, I love you and always will.".

Before completing her direct examination Mrs. Gross, almost hysterical, described the quarrel she and her husband had had at their six o'clock breakfast on the morning of

FACTORY GROWTH IN AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, April 4.—(Associated Press).—During 1923, 176 new factories were built and operated in the province of South Australia. The factories employed 3,524 additional hands, the value of the manufactured products being $15,000,000.

Russian Relief Opposed Soviet

MOSCOW, April 4—(Canadian Press).—The newspaper Evening Moscow, afternoon edition of Laboring Moscow, published by the Moscow Soviet, printed in Wednesday evening's edition the statement that at the trial now in progress of the counter-revolutionary organization, known as the "Acting Centre," at Kiev, the disclosure had been made that members of the organization had been paid for their espionage services with United States Relief Administration provisions from the administration's department at Kiev.

The newspaper says: "The present revelations do not surprise Russia. We never doubted that among the Relief Administration employes in the Volga region there were many spies and agents provocateur. It is only a question of how many of them were there."

PRINCE ELUDES FRENCH PRESS

Car With British Coat of Arms Stood at Hotel As Decoy to Newspaper Men In Paris.

PARIS, April 4. — (Canadian Press).—The Prince of Wales, after a 24-hour visit to Paris, left Thursday for Biarritz, to the great relief of the secret police entrusted with the task of keeping discreet watch over the safety of the royal visitor in France.

The Prince, who is travelling incognito as the Earl of Chester, fooled detectives and reporters neatly. A huge automobile, bearing the coat of arms of the British Embassy, remained standing in front of his hotel until noon. As the Prince had not appeared, the detectives were much worried.

Afternoon newspapers published photographs of the automobile with the caption: "The Prince of Wales is the latest riser in Paris."

In the meantime, the Earl of Chester escaped through the rear entrance of the hotel and lunched democratically in a modest restaurant near the boulevards with a former interpreter who was attached to the British Army during the war.

UPPER HOUSE IN DRIVE ESTIMATES

Tea Parties aud Automobile Costs in the Cabinet Circle.

OTTAWA, April 4. — (Canadian Press).—The Senate yesterday entered on an unusual departure. Taking the Interim Supply Bill as a basis the Upper House, afternoon and evening, discussed the estimates at length.

Sir James Loughheed argued that the Government had retailed all the "pork barrel" estimates. Large sums were being recklessly spent on harbor appropriations. The estimates should be cut forty or fifty million dollars and taxation reduced to parity with that of the United States. The budget was only balanced by a change in bookkeeping. Senator Durdurand, Government leader, claimed that the previous Government had not done any pruning but had left it for the present Government.

Senator Bennett said automobile costs for Cabinet Ministers were disgraceful.

"They are dismissing girls from the Civil Service and criticizing them for knitting in office," declared Senator Bennett, "but when these girls pass the Prime Minister's office and sniff odors of tea-making in which they cannot participate they go back to their knitting."

WAS ANOTHER MAN.

In the report of the different events in the programme of the P.A.A.A. smoker, held on Monday evening in the G.W.V.A. Hall, the name of Harold Menzies was mentioned in connection with a boxing bout. It was not Harold Menzies, but another man of the same surname, who took in this bout.

A Gift of Silver For Mrs. Meighen

OTTAWA, April 4.—Canadian Press.—Mrs. Arthur Meighen, wife of the leader of the Opposition, was presented yesterday with a set of silver table vases by the Conservative women of the Senate and the House of Commons of Canada. The presentation was followed by luncheon in the Speaker's apartment in the House of Commons.

Mrs. Murray Maclaren presented Mrs. Meighen with a bouquet of roses, the gift of Mrs. Sanford Crowe, of Vancouver. Mrs. George Black made the presentation address. Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Speaker of the House of Commons, presented Mrs. Meighen with a corsage bouquet.

POINCARE USED THREAT TO WIN CHAMBER'S VOTE

Obstructive Tactics of the Opposition Caused the Premier to Threaten the Resignation of Entire Cabinet Unless His Foreign Policy Was Endorsed.

WILL STAY IN RUHR.

PARIS, April 4. — Once again Premier Poincare har had to use forceful measures in the Chamber of Deputies in order to obtain decisive action. The obstructive tactics of the opposition on Thursday impelled the Premier to threaten the resignation of the entire cabinet unless the discussion of the government's foreign policy was completed and a vote taken.

Meanwhile, the Chamber adjourned for an hour, and after the debate had dragged on for an hour and a half upon resumption of the session the House by a majority of 257 expressed confidence in the government to carry on "the policy of reparations, security and economy demanded by the country." The vote was 408 to 151.

Election Purposes.

Throughout the session the opposition continued to attack M. Poincare though no hope was entertained of defeating or even making a strong showing against the new cabinet. The object appeared to be to put before the voters of the country the arguments the different parties will invoke at next legislative elections on May 11th.

M. Herriott, the leader of the Radical party, anticipatig the report of the experts on Germany's ability to pay reparations, declared:

ical party, anticipating the report of it will be necessary to maintain the French troops in the Ruhr for fifty years."

A member of the Right party then shouted:

"We will have war with Germany inside of fifty years."

Resuming his remarks, M. Herriott said:

"France will never obtain reparations and security unless control by all the allies is substituted in the Ruhr for the present French control."

M. Poincare assured the Chamber that France would remain in the Ruhr until the payment of reparations was completed. He promised the Chamber that the government would not accept any suggestion of a reduction in the French debt.

M. Herriott charged that France had not received her share of reparations as compared with some of the others, such as Great Britain and Serbia. He blamed the Ruhr occupation, which he said was a complete failure.

Spain Is Anxious to Raise Peseta to Par.

MADRID, April 4.—The Spanish Government is anxious to bring about parity of the Spanish peseta with foreign moneys of the gold standard and to accomplish this the Government, if necessary, will buy gold currencies abroad, says an official statement.

As regards the importation and exportation of money, the statement says the Spanish Government realizes that while this is related to the problem of keeping the peseta at par, it really is governed by the condition of production in Spain.

RUSSIA'S MALARIA HAS CLAIMED FIVE MILLION

MOSCOW, April 4.—(Associated Press).—The spread of malaria in Russia, noted seriously for the first time a year ago and seemingly an aftermath of the great famine, continues. According to the federal health cases registered during the first ten months of 1923 numbered 4,887,000 and it seemed certain that the annual total would exceed 5,000,000.

This malaria is of the tropical type, lasting in its effects and apparently came in by way of the Persian frontier. The malaria mosquitoes found perfect breeding spots in the blackwaters and sloughs of the great southern rivers and in the swamp lands with which some sections of Russia abound.

C. N. R. EARNINGS.

MONTREAL, April 3. — The gross earnings of the Canadian National Railways for the week ending March 31, 1924, were $8,411,593, being an increase of $81,130.61 or one per cent. over corresponding period of 1923.

The gross earnings of the Canadian National Railways from January 1 to March 31, 1924, have been $56,762,628, being an increase of $2,780,864.10 as compared with the corresponding period of 1923.

NO CEREMONY WITH EXPERTS

Presentation of Report to Reparations Commission Will Be Informal and Simple Affair--But Battle Begins Thereafter.

PARIS, April 4. — (Canadian Press).—Prospects that the Dawes-McKenna report would be handed to the Reparation Commission by Sunday or Monday brightened last evening when Louis Barthou, president of the Commission, in receiving French and foreign newpapermen, confirmed reports that the work of the experts was practically concluded and indicated that it would be ready for presentation at the time mentioned.

According to M. Barthou, the presentation of the report will be of the simplest nature, Mr. Dawes reading an explanatory letter, Mr. McKenna probably making a few extempore remarks and M. Barthou thanking the experts for their work. But thereafter the real "reparations battle" will begin.

M. Barthou declared that after handing in the report, members of the Reparation Commission will demand at least 48 hours in which to digest its voluminous contents, after which they will meet informally and then notify the German Government it may send a qualified representative to present Germany's observations with regard to the document.

After hearing the German representative the Commission will meet to draw up some sort of recommendation to the Allied Governments, after which the latter will be free to settle the political aspects of the problem among themselves. M. Barthou strenuously asserted that he, like Premier Poincare, was entirely ignorant of the contents of the report and had purposely kept himself so during the investigation.

OFFICIAL EXECUTIONER LEFT A NICE FORTUNE

BRESLAU, April 4.—(Associated Press).—Paul Spaethe, the executioner who recently shot himself in this city, left a considerable estate and attracted attention to the excellent pay which executioners get. Before the war 500 marks, or $125 and travelling expenses was the fee paid for each execution, and it has now returned to about the same amount.

Spaethe has guillotined 45 persons. That was emphasized by his lighting 45 candles, one to each of his victims before he shot himself. He invested his earning in a restaurant and in real estate which enchanced in value, so his heirs are well provided for.

A century ago the executioners in Europe were a much higher class of men than at present. They were required to be educated in surgery, and practiced medicine. They were state officials and received a fixed salary.

DUBLIN, April 4.—(Associated Press).—It has been decided that the permanent establishment of the Free State army shall consist of 27 battalion, nine brigades and three command. In addition there will be various separate services, an army school of instruction, a school of army music, and a training camp at Curragh. The army will total almost 20,000 men.

COMMISSION IS NOT NEEDED TO PROBE SCANDAL

Premier Ferguson Again Rejects Proposal of Hon. Manning Doherty — Investigation of Financial Affairs of the Province Proper Scope of Public Accounts Committee.

RANEY CURIOUS.

TORONTO, April 4.—Hon Manning Doherty asked in the Legislature Thursday afternoon that the government appoint a royal commission to inquire into Ontario financial transactions that the investigation be taken out of the hands of the public accounts committee. He thought the commission could make a better investigation than the committee.

Premier Ferguson said the government could not grant the request, the public accounts committee was the place for the investigation he stated.

"That is the very purpose of the committee," said the Premier. "There have been no complaints nor has there been the least suggestion of unfairness by the committee." He pointed out, too, that commissions had been found to be expensive and declared that there were no reasons why the committee should be deprived of its power.

R. L. Brackin (West Kent) said witnesse had been making statements before the committee which would never have been allowed in a court of law. Mr. Brackin was called to order as there was no motion before the House. He immediately proposed to move the adjournment of the House to discuss the matter but was again ruled out of order when the rule was read that the House cannot discuss the work of committees until they make reports.

Failed in Exams

On motion of the Premier a bill reported from private bills committee that J. P. Savage of Oakville be allowed to practice medicine in Ontario, was struck out of the report before reception by the House. The government will decide its policy about Mr. Savage and report later. Mr. Savage had taken his medical course but could not try his council examinaions because he did not have matriculation standing.

Before the orders of the day Hon. W. E. Raney endeavored to get a statement from the government on the matter of a liquor referendum or vote. He was ruled out of order. Mr. Raney immediately attempted to move the adjournment of the House to discuss the matter. The Prime Minister said that such a proceeding was outrageous. The Speaker announced that the order of the day would be proceeded with.

Raney Interjects

Mr. Raney allowed the first order to be dealt with and he then moved the adjournment to discuss the question he tried to discuss before the orders of the day. He quoted a newspaper report of a speech by Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey in which the latter was reported to have said that there should be a vote on the O.T.A. as quickly as possible.

FELL FROM TREE AND BROKE NECK

Thomas Shearer Who Resides Near Havelock Was Instantly Killed While Pruning Trees Yesterday.

HAVELOCK, April 4.— Yesterday afternoon, Thomas Shearer was instantly killed while pruning trees on his farm, three miles from here, on the Hastings road. His son Gordon went to the home of Sam Adams to get a ladder and when he returned he found the lifeless body of his father lying under a tree. His neck was broken as a result of the fall. Mr. Shearer leaves one son. His wife predeceased him some years ago.

YOU CANNOT JUDGE BY APPEARANCE.

It is impossible to tell the quality of tea by the appearance of the leaf. A rough, coarse, unevenly rolled tea may taste much better in the cup than a closely rolled, well tipped tea that LOOKS much finer. The only way to be sure of getting tea of reliable quality is to buy a tea like "SALADA," whose goodness and purity are guaranteed.

20 DROWN AS BRIDGE FALLS

Spanish Villagers Are Thrown Into Flooded Stream

MADRID, April 4. — At least twenty persons were drowned in the collapse of a bridge over the Guadalquivir River, near the village of Algaba, Seville, on Sunday, according to details of the accident received here.

Many villagers who gathered on the bridge to watch the turbulent flow of the flood waters beneath were thrown into the river when six arches suddenly collapsed. Two boatmen hastened to the scene but were only able to rescue four persons.

EXHAUSTED WOMEN WIN NEW STRENGTH AND NERVE POWER

Quickly Relieve Body Vitality by a Home Treatment Costing Few Cents a Day

What makes the glowing beauty of womanhood? Red blood.

Rich, red blood is the driving force of life. If the blood is weak, watery, impure we know nothing of the joys of success and accomplishment that come with abundant strength and nerve power. Red blood feeds the body tissues, nourishes the nerves, makes our systems tingle with the pulsing of life.

Those women, and men as well, who are quickly exhausted, nervous, sleep fitfully and awake unrefreshed, who have not the vital nerve force to succeed and who must have new energy, should think first of their blood.

Nourish the blood. Enrich it. Get from your druggist today a generous size bottle of Wincarnis, the blood builder. Start the Wincarnis home treatment at once. It costs less than ten cents a day. No need to be pale, weak, haggard. Wincarnis will quickly give you new strength, vitality, nerve force.

SEYMOUR AGRICULTURE SOCIETY HAD MEETING

Will Hold May Celebration One Day Earlier and Avoid the Rush--Campbellford News.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 4. —The directors of the Seymour Agriculture Society, at a meeting last night, definitely decided to hold their annual holiday celebration on Friday, May 23rd, instead of on Victoria Day. There were two reasons for selecting this date; Campbellford merchants do not care to close their stores on a Saturday, and the Hastings Memorial exercises are to be held on that day. An agreement was submitted by the officers of the society that the stores be closed on Friday, and this was practically unanimously signed by the business men. For some years Friday afternoon has been observed as a half holiday here during the summer although there is a movement on foot to have this holiday held on either Wednesday or Thursday, a petition in favor of the latter day being now in circulation.

A good programme of sports will be provided, this to include horse races, for which there will be three classes, football in which teams of the new church league will take part, a baseball game between Campbellford and some other team in the Northumberland League, and a tug of war, the contestants to be teams from Seymour and Percy Townships. The stalwart and invincible tug of war team of Burnbrae will be depended upon to uphold the prowess of their township and to keep the championship at home.

Those at the meeting last night were President John Locke, Secretary J. Nelson Stone, Directors W. M. Stephens, Alex. Hume, Garnet Kerr, J. C. Anderson, Dr. S. L. O'Hara, E. A. McCook and Fred Hendy.

Mr. E. A. Maybee, M.P., wrote to say that the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa would send an exhibit to the fair this year as was done last season, but that the society would be required to make a formal application and this will be sent in by Secretary Stone.

On motion of Directors Hume and Stephens, the department will be asked to award here the special prizes for dairy cattle that were given at Picton and other places last year.

Horse Races Retained

It was suggested to omit horse races for this year but Directors O'Hara and Anderson, both of whom are especially interested in that form of sport, maintained that no better attraction could be provided and their motion to hold three races was finally carried. The amount of the purses to be offered will be decided later. The following committees were appointed;

Arrangements—President Locke, Directors W. J. Abernethy, Horkins and Secretary Stone

Printing—Directors Hume, Stephens, Kear, McCook and Secretary Stone.

Management—Directors Watters, Van Volkenburg, Horkins and President Locke.

To Invite Sir Adam

Director Horkins, who at every meeting of the board can be depended upon to submit some new idea, brought up the matter of inviting Sir Adam Beck here on the day of the celebration to deliver an address and to listen to arguments in favor of having the Hydro Central Ontario offices moved here from Belleville. On motion of Directors Hume and Anderson it was decided to issue this invitation. If Sir Adam cannot come here on the day specified an attempt will be made to have him select another date. Another matter to be taken up with the Hydro Knight is the building of a radial line connecting Campbellford with the system on the lake front, a subject which Mr. Horkins has discussed in letters to the press. The idea of bringing Sir Adam here was introduced by Director Horkins at a previous meeting of the board and the Chamber of Commerce has since issued a similar invitation.

No Reoprt From Department.

W. M. Stephens, whose son Albert lost eight head of valuable Holstein cattle recently from some trouble that resulted in an investigation by a representative from the veterinary branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, has not yet received any report of the analysis made of the blood or of the sweet clover fed to his stock. Dr. Marriott, of the department, who visited the Stephens farm, took specimens of the feed and blood with him for expert analysis. In his report to the Department, which Dr. Marriott showed Mr. Stephens before he left for Ottawa, the veterinary stated that the cattle "died from poison, cause unknown."

The veterinary department of the Agriculture College at Guelph, wrote Mr. Stephens asking for samples of the sweet clover, and also submitting a list of questions for him to answer and both requests were complied with. No report has yet been received, but Mr. Stephens will write the college authorities to-day, inquiring as to the result of their analysis.

Mr. Stephens phoned Dr. J. R. Hancock, a well known veterinary of Colborne, and received a letter stating that the best treatment for animals so affected was the infusion of the blood taken from some healthy cow or animal.

Mr. E. Maybee, M.P., who resides near Trenton, during the winter lost eight head of thoroughbred Holstein, the symptoms being the same as those of the Stephens cattle. Some veterinaries diagnosed the trouble as black quarter, but Dr. Hancock says it was caused by the feeding of sweet clover ensilage.

Dr. Hancock says that if every ton of sweet clover put in a mow or stack is treated with 50 pounds of salt there is no danger in feeding it.

St. Mary's Football Team.

James Reeves is secretary-treasurer of the football team organized by the men of St. Mary's Parish. Charles McMenamin, John Heffernan and William F. Fitzpatrick form the executive committee. The parish contains a number of young men who received strenuous football training in the Old Land so that there is no difficulty anticipated in putting an excellent team on the field.

Council Sets Wages.

The Seymour Township Council, in special session, set the wages for highway construction work for the year. Men are to be paid 25 cents an hour, and a man and team 50 cents. Last year the schedule was lower, 20 cents an hour for men and 40 cents for teams.

An effort will be made to have the stone crusher recently purchased for use on the roads of the township in operation by May 1st. A committee will take up the question of securing power for driving the crusher and will report at the next meeting.

The following accounts were ordered paid: Robert McCulloch, sheep killed by dogs, $26; D. T. Petherick, work on road division 2, $4.20; T. O'Rourke, work on road division 1, $4.50; Roy Loucks, work on division 5, $17.75; W. Bennett, work on division 3, $12; Robt. Bateson, work on division 4, $12.60; George Anderson, salary as truant officer, $5.

The next meeting of the Council will be held on Monday, May 5.

The two vice-presidents, Messrs. TORNADO NEAR DALLAS.

Looking For Liquor Found Real Brewery On One Ocean Liner

NEW YORK, April 4.—(Canadian Press.)—Customs officers searching ships along the water front for liquor yesterday, boarded the Albert Ballin, of the Hamburg American line and bumped into a problem in dry enforcement that put them in a quandry.

In short they discovered a brewery on the ship with a daily capacity of 1,000 quarts. The chief brewer solemnly declared that it was operated only outside the twelve mile limit.

The dry agents tentatively solved the puzzle by declaring the floating brewery to be on an even basis with American brewers. These latter are locked up. They are not confiscated so long as they are inoperative. Therefore the officers locked up the steamer's brewery.

PROGRESSIVES ARE RESTLESS

Probe Into Drury Government Finances Forces Them Into Appeal to Party Statement.

TORONTO, April 4.—(Canadian Press).—Although the Progressive members of the Legislature have uttered not a word since Provincial Treasurer Price commenced his public investigations into the Drury Government finances, it is said that they are becoming restless at the turn of events, and demanding some response from their leaders.

At a caucus the other day it is understood, their opinions of the subject were forcibly expressed and a general request made that things that have come before the public be in some manner cleaned up from their party standpoint.

RUSSELL SCOTT AGAIN IN JAIL

This Time His Name is Connected With Drug Store Murder.

CHICAGO, April 4— (Canadian Press.)—After confessing to the police that he was one of the two men who shot and killed Joseph Maurer Wednesday night while robbing the Edison drug store, Russell Scott, of Cleveland, denied confession and asserted that he was in store but did no shooting. Scott first denied any knowledge of the shooting, detectives said, and then began a detailed confession in which he said he and his brother Robert robbed the store and that the latter shot Maurer.

Russell T. Scott, under arrest in Chicago in connection with the shooting of Joseph H. Maurer in a drug store there, formerly maintained a brokerage office in Detroit, according to James McCarty, chief of detectives. About two years ago Scott undertook formation of financing an organization for the purpose of obtaining money to build a $2,000,000 international bridge across the Detroit river between Detroit and Windsor. He abandoned the project and was reported to have gone to Toronto, Ont.

Russell T. Scott, who is believed to be only about 30 years of age, was born in Canada but was taken to the United States as a child and was reared there by his parents.

In 1919 in Toronto the Russell T. Scott Company Limited came into being with an ambitious financial enterprise.

In the summer of 1922 the company, which advertised in flamboyant style, claimed that it operated 37 branch offices and was represented in principal cities of the United States and Great Britain as well as Canada.

Early in 1923 Scott was dragged into unenviable notoriety when a Toronto telephone operator brought a charge of assault against him, it being alleged that the offence had occurred in Scott's office. Scott was acquitted, but he subsequently made consent judgment by which $2,500 was to be paid to the girl's parents. Soon afterwards he disappeared without having met the obligation. Within a short time a young Jewess of Boston, Mass., came to Toronto and entered suit against the absent Scott for $50,000 for alleged seduction, under promise of marriage. She was awarded $10,000, but received no cash.

PREMIER REFUSED DOHERTY REQUEST

Several Hydro Acts Go Through the Committee of the Whole House.

TORONTO, April 4.—(Canadian Press).—Premier Ferguson refused the request of Hon. Manning Doherty that the investigation of financial affairs of province, be made by a royal commission instead of the public accounts committee.

Several Hydro acts go through the committee of the whole house.

At night session Hon. J. S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture, concluded his review of the government activities in the farm work. Bill respecting medical and dental inspection in the schools was taken up late in the evening. Harold Fisher Liberal, West Ottawa, proposed an amendment that no dental, medical or surgical treatment should be undertaken without a written consent of the parents or guardians of the pupils. After considerable discussion the amendment was voted down and the bill carried.

HOME BANK INQUIRY TO OPEN IN OTTAWA

TORONTO, April 4.—(Canadian Press).—April 16th has been decided upon as the date of the opening of the sittings of the Royal Commission appointed to investigate the Home Bank affairs. The first sessions will be held at Ottawa, but as the inquiry developes and the books are needed the Commission will sit in this city.

Chief Justice McKeown of New Brunswick, Royal Commissioner, yesterday wired I. E. Weldon, secretary of the Home Bank depositors' national executive, to prepare for the opening of the sittings.

The depositors will be represented by R. J. McLaughlin, K.C., Toronto; A. G. Browning, K.C., of Hamilton, and W. T. J. Lee, of Toronto. E. Lafleur, K.C., of Montreal, is counsel for the Commission.

LETTERS SPOKE

last 11th December when he was shot to death:

"The morning before I had gone to get him one of three new shirts had bought him, and some cuff links I gave him. He tore the shirt up and threw the cuff links out of the window and beat me. He always called me 'stupo' lately, meaning stupid. When I begged him to show me a little respect he pointed to the window and asked me what I was waiting for, and if I wanted him to help me."

Her husband had been furious, Essie said, because she had gone to see his employer, and told that she was his wife, "for he had made out that he was single." She resumed:

"That morning (11th December) he didn't eat anything and I said I hope he would be better soon. He said, I'll never feel any better as long as I have you around me. He said he waited for Mollie Cohen (the friend she had brought home for the night) to go away. Then he called me vile names and grabbed my wrist. He said, Now you will pay for it.

"I started to get dressed and he followed me in the bedroom. He grabbed hold of my hair and dragged me to the window, I was trying to put on my coat to go to my parents. I was afraid. He said, You won't live to go anywhere. He said he was going to end it all and made for the spare room. I was trying to run out and he grabbed me. I saw the pistol in his hand. I tried to get it away from him. I heard the shot. I don't know whose hand the gun was in. He had me by the throat and was suffocating me. I don't remember the second shot."

CAMPBELLFORD'S AMBITION.

Campbellford's ambition to have the Hydro offices of the Central Ontario system located in that town instead of at Belleville would appear to disinterested outsiders as entirely justified. The logical home for the offices of any private corporation is at the point where the main works are situated, and the same rule should hold good in the case of a public utility. If that were done Campbellford's claim for recognition would admit of no dispute.

The Central Ontario system, which includes the territory from Fenelon Falls to the lake front and from Kingston on the east to Whitby on the west, is, with the single exception of the Niagara district, the largest in the Province. The total population served by the Hydro in Central Ontario is 141,725, while in the Niagara district it is 1,248,628. In the other districts the population varies, the total in the Muskoka territory being only 3,608. That fact alone is an argument in favor of Campbellford's claim for recognition.

Coming down to the local situation as regarded from Campbellford's standpoint, that town is beyond all doubt the leading electrical centre in its district. Belleville, where the offices are now located, has a switching station only. Campbellford has at present four power house sand two additional ones are in process of construction. The plant at Healey Falls is the largest in the Central Ontario district. Besides this there is the power house at Dam 11, the municipal power house and the one at Ranney Falls. The municipal plant is included in this list for the reason that it is really an auxilliary, helping as it does whenever the necessity arises to supplement the electrical energy required by the Hydro to supply its customers. When the new power houses are completed the name of Campbellford will hold a prominent place on the electrical map of the Dominion. The town has already secured for itself enviable publicity as the producer in its municipal plant of the cheapest power in Canada.

It is understood that the Hydro offices in Belleville must soon be moved, either to another building in that city or to some outside point. It has also been announced that a Hydro representative was in Campbellford looking for a building suitable as a home for these offices. The Chamber of Commerce has taken the matter up with Sir Adam Beck, who has been invited to visit Campbellford to see for himself just what the local situation is and what inducements the town has to offer.

It is not too much to believe that the ambition of Campbellford in this regard will be realized, and it must be admitted that its claim is logical, not the idle talk of a community that asks for something beyond the bounds of reason.

FAR AFIELD.

The Private Bills Committee of the Legislature seems to have gone rather far afield in dealing with the Church Union Bill, and its action in bringing in amendments that alter the principle of the measure is open to question regardless altogether of the claims of the two church parties.

The bill should either be passed or thrown out.

There is no logical middle course under the circumstance.

Here was a bill expressing the wishes of the majority of the people of the three churches affected and worded so that the Legislature may have accurate knowledge of the principles approved by those churches.

Enabling legislation is asked for.

It can be granted or it can be refused.

But neither the Legislature—nor any committee of the Legislature—should take it upon itself to amend a measure along lines that have not been discussed with representatives of the interested churches.

That amounts to dictating to these churches, the basis upon which they should seek to bring about a union.

And the State should have nothing to say on a point of that kind.

A BLUNT NOTICE.

The MacDonald Government has been served with a blunt notice that the length of its term of office depends upon how far it keeps away from legislation of a Socialistic nature.

The fact that the capital levy—one of the planks in Labour's election party—was defeated in the British Parliament by a vote of 325 to 160, and the Minister of Health's infamous Evictions Bill which provides that landlords cannot evict rent-defaulting tenants unless it can be proven that a greater hardship would result to the landlord from non-eviction than to the tenant if thrown out, was only saved for the moment by the tine line being out-talked, should show the Labour Party that it is impossible to pass radical measures and that persistent attempts to do so will wreck the Government.

The Liberal and Conservative members may not be able to agree upon anything else, but they will unite in smashing the MacDonald administration if revolutionary legislation is advanced.

The Premier is between the devil and the deep sea.

The left wing of the Government, the Red section, are clamouring for Socialistic measures, ready to face a general election in the event of defeat.

On the other hand, the Conservative element behind Mr. MacDonald are not anxious to be thrown out of office or to go to the country with a revolutionary programme.

The developments of the next few days should be fraught with much interest.

IMMIGRATION PROBLEMS.

Mr. John Noble, one of the visiting Labour speakers at the meeting of the Peterborough Trades and Labour Council on Wednesday night, brought forward much timely and important information in regard to the immigration situation.

His contention that the bringing to Canada at this time of immigrants, especially those who are seeking employment in industrial plants, is increasing the exodus to the United States, is unfortunately not far off the mark.

There is considerable unemployment in this country at the present time, and if new arrivals from across the Atlantic continue to congest the labour market in urban centres, as is undoubtedly the case just now, there are only two or three things that can happen.

Either the newcomer is unable to find employment and becomes a charge upon the public or he secures work by crowding somebody else out of a job.

And for the man who loses his position what course is open but to cross the border and find new work in the United States?

The Toronto civic authorities are face to face with this problem.

Toronto has been the mecca for the unemployed throughout the Province, and the expense of looking after these people has been a heavy burden.

The numbers of workless have been increased by the arrival of many immigrants, and the Toronto authorities are coming to the conclusion that if the Provincial and Federal Governments bring newcomers in they should assume the responsibility of looking after them until they have found employment.

There is much force in that argument, and the campaign that will be launched by the Toronto Council to secure the co-operation of the cities and towns of Ontario in petitioning the two Governments, in view of the conditions, to change their present immigration policy and to devise measures for keeping Canadians at home, will likely be endorsed throughout the Province.

With factories in many lines of industry reducing staffs and working only part time and with the majority of the immigrants, even when brought out for that work, refusing to accept farm positions, it seems a nonsensical policy to keep on dumping ship-loads of newcomers into Ontario.

The West may be able to absorb many immigrants, but it should be evident to everybody that Ontario, under the present conditions, cannot afford to be invaded by a small army of new citizens, most of whom want to live in the large centres.

There is work on the farms for many, it is true, but agricultural conditions are far from being prosperous, and the farmers cannot afford to pay big wages to farm labourers.

These facts should be explained to prospective immigrants who should be told frankly that there is small prospects of employment in industrial plants, and also told what wages they may expect to obtain for farm work.

THE POSITION OF CLERKS.

In the United States one wage earner in every ten is a clerk. The ratio may not be as high as that in Canada, but probably it is somewhere near that figure. In this fact we may readily identify one of the aspects of our modern social evolution. The outstanding feature of the change that has taken place in the matter of clerical workers is the part which women have played in it. Ottawa affords a fair example of that movement. No further back than 1880, all the clerks employed by Government were men. Today the Civil Service contains a considerable majority of women. In 1875 not a woman was to be found behind a store couner or in a commercial office. Now there are relatively few men in such positions.

The surprising thing is the ease and readiness with which we have adapted ourselves to this change. Yet it has considerable social significances, most of the aspects of which are, however, obvious. If there is any obscurity, it attaches largely to the broad effect on the marriage rate. That the pre-emption in this way by young women of what had been for generations the starting points in life of young men must have interfered with conjugality can scarcely be cannot be ascertained, questioned; but to what degree except by inferences. Probably the first and salient effect is to be found in the gradual raising of the age at which men are now marrying. Even there other factors may have found play.

There is room for serious thinking, nevertheless, along economic lines. The growing tendency to seek what is colloquially classified as "white collar jobs" is perhaps complicating the social structure. At the point where non-producers greatly exceed producers there is danger of a lop-sided organization; and we have either reached that point or are close to it. Education comes in as a contributing cause. With compulsory attendance at school up to 16 years of age, and a curriculum which now includes nearly everything, boys and girls are apt to shun the manual occupations. That is a natural ambition; but we must all see that there is a limit to the capacity of the country to absorb more than a certain percentage of clerical workers. When the available supply exceeds the demand, and a disturbance occurs in the situation on the side of demand—as has just happened in Ottawa—many individuals may be put to serious inconvenience before an adjustment can be brought about. That menace, there is room for fearing, is likely to increase.

There may be no need, however, for alarm. The social fabric is not only remarkably flexible, but it has wonderful powers of adaptability. As clerical workers compete more and more strenuously among themselves there will be a constantly increasing number who will be compelled by necessity to turn to other vocations. Under normal conditions, capital always stands ready to turn available labor to profitable account, and enterprise finds new channels for the use of men and women; but we are not now under normal conditions. High taxation has come in to check expansion by reducing the volume of money for investment purposes. If there is a contracting market for clerical labor today, it is to be fount in the situation as regards taxes more than in anything else.—Ottawa Journal.

TAWDRY BERLIN SHOWS AROUSE NEWSPAPERS VIE

BERLIN, April 4.—(Associated Press).—Vorwaerts, Berlin's leading socialist organ, finds much fault with tawdry plays which managers are offering to please war-profiteers "who want to laugh and cannot think", and says the situation is similar to that which existed in 1800, when the plays became even more inane than they are at present.

But then the public cured the situation very shortly. That was not the age of repression, and theatre-goers filled their pockets with rotten apples which they hurled at actors who displeased them. The audiences even climbed upon the stage and attacked the actors in productions which did not meet their approval.

Finally the king had to intervene in 1811. A threat was made that all noise-makers would be arrested and thrown into prison but by 1814 a great change for the better had come about in the theatre.

HOBOES NOW AVOID CITY OF NEW YORK

NEW YORK, April 4.—(Associated Press)—The hobo is becoming extinct along the sidewalks of New York. A check-up by welfare societies of the "flop houses" on the Bowery and other favorite haunts of the genus bears out the statement.

The Hobo College, famed as an East Side hostelry for those of the roving nature, is still open to the public, but its registry cannot boast the records it used to.

Reasons advanced for the growing scarcity of the tramp are that he can no longer successfully meet both the demands of his conscience and those of New York employers.

KOREANS ARE GROWING THE AMERICAN TOBACCO

SEOUL, Korea, April 4.—(Associated Press).—American tobacco, transplanted to Korea, is being cultivated with results said to be nearly as satisfactory as those obtained in the southern part of the United States. Particularly good crops are obtained in North Chusei province, just southwest of Seoul, which last year produced 3,712,000 pounds. About one-fourth of this yield was exported to China.

CHINA NEEDS THE CHILD LABOR LAW.

One-Sixth of All the Workers in a Given Group of Factories In Shanghai Are Children Under 14.

BY MARIAN HALE

NEW YORK, Aprile 3.—"When you think of the cut and color of your new Easter frock, give a thought, too, to the childish hands that may have made is possible for you," urges Agatha Harrison, first Y.W.C.A. secretary to China, now in this country.

"Whether we buy silks in New York or Paris," says she, "we have a direct responsibility for the conditions under which they are made. And much of the silk demanded is made under the most frightful conditions in China."

Miss Harrison, having investigated conditions in China, is touring America and England to bring about co-operation and understanding between the East and the West.

"Some modern industrial plants, carried on largely by foreign capital, are deevloping the latest western methods of machinery in China," she says.

"But, even so, you still see children in factories at midnight, on the streets helping to mend roads, building houses or carrying heavy loads.

"In Shanghai alone there are thousands of children in the factories. The few concerns that refuse to employ children under 12 years of age are exceptions.

"One-sixth of all the workers in a given group of factories in Shanghai are children under 14.

"After their 12 or 14-hour day, there is no spirit or time left for play."

Miss Harrison is spreading the idea that the world at large must not merely shudder and recoil from such conditions.

"As long as the present child labor in China is ignored, just so long will it react on our own labor situation," she contends.

"World-wide endeavor for the united good of all is the chief hope of the world today."

To enlighten the Chinese public concerning better conditions the Christian churches of China have launched a campaign with the object of applying Christian standards of industry.

MacKenzie Escaped From Mexican Bandits.

EL PASO, Texas, April 4.—I. N. Thacker, head of the Hydro-Electric Company's El Paso offices, received the following telegram from T. G. MacKenzie:

"Escaped Monday, walked 50 miles and caught train at San Rosario, on way to Parral."

Mr. Mackenzie, a Canadian, was captured in January when Hipolito Villa first took the field and has been with the bandit forces as a prisoner since that time. A demand that a ransom of 50,000 pesos be paid for his release was made by Villa. The company of which he is general manager, is the largest hydro-electric development company in Northern Mexico.

NOT ENOUGH TO GO AROUND

More Than Two Million Women In Our Country Hold Jobs Outside the Home.

NEW YORK, Apr. 4.—More than two million married women in the United States hold jobs outside the home—in factories, mills, offices and stores. Don't forget this in any discussion of "the deterioration of American home life."

Some of these women work by preference. They want to be independent, self-supporting, active in the world's affairs. Their employment outside the home is a matter of choice, not compulsion. But they are decidedly in the minority.

The majority are driven into industry and commerce by the pinch of necessity. The husband finds it impossible to earn enough money to support a family. His wife has to help.

This situation is a growing menace, especially among "the middle classes."

We talk about this being the most prosperous country in the world, with the highest standard of living. True, undoubtedly. And yet there is something emphatically wrong with the system when two million homes are disrupted by married women being forced to do work outside the home to help make both ends meet.

Here is a typical experience: A young couple, very much in love with each other, want to get married. The man isn't making enough to support a wife, let alone children. Probably the girl already has a job. Time drifts by, months climb into years. Hopes of advancement are no nearer materialization than before. Maybe the young man gets a raise in pay. This is quickly absorbed by the increasing cost of living. Finally they seek the one way out—get married and both of them continue working.

The married man has a few duties around the house in the evening, such as repairs and putting up shelves. But in the main he has his evenings for rest and recreation.

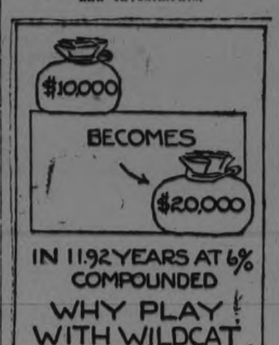
Not so with the married woman who has to work outside. She comes home tired—and then has to do her housework. Her strength and vitality are slowly sapped by overwork. She has no spare time for educational self-improvement, nor for her share in community betterment.

Any wonder so many of them neglect to vote? Any wonder race suicide is on the increase? Any wonder home life, long the pride of America, is crumbling?

It's a rotten kind of man-made "prosperity" that has for its foundations the enslavement of women—two million married and other millions single. We certainly have a high standard of living—and it's getting so high that a considerable percentage of the population can't reach it with a 10-foot pole.

MAKING MAKE MONEY MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.



Double your money with safety!

There is no need to be tempted by skilfully worded advertisements that suggest quick and unusual profits.

By investing money in safe and sure bonds and mortgages and faithfully re-investing all interest as soon as it is paid, money will double in ten or twelve years.

At six per cent (the normal rate of interest) money doubles in about twelve years. At seven per cent (a yield which may often be obtained on excellent security) money doubles in just a little over ten years.

The average investor does not realize the astonishing rapidity with which compound interest counts up. The first five years it seems to amount to very little, but after five years, it piles up amazingly.

A relatively small sum invested and the interest compounded will produce a modest fortune in twenty years.

OLD IDEAS STILL STICK LIKE GLUE.

First Fifty Packard Autos Were First Equipped With Whip-Holders On the Dashboard.

By ALBERT APPLE.

The first 50 Packard autos were equipped with "whip-sockets on the dashboards." Packard engineers remonstrated with the coach builder who had the contract to make the first 50 bodies. But for years he had made carriage bodies, and he insisted on putting whip-sockets on the autos.

This incident is typical of all human progress.

The first railroad passenger cars looked like stagecoaches. The first autos looked like horse-drawn vehicles. No matter how revolutionary a new idea may be, when people put it to practical use they invariably insist on retaining some feature of the old device or system that is replaced by the new.

So, quite naturally, the airplane is a copy of birds and insects, nature's "flying machines." Man couldn't be blamed for copying them. But the Ultimate Airplane may be an entirely different looking affair.

* * *

The human tendency, to attach a specimen of the old to new things, has a simple psychological explanation. People simply have confidence in old tried-out devices, and they cling to them as a sort of life preserver in case the new outfit doesn't work.

Probably the builder of the first Packard auto bodies feared they would break down and have to be towed home by a horse. In that event, a whip-socket wouldn't be a bad idea.

* * *

Radio, the most sensational mechanical development of recent years, changes swiftly. A new set comes out. You start to make it—and are apt to find it replaced by something better before you finish soldering the wires. Radio changes faster than women's styles, far faster. There has never in history been anything that has changed so rapidly—that has revealed a public tendency to discard the old and adopt the new without regret or suspicion.

This means that people are losing their chronic respect for old things. They are willing to take a chance and throw old devices to the ash-heap as soon as something better appears.

This tendency may revolutionize human thought and even systems of economics. When the American colonies broke away from the old country and set up a republic in government, they still retained the king-and-subject idea in that more important field, economics. The boss in business, however, is gradually being changed by evolution into a president of a business republic instead of monarch of his organization.

COMMISSION

"What I want to know and I think the country wants to know is was he speaking for the government or simply expressing his own opinion? Another question I would like to ask is: Does the government recognize cabinet solidarity?"

"If the questions are put on the order paper in the usual way they will be answered," was all the reply made by the Premier.

Return Radial Bonds

The House then took up several Hydro bills in committee. Only one was amended. It was the bill providing for the return of radial bonds from the Hydro Commission to the city of Hamilton. To Hamilton the municipalities of North Grimsby, Barton and East Flamboro were added. Other municipalities will also get their bonds returned if they go through the proper steps. There were some protests against a clause in the main hydro bill giving the commission power to prevent the sale and advertising of electrical equipment which is not according to regulations made by the commission Some members thought this an interference with ordinary business. The clause was not amended however.

Another bill which proposes changes in franchise rights of street railways introduced as a public bill was held up so it can be introduced as a private bill concerning the city of London only.

Hon. Jas. Lyons introduced a bill providing examinations for timber cullers and separating them from pulp cullers.

MARMORA FORMS BOOSTER CLUB

Dr. Crawford Elected President of New Organization With Ambitions of Promoting Picturesque Town.

MARMORA, April 3.— Monday evening a good representation of citizens assembled to discuss and organize a "Booster Club." This is a new move on foot to harmoniously work together for the purpose of a bigger and better town.

The meeting opened when Rev. Mr. P. Caiger-Watson called on Reeve Airhart as chairman.

The reeve made a few short remarks in introducing the topic of the evening and expressed his pleasure at seeing the clergymen present. He then announced that the meeting was open for suggestions.

Rev. Father Traynor said that as a new citizen he was perhaps able to see conditions in the village in a truer light than those who have lived here for many years. He saw in Marmora one of the most beautifully situated and pretty towns in Ontario at the same time surrounded with natural resources. Railway connection was good and every convenience could be offered to manufacturers. He thought that even more tourists should be encouraged to visit the beautiful lakes about the town. These bring money and the go-ahead spirit encourages the townsfolk. He warned those present that outsiders would not come in and boost the town. They must do it themselves.

Mr. Fraser Bowen spoke from experience when he said that the lakes and scenery of North Hastings county could not be surpassed anywhere. He said that this natural bounty should be commercialized and to do this the people must work in harmony.

Rev. Mr. P. Caiger Watson used the statement "The source of power exists in combining the units of power." Each citizen could only do so much but he said that if everybody in a town the size of Marmora got behind a proposition, there was no power on earth could stop them from realizing that end. He said that he had lived in large towns and small hamlets and he found it the same in all places— that if the people got together and worked in harmony they always had the satisfaction of seeing their town prosper. Rev. Caiger-Watson also stated there were excellent natural reasons for the town prospering and ended by asking the people to forget their prejudices and work for the general good of the town.

Dr. Crawford laid emphasis on the necessity of commercializing scenic and resort possibilities surrounding the town. He also thought that inducement should be given to manufacturers. He said that since he came to the village great improvements have been made. We have the High School, Hydro power, efficient fire protection and better telephone service than ten or twelve years ago.

The following was accomplished in the way of practical business:—

Moved by Mr. D. E. Bell, seconded by Mr. Fraser Bowen, that a Booster Club be formed.

Moved by Mr. P. Caiger-Watson seconded by Mr. Charles Shannon that Mr. H. R. Pearce be secretary.

Moved by Mr. J. P. Morrin, seconded by Mr. Tell Neal that Dr. Crawford be president of the Club.

Moved by Mr. Thos. Potts and seconded by Mr. Fraser Bowen that Mr. D. E. Bell, be vice-president.

Moved by Mr. Herbert Wright, seconded by Mr. Fraser Bowen that Mr. Robert Cooke, M.P.P., be honorary president.

Moved by Mr. F. S. Pearce, seconded by Mr. James Gehan that Mr. Fraser Bowen be 2nd vice president found that some of the suspects now being held were members of a gang arrested in a house on Shuter street Toronto, for being in possession of weapons, and later ordered out of that city.

A meeting was called for Tuesday April 8.

Career of Crime.

Harry Stone, the bandit who was shot to death in the bank collection car robbery here Tuesday, had a lurid career, having been arrested fourteen times under twelve aliases since 1909.

Hidden in a garbage carrier and collected with the prison refuse he escaped from the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., in May, 1922, after serving less than a year of his six year sentence. The exploit cost him $90.000.

His friends in Montreal who raised the sum said that in order to prevent prisoners from making their escape in this way a double two-pronged fork would be driven through the refuse. But Stone took a chance on it and got away successfully.

Smuggled Dope.

The United States authorities at Massena Springs arrested Stone on April 6, 1921, while he was engaged in transferring $400,000 worth of narcotic drugs from suit cases to a trunk. It is said that Stone offered the officers who arrested him a roll of bills as big as his arm and added that this was nothing to what they would get if they let him go. When he saw he was caught he wanted to know if he could get any of the $10,000 bail back he had put up when taken previously in San Francisco and had forfeited.

During the trial Stone admitted that he had served a two year sentence in Seattle Prison, and said that while there he had inherited $4,000 fro mhis mother. He was found guilty of smuggling drugs worth $400,000 into the United States and was sentenced to six $4,000 from his mother. He was said at the time to be biggest catch ever made by Federal agents of a dope smuggler. The court was filled with armed deputies when the verdict was brought in, as it was feared the prisoner might make an effort to escape.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Daughters of the Empire Will Take Part in Hastings Celebration.

CAMPBELLFORD, Apr. 3.—The monthly meeting of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire was held on Wednesday afternoon in the public library, with the president in the chair and 25 members present. After the secretary's and treasurer's reports were given, a discussion as to the scholarships for the schools arose. The principal of the high school suggested that the prize be given for the highest in English, British history and French. The pupils are to take the course in one year. On motion of Mrs. Archer and Mrs. G. C. Clarke, it was decided to give three scholarships for the above-named subjects. Mrs. Hume, seconded by Mrs. Archer, and carried, that there be given one ten-dollar prize for any entrance pupil making the highest marks, the pupil to be a resident of Campbellford.

A letter was read from the Provincial Board of Health in connection with the work done in town by Miss Veitch. On April 9th, Dr. Bell, provincial health officer, will be in town, and the nurse asks that mothers with sick children, who need the attention of Dr. Bell, bring them to the nurse's room in the Ferris Block, on that day. There will also be home nursing classes every day from May 12 to 23. All young mothers are especially asked to come to these classes.

A suggestion was made that pupils in the school, and those who attend meetings in public places and at the theatres, stand at attention and remain so until "God Save the King" is finished. This suggestion should be carried out by everybody.

On motion of Mrs. Hammond and Mrs. Hume, it was decided that the order accept the kind invitation from the Hastings chapter for May 24, for their special day of unveiling the war memorial, and that the secretary write a letter to that effect.

OLDEST NEWSIE DIED AT AGE OF 91 YEARS

He was 91 years of age and had served in the British army in India for 21 years. He had left a sum of $200 with a friend to pay for his funeral.

HEAVY BAIL BY QUEBEC JUDGE

Would Not Accept Any In Crimes of Robbery With Violence — Criticizes Superiors For Reducing Amounts.

MONTREAL, April 4.—(Canadian Press).—Judge Amedes Monet of the local courts, who since last January has been fixing bail in crimes of violence at between $15,000 and $25,000 and sometimes as high as $50,000, interviewed here yesterday, gave it as his view that in cases of robbery with violence and of drug trafficking the law ought not to permit the granting of bail. He deplored the tendency of some judges of the Superior Court to reduce bail, and cited a case where he had placed bail at $15,000 which the Superior Court had subsequently reduced to $2,500. He thought that judges of the Superior Court should communicate with judges of the lower courts before reducing bail in order to ascertain the special circumstances of the case.

Judge Monet was also of the opinion that there was abuse of the ticket-of-leave system. He thought that the majority of convicts should be left to serve out their full prison terms.

CHAUFFEUR NOW AMONG MISSING

Man Who Drove Hon. Peter Smith to the Home Bank Cannot Be Found by the Police.

TORONTO, April 4.—(Canadian Press).—The police are finding it increasing difficult to obtain evidence regarding meetings between ex-officials at Queen's Park and heads of the defunct Home Bank. For instance, it was learned yesterday that a certain chauffeur always was employed to drive the Hon. Peter Smith from his office in the Parliament Buildings to the bank. The police have been unable to locate this chauffeur, though he was known to have been in Toronto not many days ago.

It was learned last night that the investigations so far tend to show many more commissions than have been made public up to date. It was stated that some dealings with large bond houses will be probed and extensive commissions revealed.

THIRD DEGREE FOR C. N. R. PRESIDENT

Senate Will Put Him on Oath and Compel Him to Give Information--Fighting 26 Branch Lines.

TORONTO, April 4.—(Canadian Press).—A special despatch from Ottawa says:

"It becomes increasingly apparent that the Senate is again to be the hope of the "vested interests" in dealing with Sir Henry Thornton's request to Parliament for permission to build 26 branch line roads as feeders for the present Canadian National system. Keen is the fight in the Commons against branch roads. The real opposition, if the present plans prevail, will show itself in the Upper Chambers. "Already it is being stated that when the 26 bills go forward from the Commons, Sir Henry Thornton will be summoned by the Senate to undergo an examination deemed to be in keeping with the bigilent treasury guarding character of that venerable body."

"Not only will Sir Henry be sent for," it was learned from one who is very close to the red chamber, "but he will be put on oath and made to give information he has failed to give to the House of Commons."

GERMANY PUTS CURB ON RICH

Idle Rich Will Not Be Able to Jump Around So Easily.

(By Carl D. Groat, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

BERLIN, April 4.—Germany has taken drastic measures to curb lavish expenditures by her millionaires abroad. Hereafter passports and extensions of the same will cost $125, and other difficulties will be thrown in the way of German Nouveau Riche who want to go to French and Italian resorts to spend their money.

Issuance of all visas was suspended yesterday for two days preliminary to establishment of the new passport regulations.

The statement in the American senate that there are too many millionaires in Germany is understood to have influenced the government in its new course. Commercial travellers and journalists are exempted from the heavy passport fee.

Inland hotels and resorts are gleeful, believing the new regulations will turn a flood of profiteers and "Schiebers," who hitherto have plurged on the French and Italian Rivieras to home resorts.

The government admits that the "vulgarity and lavishness" of Germans, especially in Italy, provoked its action.

German resort prices are now above these elsewhere, while in Berlin they are asking from $6 to $9 for seats at a show.

KI-MOIDS QUICK RELIEF For INDIGESTION

FIREBRAND SPEECH MADE BY AGITATOR

A Protest Against J. H. McLachlan Was Voiced Yesterday in the Senate by Senator David.

OTTAWA, April 4 — Protest against the recent speech made by J. B. McLachlan, in the Cape Breton mining districts, was voiced yesterday in the Senate by Senator David.

The Senator said Mr. McLachlan made "a firebrand speech" advising the miners to strike on the job, and not give a fair day's work for a fair day's pay, and also advised the men not to accept their agreement with the employers.

This, said the Senator, was advising men to be dishonest and to act illegally and fraudulently. Such agitators should not be allowed to spread these ideas, if British institutions were to be maintained. Agitators, like McLachlan, would induce people to defy even the authority of their union leaders and thereby lose the sympahy of those who had at heart the welfare and progress of labor.

There was no further discussion.

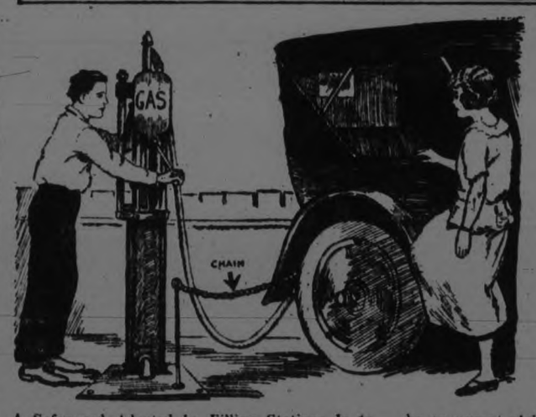
New and Interesting Facts from Science and Life

When Static Electricity Becomes More Deadly Than Dynamite



A Safeguard Adopted by Filling Stations Is to Attach One End of a Ground Chain to a Metal Post and Fasten the Other End to Some Metal Part of the Car.

WITH the development of the automobile there has come a new danger that makes static electricity, a source of annoyance to the radio "fan," more deadly to the motorist than dynamite when united with gasoline fumes. The attention of automotive engineers has been focused upon this odd peril, the tremendous scope of which is at once apparent when it is realized that more than 11,500,000 automobiles in daily use in the United States consume annually almost 3,500,000,000 gallons of gasoline.

Organizations concerned directly or indirectly with fire perils suddenly have discovered that many disastrous fires, the origin of which was shrouded in mystery, actually were caused by static sparks coming in contact with the fumes of gasoline. As a result they are hastening to perfect preventive measures that will lessen this real source of property damage and death.

Static electricity may be generated in an infinite number of ways. Whenever there is friction it is likely to be produced. It is static that crackles in your hair when you apply a rubber comb in the Wintertime. It is static that causes sparks to jump from your fingers when you touch a metal object or the hand of another person after walking across a carpeted floor. Usually these sparks will do no harm; but, if generated where gasoline vapor has combined with the air in explosive proportion—above the gas tank of your car, or in any garage, service station, filling station, dry-cleaning establishment; in fact, anywhere where gasoline is used—static sparks may cause disastrous fires and explosions.

How easily and peculiarly static electricity may be generated with dangerous effect is explained in Popular Science Monthly by Raymond J. Brown, who cites the following as a case in point: A physician, roused from his bed by an urgent night call, donned a fur-lined overcoat and rubber boots. He walked to his garage, and as he started to enter the automobile, there was a blinding flash, and an explosion. The machine burst into flame. The automobile was destroyed and the physician badly burned.

Static electricity, generated by the rubbing of the fur of the coat against the rubber boots, was the cause of the fire. The rubber soles insulated the doctor from the ground, as he walked, causing the electricity to be stored up in his body as in a condenser. Then, when his hand approached the metal body of the machine, the charge was discharged in a spark that ignited the gasoline fumes rising from the tank of the car.

"Liquid gasoline is not dangerous in itself," says Mr. Brown. "Confined in a tank or can, it is quite harmless. But the gas it gives off, combined in proper proportion with air, is highly explosive. Scientists have determined that the ignited vapor from a single gallon of gasoline can do as much damage as 83 pounds of dynamite. In fact, it is this very explosive force of air and gasoline that makes possible the powerful automobile engine.

"A slight spark only is necessary to ignite this gas—the glowing end of a cigarette, a burning bit of match, a weak discharge of static. The peril is magnified by a physical property of the gas. Because it is heavy, the gas is not carried away by the circulation of air, but falls to the lowest level it can find, settling to the floor and filling all crevices. It sinks into garage repair pits, where it may remain for days unless an extraordinary current of air carries it away.

"Gasoline fumes that had settled in a repair pit caused a violent explosion in a garage in the Middle West a few weeks ago. A mechanic, entering the pit to drain a crankcase, was unable to budge the plug with his pliers. As he exerted more force, the pliers slipped, striking a bolt head and causing a spark. Immediately the fumes in the pit exploded, burning the workman severely and badly damaging the car.

Actual Photograph of an Automobile Reduced to Complete Wreckage by the Terrific Force of Exploding Gasoline Ignited by a Tiny Spark of Static Electricity.

"Gasoline rushing through the hose at a wayside filling tank generates static, which passes through the metal nozzle into the metal parts of the automobile. There it is stored up because the car is insulated from the ground by its rubber tires. Touching the car with any conductor of electricity will cause the static to be discharged. The hand of the attendant at the filling station, or the hose nozzle as it is withdrawn from the tank may supply such a conductor. The resultant static spark, occurring over an open gas tank and near a spot where a greater or less quantity of gasoline is spilled every day, is bound to be dangerous.

"A noted automotive engineer investigating the danger of static reports an unusual incident of static generation. An automobile was backed up to a wire fence in such a way that the discharge from its exhaust struck against the wires. So much static was generated by the discharged gases impinging on the wire, that persons who touched the fence felt distinct shocks.

"In Downey, Cal., static electricity, generated by gasoline flowing through a hose, recently caused a fire and explosion that killed eight persons. A 1,700-gallon tank truck, filling the tanks at a service station, suddenly exploded. The tank was ripped from the chassis and hurled 48 feet through the air. Persons standing within 50 feet were enveloped in flames and their clothing burned from their bodies. Other persons 200 feet away were scorched and blistered and some of them thrown to the ground. All vegetation near the explosion was scorched.

"The service station was demolished, and a frame bungalow that stood about 40 feet away was burned to the ground. Sunken concrete construction prevented the explosion of the five underground tanks in which gasoline was stored at the station, although the fluid was forced from four of the tanks through the vent pipes by internal pressure resulting from the external heat.

"From a similar cause a garage in Mansfield, Wis., caught fire recently and automobiles valued at $50,000 were destroyed.

"For some time gasoline dealers have been using a simple but effective method of preventing fires of this sort. A chain is attached to the chassis of the gasoline tank truck and permitted to trail on the pavement. This supplies a ground connection for the truck and causes any static generated to flow harmlessly to the earth. The truck destroyed in the Downey explosion just mentioned was supplied with a ground chain, but faulty adjustment is believed to have been responsible for its failure to perform its function.

"Some owners of gasoline filling stations recently have carried the ground chain idea further, supplying a device which is used to ground every automobile that stops for gas. This consists simply of a metal chain attached to an iron pipe driven into the ground near the filling pump. When a car stops beside the pump, the attendant places the end of the chain on some metal part of the car. Thus the machine is protected should static develop as the gasoline flows into the tank.

"The elimination of static by grounding also is being practised on a smaller scale in dry cleaning establishments. Many fires occurring in these places have resulted from the generation of static by the rubbing of silk garments that are being cleaned. Experienced operators now dip their hands into the gasoline in which the garments are immersed and draw off the static charges, if any, by a grounded metal finger ring. This practice prevents the creation of a spark at the surface of the gasoline where it might cause a fire. Since static is generated in dry weather more rapidly than in damp weather, much of the danger in cleaning establishments is eliminated by discharging steam into the workroom.

PROTECT Your HEALTH by Keeping All FOOD COVERED

IT is stated on the best authority that the average baby born in 1924 will live ten years longer than the average baby born in 1899 could be expected to live. In other words, in the last quarter of a century a whole decade has been added to the normal span of life—in this country, that is to say.

The main reason is improved sanitation, which discourages the incidence and spread of disease.

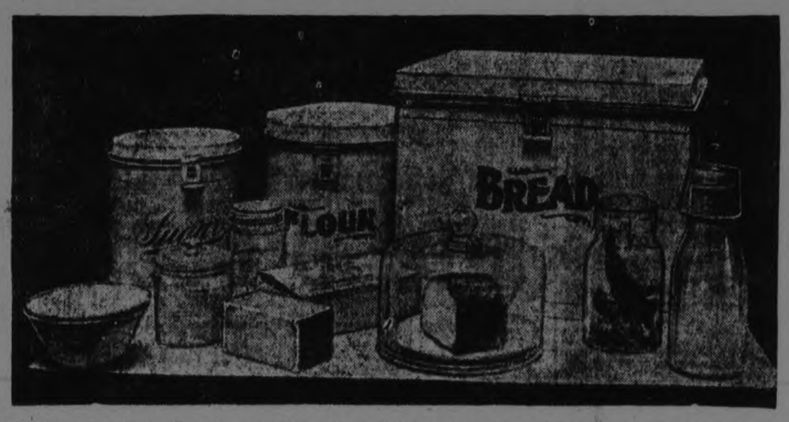
Very important as a feature of this improvement is the practice, now so generally adopted as to be almost universal, of keeping food supplies covered, to protect them from insect and dust. To accomplish this purpose, there are many clever inventions, among the most familiar of which are the milk-bottle cap and the germ-proof carton.

Up to within very recent years sugar, flour and most other food supplies sold by grocers were kept in the shop in open bins and barrels. Dust, more or less laden with germs, was deposited upon them, and more or less of it was delivered to the housewife with whatever she bought.

Nowadays that sort of thing would not be tolerated and nearly everything sold by the grocer comes in cartons, cans or other sealed packages. The goods come to him in that shape from the factory or mill. His flour is put up in sacks.

When foodstuffs were exposed in the manner above described, flies collected upon them, bringing infectious filth and various other species of insects, including moths and beetles, laid eggs in them which hatched out "worms" and grubs. Unpleasant, very.

The Government Bureau of Home Economics is doing its best to encourage housewives to adopt like methods in the home. Most intelligent housekeepers, indeed, have already adopted them, keeping their bread, flour and sugar in tight tin boxes, and other food in closed glass jars or otherwise protected against insects and dust. It is just as easy, insures cleanliness, and is a valuable health precaution.



The Most Intelligent Housekeepers Have Adopted the Sanitary Plan of Keeping All Bread, Flour and Sugar in Tight Tin Boxes, and Other Foods in Closed Glass Jars or Otherwise Protected from Insects and Dust.

Next to temperature, the important point in preserving food is cleanliness.

All fruits and vegetables that are to be eaten raw should be thoroughly washed, for even though they look clean, dangerous bacteria may cling to skins or leaves. As a rule, uncooked meats of any kind should not be eaten. Smoking meat does not kill parasites.

Left-over cooked foods should be kept cold and covered, used promptly, especially in warm weather, and, if possible, heated thoroughly before being served again. Dangerous poisons sometimes develop in such foods without making noticeable changes in taste or smell.

A CARD INDEX for a LONG LIFE

DR. CHARLES MAYO suggested in a recent address that every man should be physically examined by a doctor on his birthday and the results noted on a card.

When the doctor has finished the annual examination of a patient he will say: "I find your heart scores one hundred, but your kidneys score only seventy. So far as I can judge you will die in 1933 of a kidney trouble, assuming that you continue as you are now." These data would be written on the card.

Dr. Mayo continues: "Suppose, however, that you turn your pencil, erase 1933 and write in 1943. Ten years will mean much to you, and you make up your mind to earn them.

"How can you make your seventy per cent kidneys last an additional ten years?

"You learn that you must change your habits, go to bed at a regular hour, obtain more sleep, change your food habits, protect yourself against infections, and take better care of yourself when you have a cold. You decide that the game is worth the candle. Take your eraser and rub out the word 'kidneys.'

"You go on for one year, happy in the prospect of a gain of ten years. Another birthday comes round. You go to the card box, take out your card and again read it, or, in other words, you undergo another examination. You erase, in consequence, the old entries and make new ones. You may further modify some of your ways of living, or, having found those of the past year satisfactory, plan to continue them."

Controlling Blindness

ONE of the most frequent causes of blindness is an inflammation of the eyes which is due to an infection during birth, and known as ophthalmia neonatorium (inflammation of the eyes of the newly born).

The disease is easily prevented by dropping into the eyes of the infant immediately after birth two or three drops of a 1 or 2 per cent. solution of nitrate of silver. This procedure is required by law in a number of States, among them Illinois, and it is reported that in Chicago, where the law is now rigidly enforced, there occurred in 1923 not a single case of blindness from this infection in a total of 56,724 births.

CARING for a Child's FIRST TEETH

WHEN a child comes into the world it is apparently toothless. However, the first teeth are completely formed and are lying just beneath the gums. Under these are also the beginnings of the permanent teeth. The teeth do not develop as they should if not supplied with a sufficient amount of building material. The two important elements that build bony structures in the body, says the United States Public Health Service, are phosphates and lime, and there is no better source of these elements than milk. Mother's milk is almost essential during infancy. After infancy the diet should include a glass of milk with each meal.

Teething in a healthy child is itself a normal function, but when associated with some outside disturbance it may become a source of serious trouble. If the baby thrives normally, the first teeth will appear at the end of six months. When these temporary teeth begin to come do not think that their preservation is not important. Quite the contrary! The first teeth are essential up to the very moment their successors are ready to replace them.

Among the evils that may follow the premature loss of first teeth are imperfect chewing, poor digestion, irregularities in the second set of teeth, distorted features and frequent suffering from severe toothache. The child's health and development depend a great deal upon the care of the first teeth. It is the mother's duty to train the little one to keep its mouth clean.

The first or "six-year" molar appears during the sixth year and takes its place behind the temporary teeth. It is often mistaken as one of the temporaries and for this reason is neglected upon the supposition that it will soon be lost. The six-year molar largely determines the position of the permanent teeth that follow as well as the shape of the jaw and the subsequent appearance of the child's face.

As the second teeth begin to develop and to take their places see that the first teeth are removed neither too early nor too late. Normally the new teeth will come up directly under those they are to replace. Sometimes, however, the permanent tooth may start to emerge on either side of the arch. In this case the first tooth becomes an obstruction which must be removed before the second or permanent tooth has been forced out of line.

Breaking Dishes for a Living

UNCLE SAM has some strange jobs to offer, but none is stranger than that of breaking dishes for a living. This odd job is possible because the army, navy, marine corps and shipping board all buy dishes by the carload. Each department usually buys what it wants regardless of the quality. Naturally great waste results. In view of this the budget bureau decided there must be a uniform standard in government dishes. So the ceramics division of the bureau of standards was given the task of testing all kinds of china.

A Device for Testing the Strength of Dishes.

The principal means of testing the dishes was breaking them. For over a year three men have been breaking dishes daily. One of the ways of registering the strength of the different wares was with the apparatus shown in the accompanying illustration reproduced from the Pathfinder. Whole carloads of pretty dishes were broken in this way in the long test.

The results of the tests were that American-made chinaware proved to be the strongest and most durable. This is said to be because the American product is not baked so hard. German products will hold the designs longest, the tests revealed, but they break easily.

Are Cats Most Mysterious of Animals?

ALTHOUGH cats are among the best known animals, they are at the same time perhaps the most mysterious. According to Professor Lepinay, of the Paris College of Psychology, "cats are very curious enigmas; they are capricious and independent, suddenly abandoning what appeared to please them most, following those who flatter and caress them, only suddenly to turn away again. They are anarchists among animals. They make no concessions or only such as please their temper of the moment.

"To me they are little less than divinities, little more than animals. Unlike my friend, Dr. Philippe Marrechal, I do not support the theory that animals are superior to man, but by instinct they make fewer mistakes than man in his researches and in his efforts. Generally speaking, we might train them as collaborators, learning better to utilise their associations and ideas, making ourselves understood through educative means. What has been done with men could be done with them, raising them from timid slaves to intelligent auxiliaries."

Dr. William T. Hornaday, of the New York Zoological Park, whose tigers, lions, pumas, leopards and jaguars may be thought to possess in all their purity the qualities which have been somewhat dimmed, or are carefully concealed, in the domestic cat, sets down two axioms in his book on "The Minds and Manners of Wild Animals." The first is this: "If every man devoted to his affairs, and to the affairs of his city and State, the same measure of intelligence and honest industry that every warm-blooded wild animal devotes to its affairs, the people of this world would abound in good health, prosperity, peace and happiness." And the second is: "Many men are both morally and intellectually lower than many quadrupeds, and are, in my opinion, as destitute of that indefinable attribute called soul as all the lower animals commonly are supposed to be."

On a chart Dr. Hornaday shows the relative intelligence of wild animals as he has found it in his long experience with them. The chimpanzee heads the list with a score of 925. This includes all the qualities and attributes that might be grouped as temperament and intelligence. The lion, noblest of the cat family, scores 725, the tiger 575.

For lions Dr. Hornaday has a warm admiration, despite the fact that a bad lion is the worst, not alone of cats, but of other animals as well.

A lion brought up in captivity, says Dr. Hornday, is the most amenable of beasts. He knows that his keeper is his best friend, and cultivates his good will. Often he is as gentle and playful as his remote cousin, the household cat, although in his playfulness he is likely to claw off his keeper's face, just as a household cat will forget itself in a romp and bite or scratch a little. This good nature of the lion is due, Dr. Hornaday points out, to his intelligence and his lack of fear. Since he is not afraid, he is never nervous. The jaguar and the leopard, which are less intelligent, are more nervous and therefore more dangerous.

What Makes Soap Lather

WHAT is called "lather" is really an enormous number of tiny bubbles of water, each inclosed by a very thin film of partially dissolved soap, the whole mass being held together by the stickiness of the little films as they touch one another.

Soap, when wetted, dissolves, and the globules of water are cased in the solution. Then, as it is rubbed the bubbles are broken, thus releasing drops of water which case themselves again in other shells of soap, and so lather is formed.

To Prevent SHOES from SQUEAKING

SHOES squeak because the pieces of leather forming the soles do not lie close together, and rub and bend with the movement of the feet.

A perfectly made shoe will have French chalk, black lead, or some other paste smeared over the two surfaces that are to touch, so as to act as a kind of packing, but in the case of most machine-made shoes this process gets omitted, with the result that as the layers work on each other, they grate slightly and make the objectionable creak.

With wear, however, the moisture of the foot itself acts as a lubricant, as it were, welding the parts together, and the creak stops. This accounts for the old saying that it is only the shoe which has not been paid for—presumably a new one—that creaks.

A good plan to stop squeaking is to put a little sweet oil in a pan or dish and place the shoes in it to soak overnight. They will take up enough oil to deaden the squeak, and it is also good for the leather.

Another method is to remove a few rivets along the side of the shoe and insert powdered graphite or chalk, or thin pieces of felt rubbed with chalk, and rivet up again. Three or four more small nails or pegs may be driven into the center of the sole, but this reduces the flexibility of the shoes.

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Prudence Page, a charming country girl, has fallen in love with

Bert Traymore, a fascinating philanderer, who is in no danger of losing his heart over any woman.

Janet Mercer, Prudence's dearest friend, an older woman, plain but clever, is in love with Will Ogilvie. She is masseuse to the delicate child of Mrs. Vanattart, a pleasure-loving woman-of-the-world, owner of Winston Towers, a beautiful summer home, which she fills with visitors.

Virginia Dale, her ward, is a blase beauty, who counts Traymore among her many swains. She is genuinely interested in

Peter Armstrong, a brilliant young inventor, clever and ambitious, who has evinced considerable admiration for Prudence. Virginia finds nothing to admire in the country "chit," as she calls the girl.

Traymore is attempting to convince both Virginia and Prudence of his love, and Prudence is suffering deeply.

In an outburst to her father, Prudence tells him that she is not content with life on the farm.

Meeting Prudence on the road, Peter invites her to visit his laboratory. Prudence tells him of her desire to live a different sort of life, to be something else but a "dull, stupid country maid."

Prudence is mystified at finding Traymore digging at the foot of an elm tree.

Prudence finds Traymore's indifference no longer causes her pain. She is "through with love."

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Prudence's Detachment.

"Love," said Janet Mercer, smiling, "is the most disturbing thing in the whole wide world. But any woman who dodges it is a fool, and is missing the one big happiness of life."

Her big mouth had the up-quirk at the corners once again, and her small greenish eyes were all alight with joy.

Across the table of the little teashop where Janet and she were enjoying this chance meeting and a morning cup of coffee, Prudence regarded her friend.

What had transpired to bring that look into her face?

"Well, of all the inconsistent creatures!" Prudence couldn't find the words to voice her surprise. "And you only telling me the other day to beware of men!"

The two girls had run into each other unexpectedly in the main street of the little country town where Janet lodgings were, and had foregathered for a chat.

Janet looked a little sheepish. Prudence had a disconcerting memory.

"It must have been a touch of indigestion. I get real old-maidish—sort of waspish—when I'm all tired out."

"Oh, no," said truthful Prudence. "It was Will Ogilvie irritated you. You said——"

"Never mind what I said." Janet stirred her cup of coffee, and then helped herself to another lump of sugar, dropping it with a little 'plop' into the steaming cup. "I'm a cantankerous old maid at times, but I've repented."

Prudence stared at her wide-eyed. Queer irony of fate that, just when she herself had forsworn romance forever, she should encounter prosaic, level-headed Janet in a lovelorn mood!

"You mean you've made it up with Will, and the two of you are going to marry?"

"Yes—to the first part." Was Janet's actual blushing under her freckled skin? "Query," in the meantime, to the second."

"Because of his mother, I suppose?" Prudence sipped her coffee thoughtfully. She couldn't share in Janet's mood this morning. Then she added, with sudden vehemence:

"Will's downright weak, tying himself to her apron-strings the way he does."

Now, for years, this precisely had been Janet's own opinion. It has been a fruitful source of quarrel between the oddly-assorted lovers.

But, to-day, her heart was full of a sweet, throbbing loveliness that was part and parcel of the spring, and Will's good-night kiss, and his broken "I love you, Janet. Even when I'm a beast to you, I do. I swear it." . . . he flamed up in quick defence.

"A little kid like you doesn't know what you're talking of. I wouldn't have Will different for the world. It's his heart of gold that keeps him so kind and thoughtful to his mother. You can bet your life that any man who's made that way is gong to be a good husband and any girl who'd get him 'ud be lucky."

Prudence was astonished at the outburst, but said nothing. Janet, in a fiery mood, alarmed her, rather.

But the fire at once died down.

For anger couldn't live two minures in a heart that beat to a melody like the throb of 'cellos. The memory of a man's arms about her thrilled this lonely, unbeautiful woman till the homely, honest freckled face was quite transfigured.

For love is the greatest beautifier in the universe.

"You're—nearly pretty to-day, Janet," blurted out her friend, then could have bitten her stupid tongue for 'damning with such faint praise.'

But Janet beamed on her across the tiny table of the teashop. No petuland beauty, hardened to compliments, and accustomed to being exquisite in lovers' eyes, knows the magic of being 'nearly pretty,' when for years even one's mother thinks one plain!

"You're a nice child, Prudence," commented Janet, mollified. Then: "Your heart's in the right place . . . Oh, no, it isn't——" she giggled a little awkwardly, as though too daring in her correction; "I mean to say, if it's in Bert Traymore's keeping——" She broke off, meaningly.

It was Prudence's turn to flush, or be annoyed, according to her character.

But instead she contrived to shrug her shoulders carelessly, and reach out to help herself to a chocolate eclair, as though the selection of the pastry was of infinitely more importance than a sweetheart.

I'm not worrying about men." Then, before Janet could express surprise at this clever air of detachment, she artlessly queried: "D'you think eclairs'll make me fat?"

"Merciful heavens! Is it a child like you thinking of your figure? Whatever's come over you?" Janet's cup was poised mid way between the table and her lips. "Are you taking a leaf out of Virginia Dale's book, or what?"

Prudence laughed.

"I wish you'd seen her this morning in Mr. Armstrong's laboratory, with black grease all over her new white hat and frock, and on her hair, and streaking right across her face!"

"Good gracious! What was the pair of you doing there? Did the man ask you in?"

"He asked me in," said Prudence, flushing just a trifle under the other's scrutiny. "And then Miss Dale arrived, and went too near one of his experiments——"

Janet pursed her lips.

"You mark my words, that girl's wild about young Armstrong. She's going to catch him, if she can. And then, heaven help him!"

COLDS BURNS BRUISES

WORKERS REWARDED ON STUDEBAKER'S 71ST ANNIVERSARY

Nearly 3,000 Employes Honored for Loyal Service of 5 to 60 Years With Veteran Motor Manufacturer.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., April 4.—(Special).—White-haired grandfathers, their sons and their grandsons stood shoulder to shoulder at the seventy-first birthday celebration observed the other day by the families of 20,000 employes of the Studebaker Corporation at South Bend and Detroit.

Nearly 3,000 artisans were awarded medals for continuous and loyal service of five, ten, twenty and up to sixty years with Studebaker, the oldest automobile manufacturer in the world.

Some Serve 60 Years.

More than 2,300 received bronze medals for five or ten years service; 157 were awarded sterling silver medals for fifteen years, and 222 had gold medals pinned upon them for more than 30 years employment by the House of Studebaker. The last group included those employes who have been with the corporation from 20 to 60 years. They were cheered by their fellow workers as they received the honors.

For seventy-two years the name Studebaker has been linked, not only with every improvement in transportation, but with American industrial development as well.

Since its inception in 1852 as a cross-roads blacksmithing and wagon-building shop, Studebaker has expanded to one of the greatest manufacturing institutions in the world, with $90,000,000 of actual net assets, including $50,000,000 of plant facilities and an annual production capacity of 150,000 cars. Studebaker has 3,000 branches and dealers in the United States and is widely represented in all foreign countries.

Branches Out Rapidly.

This romance of the American industrial world began when Henry and Clem Studebaker commenced operations in South Bend in 1852 with two forges and a cash capital of $68. They built two wagons their first year, one of which gave satisfactory service for 38 years, a record that indicates the ideals of quality upon which the business was founded.

Three other Studebaker brothers, John M., Peter E. and Jacob F., joined the firm; the first, John M., adding to the assets $8,000 which he had earned repairing wheelbarrows and stage coaches in the busy days of the "gold rush" in California.

The fame of Studebaker vehicles spread rapidly. In 1868 the firm name was changed through incorporation to Studebaker Brothers Manufacturing Company, and a few years later the first branch house was opened at St. Joseph, Mo., to handle the trade of pioneers who were crossing the country in large numbers. The business prospered and expanded accordingly during the following years until Studebaker became the world's largest producer of horse-drawn vehicles.

Builds "Horseless Vehicle."

It was inevitable, therefore, with the advent of the automobile in the late 90' that the company would become interested in this new method of transportation and its possible bearing upon Studebaker's business future.

As early as the spring of 1897 Studebaker built and experimented with a 'horseless vehicle," as it was described in the directors' minutes, and bodies were built in 1899 for electric runabouts made by another company. Studebaker actually began building electric runabouts and trucks in 1902, of which twenty were sold in that year, and a total of 1,841 were constructed up to 1912, when it abandoned electric machines.

The company started production of gasoline propelled automobiles in 1904, and during the next seven years built and sold 2,461 passenger cars and trucks, the chassis of which were built by another company.

The management perceived the necessity of embarking into the business on a large scale commensurate with its position in the vehicle industry, and sufficient to employ the facilities of its large plants and sales organization throughout the world.

Moderate-priced automobiles to be built and sold in large quantities were decided upon and Studebaker, in 1910, acquired complete ownership of the business, plants, assets and trade name of the Everett-Metzger-Flanders Company of Detroit, which had been manufacturing machines of this character.

Makes Unusual Records.

During its dramatic rise in the automobile industry Studebaker has established many records. One of the most remarkable of these was in 1921, a year of business depression, when Studebaker enjoyed the biggest business in its history, prior to 1922. The sales of Studebaker cars were 29 per cent. greater than in 1920, notwithstanding that the total number of cars sold of all other makes except Ford was 45 per cent. less than in 1920. Sales during 1922 surpassed 1921 by 65 per cent. and the record for 1922 was exceeded in the first eight months of 1923.

In its 72 years Studebaker has undergone many changes, of course, yet in one respect it has remained unchanged. The old ideals of quality, value and dependability of product have endured down to this day and remain the inspiration of those who control the destinies of Studebaker.

THEY GROW OPIUM TO PAY IN TAXES.

Magistrates Compel the Farmers to Grow Drug—Chinese Province in Turmoil.

SHANGHAI, April 2.—(Associated Press).—Life of foreigners in the far off Chinese province of Sze-Chuan is equally far from being secure. Respect for the law or anything else is not known there, and the last few years have been given over to a continual warfare between the Federal and Confederate armies, which includes not only pitched battles, killing of innocent people, captures and abductions, but also a long record of bribery and corruption among the army and officials on both sides.

A British official who has recently come to Shanghai from this province says that never before has Sze-Chuan been in such a lawless state. The roads, he says, are in the hands of brigands, who are organized into regular stations, with definite charges on each person which they levy on all those who wish to pass unmolested.

"The robber gangs fight continually with the provincial troops and military escort has been denied foreign travellers," this official says, "the excuse being put forward that no escort could possibly be large enough to be effective.

"Opium is growing all along the banks of the river from Suifu to Changtu, and the magistrates are said to have compelled farmers to grow a certain amount of opium and pay taxes on it."

Make Your Youngster the Happiest in Town

EVERY real boy or girl who hasn't a bicycle wants one.

If your boy hasn't one he must feel pretty blue to be left behind when his chums ride gayly off to a picnic, or to play ball on the commons a mile or so away, or for a jaunt in the country with the Boy Scouts.

Far better for him to be out riding than loitering on a street corner.

Cycling is one of the cleanest of sports and healthiest of exercises. The pleasure and benefits your boy will receive from riding with the Scouts, or with any of the other organizations active in promoting a standard of clean, manly boyhood in Canada, will repay, many times over, the small cost of a C.C.M. Bicycle.

Just think of the whoop of joy your boy would let out tonight if you told him you were going to get him a bicycle. When you take him down to the C.C.M. dealer's to pick it out he will be the happiest boy in town.

Every C.C.M. Bicycle is a bear for punishment. It will stand up under the hardest usage a healthy boy will give it. The frames of reinforced English Seamless Tubing are marvels of strength. The bearings are of flint-hard steel of extreme accuracy. The rims of second growth hard maple are exceptionally durable. The lustrous enameling and bright nickeling are weather-proof.

The boys' and girls' models, as well as adults, are equipped with the famous Triplex Crank Hanger, that makes pedalling so easy, and with the C.C.M. Hercules Brake that coasts so freely and stops so quickly.

There's a model for your boy whatever his age—including the Curved Bar model, the bicycle the boy won't outgrow, and a dashing Sport Model for the older boys and adults. Also neat, trim models for girls. C.C.M.s are $15 to $20 less than the "peak" prices. A Big Dollar's Value for every dollar you invest in a C.C.M.

Take your boy or your girl with you to the C.C.M. dealer's. Get the bicycle now and let him enjoy a whole long season's pleasure. You can pay in instalments if desired.

YOUR GARDEN

GARDEN CARE.

Whatever else you do, don't be guilty of drowning your garden.

Many beginners make the mistake of watering their crops too much.

This practice is probably founded on the fallacy that the more moisture plants are given the better they will grow.

Too much water is worse than too little.

Rather than sprinkle constantly during seasons of drought, try shallow cultivation with a steel rake around the plants instead.

This is what horticulturists call dry soil mulch. It prevents the escape of moisture in the ground.

Sprinkling, during spring and fall, should be done in the morning that the foliage may be dry before the cold of night comes.

Summer watering should be done in the evening that the moisture may not be evaporated by the sun.

Summer watering should be done in the evening that the moisture may not be evaporated by the sun.

It is only necessary to moisten the soil. Don't soak it.

Also, remember that wet foliage on bright days is subject to sun scald.

Bear in mind that moisture poured into the soil feeds upward to the plant roots like a wick in an oil lamp.

Just because the top surface is dry is no sign that the plants aren't getting plenty of moisture from beneath.

Perhaps the best manner of applying water to crops is to open slight furrows alongside the rows of plants and allow water to gently flow through these miniature ditches.

Frequent light sprinkling is dangerous. It is best to thoroughly soak the garden about once every week, providing there has been on rain in the meanwhile.

Seeds planted during a period of drought should be sown in slight furrows which have previously been filled with water.

Permit the water to settle and soak into the soil. Then put your seeds in and cover the trench with dry earth.

It is a good practice to visit your garden during the early morning, while the dew is still present on the plants.

Such inspection will reveal what has happened during the night and prepare you to combat any insect invasion.

Don't attempt a garden of such size that its care will become a burden.

A small plot intensely cultivated is far better than one half cared for.

Plants will be stimulated into growth much faster if the surface soil frequently is stirred with a rake.

Stirring not only eliminates weeds, but likewise admits air—a vital plant food absolutely necessary to healthy growth.

Succession and companion cropping methods should be employed in the cultivation of all crops whenever possible.

By succession cropping is meant the growing of the same vegetable throughout a long season.

Lettuce, for example, may be sown very early. But if you sow all your seed at once, all your lettuce will mature at about the same time and you wont' be able to eat it all.

To prevent such waste, mark off the space you intend allotting the various crops, and sow but a small portion of the seed at once.

Follow the first sowing a week or so later with another one. In this way you will get a succession of crops continuing to the close of the gardening season.

This plan applies especially to radishes, onions (sets, not seed), peas, beans, kohlrabi, spinach and sweet corn.

TOMORROW: Garden flowers.

HEBRIDES FARMERS COMING TO CANADA

LONDON, April 4.—(Associated Press).—A contingent of 500 farmers from the Hebrides will leave their islands March 28 to settle in Alberta, Canada. Cottages already have been erected for the emigrants and Scottish organizations in Canada will look after them until they have reached their new homes.

By No Means Allow Your Bowels To Get Constipated.

If you allow your bowels to become constipated you will have bilious attacks, sick headaches, coated tongue, foul breath, sallow complexion, specks floating before the eyes, whites of the eyes dull and yellow, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Keep your bowels regular by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, as by doing so you will be able to keep well and have no more trouble with your liver.

Mrs. I. Rubin, Halbrite, Sask., writes:—"I was very badly troubled with constipation, often had bad headaches my tongue was coated, and I felt anything but well.

After taking Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills I have felt much better as they certainly did me a lot of good."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FINNS BEGIN CANAL BUILDING.

HELINSFORS, Finland, April 4.—(Associated Press).—The government has decided to build a canal from Lake Ladoga to the Gulf of Finland at the cost of 750,000,000 Finnish marks. This will be the first step toward a wide development of internal communications, and will be followed by the building of other canals and railroads.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS SAVIOR OF AUSTRIA.

Earl of Balfour Points to Good Done By League In Addressing New Society.

LONDON, April 4.—(Associated Press).—The story of the recovery of Austria should convince the most sceptical and most cynical that the League of Nations is capable not only of great disinterested effort for a common world object, but that through it alone can the peace and prosperity of the world be guaranteed, the Earl of Balfour said recently in addressing the first meeting of the Anglo-Austria society.

The society, which is composed of Englishmen and Austrians resident in London interested in the reconstruction of Austria, has grown out of the successful efforts of these people to float the Austrian loan in England. More particularly the society is interested in promoting good relations between England and Austria in the matters of art, science, commerce and education, and to help Vienna to reassume the leadership in those arts which she formerly held.

Lord Balfour, as chairman of the finance committe of the league, which in November 1922, investigated the possibilities of stabilizing the Austrian currency and reconstructing the country is accredited with having wrawn up the plan which within 15 months has made the country one of the most stable and prosperous on the continent.

The earl declared that the League of Nations had firmly fixed itself as a necessity. "By its capable carrying out of its Austrian policy with wisdom, with caution and with courage, the league has justified its existence 'once again,' he said.

There were problems confronting the world today, the speaker declared, the solution of which was difficult; some others the solution of which seemed impossible. But those who are apt to be pessimistic ought to look at this great experiment which Austria and the League of Nations, acting together, had carried through, and feel that much could be done by human effort, human resolution, honest and genuine cooperation, and a belief that in the future mankind, properly and wisely led, might deal with situations which seemed quite hopeless.

AFRICAN KING HAS TROUBLE WITH WIFE

She Seeks Finery and He Is Compelled to Limit Prices of Her Dresses.

OLYMPIA, Wash., April 4.—(Associated Press).—Evidence that the sister of a king, even though she be in "darkest" Africa, sometimes hankers for finery is found in a letter written by the reigning monarch to the agent of a trading post at Hlabatine.

Several of the royal communications were received here by Archibald C. Tweedie, of the state department of labor and industries, from his brother, George Tweedie, who is stationed at the trading post. One of the letters is as follows:

Mr. B. C. Dorkin,
Hlabatine:

Please allow my sister Miwa to have £2 ladies dresses don't give her more with kindes regards,

Yours faithfully,
I Mswaker Sigcan,
King of Pondoland

The letter is written in English in a plain and legible hand. The trading post at Hlabatine is about 150 miles inland and Tweedie and Dorkin are said to be the only white men in a radius of 100 miles.

GRENFELL LABRADOR MISSION

In these columns last year was given some account of preventive work in Labrador among the children. Following are some extracts which indicate that this work is being energetically carried on.

The work of the Labrador Traveling Unit during the summer of 1923 consisted of short concentrated health campaigns in nineteen coves.

Constructive medical work was done by Dr. Hauser with a great many tonsil and adenoid cases, although a great many operations advised could not be performed, due to an epidemic of influenza. About one fourth of the cases found were sent to Battle Harbor Hospital. An amusing incident occurred during the doctor's examinations; in the course of epidemic of night blindness it was discovered that a boy so afflicted had been given a pair of black glasses!

Dr. Hauser also, at evening meetings and in personal visits, gave helpful instructions in child feeding to mothers, urging the more general use of brown flour and cod oil. In the territory we covered all the traders promised to supply the whole wheat flour when ordered, and after the demonstrations of whole wheat pancakes made at various places along the coast we hope the families are using this flour this winter.

Dr. Lambert, beside cleaning the teeth of most of the children, and extracting 143 teeth, and many more for adults, was able to make an interesting study of the relation of diet to sound teeth. In a cove where goats' milk had been used for some time, he did not have to pull any teeth, whereas, in another cove, only a little larger in population, since there had been no goats for the last fifty years, he had to pull the teeth of 16 children and fill a great many more. Even the first teeth of tiny children of five and six years of age were already in a very bad state of decay. This seemed to indicate the importance of milk as a tooth builder.

The introduction of goats on this part of the coast by the traveling unit and other nutrition workers the previous year is undoubtedly responsible for the fine gains in weight already mentioned. At Forteau, where in 1922 quite a number of goats were introduced by Miss Frances Clarke, two mothers told me themselves that their babies' lives had been saved during the past winter by goats' milk. Sister Bailey, who had tended these children while they were sick, also attributes their recovery to the fresh milk. They are now both astonishingly large, fat healthy children.

Subscriptions to the Grenfell Mission will be received by the Examiner or may be sent to Mrs. F. M. Somerville, 16 Inverlea St., Peterboro.

TAX COLLECTORS SEEK FOR AUSTRIA'S RICH

VIENNA, April 4.—(Associated Press).—Tax hungry authorities have decided that in some directions they have been too lenient in the past, and that hence forward the man who can afford domestic servants must contribute more generous to the state.

It has, therefore, been ruled that the tax on the employment of more than three domestic servants in the same household be raised ten fold. And the wealthy who have in their service more than ten domestics—there are only 60 such households in Austria—will be addressed at even a higher rate of increase. Baron Rothchild employs a total of 47 servants, and for this privilege pays a tax of $14,000.

WHITE SEAMAN TURNS BLACK.

HULL, April 4.—(Associated Press).—The medical profession here is puzzled by a Danish seaman who has gradually turned black in the last six months. The man has been admitted to the local Poor Law Hospital. The skin all over the body is so discolored that he looks almost like a negro.

OIL WELL YIELDS GOLD.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., April 4.—(Associated Press).—A number of pure gold nuggets, each about the size of a pea, have been baled out of the 600-foot level of an oil well being drilled in a canyon near here. Geologists explain that the gold probaby was carried down the prehistoric stream known to be flowing 500 feet under the surface. It is believed that this stream flowed on the surface before the upheaval of the earth's crust formed the San Bernardino mountains.

CAMPBELLFORD, Apr. 4.—The W. M. S. of the Methodist Church met at the home of Mrs. Chas. Davidson, Frank Street, on Tuesday, April 1, 1924, at three o'clock. Twenty-six ladies were present. Miss Boyce, the president, presided.

Two ladies on the Watch Tower gave short reports, Mrs. Chappell for Japan, and Mrs. Bibby for China. The Easter meeting arranged for last month, will be held on Tuesday, April 22, 1924, in the Sunday school-room of the church at three o'clock. Miss Nelly M. Turner has been asked to give an address at that meeting.

The regular May meeting will be held on Friday, May 2, at the home of Mrs. C. W. Turner, and all the ladies will be asked to bring in their mite boxes.

Entertained Young Men

A maple taffy party was held at the Methodist parsonage. Rev. W. and Mrs. Elliott entertained 30 boys and young men at their home on Tuesday night from eight to twelve. A most enjoyable evening was spent in games, tricks and singing. There was also a bean contest, which made a lively scramble around. There were two prizes given for the two having the highest number. These prizes were won by Gerald Wilson and Howard Fairman.

The hot maple taffy was heartily enjoyed along with the cakes, and a merry time was spent by the boys as they stirred and ate. The snow taffy was also lots of fun for them as they were served very daintily by one of the assistants of the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Phillips and Mrs. Turner were present and assisted the host and hostess. The boys appreciated very much the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Elliott for the splendid evening they had and as they left for their homes all expressed their appreciation as they said "good-bye."

There's Nothing to Equal 'Dr. Wood's" Norway Pine Syrup For Coughs and Colds

Mrs. David Thompson, West River St., Paris, Ont., writes:—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

For myself and children I use nothing else.

My little girl, five years old, has had bronchial trouble ever since she had the "flu" a few years ago, and, now, whenever she gets a slight cold she develops a very nasty cough, but all I have to do is to give her a few doses of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

Also for myself, and the other children, I can find nothing to equal it, in fact, it was only a short time ago that I gave it to my ten months old baby, and could immediately see the difference it made in her. Now, I always keep Norway Pine Syrup in the house, as I feel there is nothing to equal it."

Price 35c. a bottle; the large family size 60c.; put up only by the T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

TOKIO POLICE HAVE BEEN GIVEN PISTOLS

TOKIO, April 4— (Associated Press).—Revolvers have been distributed to members of the Tokio metropolitan police, this being the first time that firearms have been a part of the policeman's equipment in the Japanese capital.

Instructions issued with the revolver say that they are to be used only in cases of great emergency. Up to now the Japanese police have been armed only with short swords.

Don't Squeeze Blackheads—Dissolve Them

Squeezing and pinching out blackheads make the pores large and cause irritation. Blackheads are caused by accumulations of dust and dirt and secretions from the skin, and there is only one safe and sure way and one that never fails to get rid of them—a simple—way, too—that is to dissolve them. Just get from any drug store about two ounces of peroxine powder—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly for a few seconds—wash off, and you'll be surprised to see that every blackhead has disappeared, and the skin will be left soft and the pores in their natural condition.

AN AFRICAN PRINCESS HAS DIED A GERMAN

Her husband was a Hamburg merchant who was in trade in Zanzibar and married her there long before Zanzibar was given by Germany to the British in exchange fo Heligoland.

First Farm Sale.

The first farm sale of the season took place at Clydesdale on Monday, when Frank Scott sold out. Stock fetched fairly good prices, cows going from $25 to $40, fall pigs $13 each, horses $140. Implements also sold well. Frank Scott is moving to Lakefield.

Motored to Peterboro.

The intrepid George Stephens essayed the trip to Peterboro by motor on Saturday, and was successful in getting through. He returned to Apsley on Sunday, and was down again on Monday with his big truck, returning the same day.

Thunder, lightning, rain, hail, sleet and snow was the programme broadcast by the elements on Saturday, and on Tuesday a big snowstorm raged. As a consequence, sleighing is again the means of locomotion.

Miss Ray, of Lakefield, very kindly sent Mr. Spence a quantity of clothing for the fire sufferers last week, which he has despatched to the victims, and Which it is needless to say will be very welcome.

Arrangements are being made by a Toronto firm to collect cream from this district. Patrons will have to deliver in Apsley, from whence a motor truck will convey the cans to the shipping point.

William Johnston and family have rented the Smith farm, a mile south from the village, and moved in on Monday last.

A PIONEER HERE HAD LONG LIFE

Andrew Lackie Was Ninety-Five Years of Age

MILLBROOK, April 4.—The late Andrew Lackie, who passed away on Sunday, March 30th, at the advanced age of ninety-five years, was a native of the north of Ireland, coming to this country in his young manhood when but eighteen years of age. The journey was made by sailing vessel and occupied thirteen weeks, and as may be imagined, was an adventurous voyage especially when compared with the ease and speed with which the trip from the old country is made to-day.

Both the late Mr. Mackie, and his wife, whose maiden name was Susannah Mahood, belonged to families which crossed the ocean at the same time and were of that sturdy pioneer stock which made this country what it is to-day. Their marriage took place some time after their arrival in Canada and they made their first home in Monaghan township. Here they cleared the land and gradually and with much patient toil, built up a homestead. Later they lived in Emily, and in Smith townships.

To their union three daughters, and four sons were born, one of the later, Mr. Edward Lackie, whose home was at Toledo, Ohio, having predeceased his parents, Mrs. Lackie passed away before her husband, her death occurring last June, at the ripe age of ninety-one years. Longevity is apparently a characteristic of both families, Mrs. Lackie's eldest sister, the late Mrs. Whyte, of Peterborough, living until she had reached her ninety-seventh birthday.

Deceased was a life-long Presbyterian, and in his earlier years intimately connected with the Orange Order. Of recent years, as the infirmities of age became more pronounced, he made his home with his nephew, Mr. Hamilton Lackie, of Cavan, where his death took place.

The immediate survivors are his three daughters, Mrs. M. King, of Stratford, Mrs. Wesley Pascoe, and Miss S. Lackie, of Toronto, and three sons, Messrs. Robert and Jas. A. Lackie, of Toronto, and Alexander of Detroit.

The funeral took place from the residence of his nephew, Mr. H. Lackie, on Tuesday, April 1st, and was as largely attended as the state of the roads would permit. Rev. A. H. McConnachie, of Centreville, and Rev. R. M. Paterson, of Fraserville, had charge of the services, the pallbearers being: Messrs. James and Robert Lackie, of Toronto, James Lackie, of Cavan, L. Moore, William Hutchison, and Howard McFee.

Interment was in the Fraserville cemetery.

A PRESENTATION AT FRASERVILLE.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Kidd and Family Are Moving Away—Will Be Missed.

FRAZERVILLE, April 4. — The people of Fraserville and surrounding community gathered in the church to do honor to one who has long been a resident and servant of the community. Mr. Kidd was for many years until his health failed him an efficient blacksmith. Mrs. Kidd has been storekeeper, post mistress, station agent, and active in church work, being for many years organist in the church. The Sunday school class of which Jean is a member, presented her with a ring after which the following address was read Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Kidd and family:

Dear Friends: Having learned of your intended removal from our midst, and realizing how much you will be missed, we felt that we could not permit you to go without showing in some tangible way our esteem for you. Your constant cheerfulness and right good will, as well as your willingness to serve your friends in every way possible have endeared you to the heart of every one. You have been carrying a very heavy burden and we sincerely hope and pray that our loving Heavenly Father may continue to sustain you in the years before you. We cannot express in words our regret that you feel compelled to leave here. You have become such an important factor in the life of the community. Your efforts to serve have extended even beyond this community to an ever widening circle of friends who more and more learn to know your true worth. We of the Methodist church will have even greater reason to regret your going. Your faithful, loyal and cheerful service as organist has been a help to a degree that only time will bring to us its full significance. Not only as organist but in every other place you have rendered efficient and cheerful service, and we will find it exceedingly difficult to fill the place you have occupied in our midst. It is a significant fact that everyone wished to do something for you. As one person remarked: "Everyone owes Mrs. Kidd a present." We realize that comparing a gift with what we owe you, it seems almost nothing, but no one can estimate the value of your services here. Therefore we ask you to accept from your many friends this purse as a slight token of the esteem in which you are held, and be assured that with this goes our united prayers that health, happiness and prosperity may be your lot and the lot of those whom you hold most dear.

Signed on behalf of your many friends, W. A. Ward, W. D. Moncrief, Fred Elliott, Fred Lucas, R. M. Patterson.

After the presentation everyone was directed to the Orange hall where a dainty lunch was served by the ladies. The remainder of the evening was spent in complimentary addresses and a social time generally.

Mr. and Mrs. Kidd intend moving to Toronto where their many friends hope that success, happiness and prosperity may be their lot.

JOHNNY CUT-OUT IN TROUBLE

His mother rubbed all the dirty marks off his face .

The Cut-Out family was peculiar. They never did anything like anybody else.

The Cut-Out gentleman was a dude, to begin with. Kike all the rest of his family he had cut out of a fashion magazine, and his clothes were a marvel!

And his wife! She set the fashion for everything in Doofunny land, and if she had chosen to wear her shoes on her head, I am perfectly sure that everybody else would have been doing the same thing inside of an hour and a half.

Here are some of the things they did. They slept in their clothes, and Mister Cut-Out didn't even take off his silk hat when he retired. Besides he insisted on taking his walking stick to bed with him.

Of course his clothes got wrinkled and he had to be ironed out—in fact they all did. A big book was the family clothes press, and an hour or two in that freshened them up wonderfully.

The Cut-Outs never had washing day. Instead they had, once a week, a rubbing-out day when Mrs. Cut-Out took a clean eraser and rubbed all the soiled spots off their paper clothes.

And the little Cut-Outs were the luckiest children ever, because they never had to have their faces washed in the morning for school. The whole family disliked water worse than cats.

Well, one morning Johnny Cut-Out got up and got ready to go to school. His mother rubbed all the dirty marks off his face and hands with her eraser and started him off.

"Do you know your lesson, Johnny?" she called after him.

"Yes, mother," replied Johnny.

"What is it, Johnny?" asked his mother.

"Use Smith's ink! Ten cents a bottle," recited Johnny, for the place where he had been cut out of the magazine was an advertisement.

So away went Johnny to the Doofunny School run by plain Miss Pithers, the yarn lady.

Now the Doofunny School was like lots of other schools. It had some good boys and some who were not so good, and a few who were as bad as they could be.

And as Johnny Cut-Out, in his spick and span clothes, was one of the good boys, the bad boys all hated him and made fun of him, I'm ashamed to say.

To-day, as he went walking along he kept saying his lesson over and over to himself. "Use Smith's ink—ten cents a bottle. Use Smith's ink—ten cents a——"

Suddenly there was a great splash gnd a shout, and poor Johnny Cut-Out was covered with ink from head to foot.

"Sure, we'll use Smith's ink," yelled some dreadful voices. "It cost ten cents a bottle, but we don't mind that."

Johnny ran back home as fast as he could go, completely ruined from head to foot.

"Oh, whatever shall I do, Johnny?" cried his mother. "My eraser won't take that off and no amount of new clothes will cover your face. You'll be a black boy as long as you live."

"Soak him in sour milk," advised Nancy.

And Mrs. Cut-Out did and it took all the ink off.

(To Be Continued.)

FABLES ON HEALTH

LET MOLASSES FLOW

When Johnny came home from school, jingling a pocketful of marbles, Mrs. Mann decided it was time to run to the cupboard and inspect the molasses supply.

In the family scrapbook she knew she would find the "molasses and sulphur" recipe handed down from grandma's time as part of the spring programme.

While the seemingly simple remedies of grandma's day frequently had considerable merit, modern methods dictate different application at times.

The old form of mixing up a batch of molasses and sulphur and stuffing it down the youngster's throat was undergone a change.

Molasses is recognized as a fine, nourishing food and appears too infrequently upon the family board. It has a laxative value that is worth consideration and it can be given to the children without sulphur.

It is advisable to give it separately from the sulphur, when the latter is used, and may be served spread on bread or buns. It is also recommended that the sulphur be served with some other food, and then not in too large quantities.

But parents who wait until spring to get their children acquainted with molasses make a mistake.

Time brings improvements. Conditions of life have changed since grandma's time.

LET THE MILK FLOW

Two of Mr. Mann's youngsters turned up their noses at the very mention of milk.

"Well, you know, mother, there are lots of things I won't eat and I never would drink milk," Mr. Mann would say.

"Maybe that's one of the troubles with the children," commented the wise Mrs. Mann. "They probably heard you say something about milk, and never have forgotten it. All it would take to get them drinking it would be a little encouraging, with some talks on milk generally."

The importance of good, clean milk in the successful growth and development of the child cannot be overestimated.

There is generally a reason behind why children do not like milk, and mothers and fathers should leave no stone unturned to find out what it is and forever kill the prejudice.

It is, of course, very important that the milk be uncontaminated, for many epidemics, bringing sickness and death, have been traced to poor milk. But if your city has a careful inspection system there should be little ground for worry or fear.

Give the children plenty of fresh, rich milk. Milk with cream in it. In the long run it is one of the cheapest of health bringers. If you have to cut expenses elsewhere, don't deny the children their milk.

HUDSON BAY LINE IS TOO FAR NORTH

MONTREAL, April 4. — If it were located in Southern latitudes, the construction of the Hudson Bay Railway would be of great benefit to the Canadian West, but unfortunately such was not the case, said L. C. Nesham, A.T.S.I.C., in an address before the Engineering Institute here last night. Mr. Nesham told how he had spent six months at Port Nelson and described the country through which the railway would have to pass from The Pas to Port Nelson as a continuous muskeg.

About fifty per cent of the ground was frozen all the year to a depth of 25 feet while the rest thaws in summer.

It had to be remembered that the railway would be a grain route only; prospects of any revenue from the country traversed he declared not to be bright.

In conclusion, Mr. Nesham said: "Our western friends when the question is brought up immediately raise the question that eastern ports and maritime interests are against the scheme because it will hurt their business. If they are against the scheme so much the better for the principal traffic on the Hudson Bay railway so far has been and apparently continues to be, votes.'

POLICE LOOK FOR STOCK BUCKETERS

NEW YORK, April 4.—(Canadian Press).—Detectives left for Chicago last night with bench warrants in search of four men against whom a grand jury yesterday returned 30 indictments for bucketing orders of the New York Stock Exchange firm of E. W. Wagner and Company, which closed its offices in 41 cities in December, 1921, and failed for $10,000,000.

The bench warrants named Emil W. Wagner, directing head of the firm; Frank W. Donaldson, manager of its main office at Chicago; Charles A. Johnson, manager of its New York branches; and Ernest Tietjens, the concern's chief financial adviser.

Before its failure, E. W. Wagner and Company was one of the most active brokerage firms in America. It had membership in the New York Stock Exchange, the New York Cotton Exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade.

With a main office in Chicago and two branches in New York, it operated in 39 other big cities.

The indictments charge that heads of the firm swindled its customers by trading against them through a system of 12 "house accounts." Colossal sums were alleged to have passed through these accounts. Investigators for the District and Federal Attorneys were reported to have told the grand jury that in two years of delving through as many of the firm's records as they could find, they were unable even to estimate the extent of its transactions. One house account alone was "short" $20,000,000 at one time, they testified.

There were 30 complainants against heads of the bankrupt brokerage firm—men and women in all walks of life—a patent lawyer, the president of an ice company, a theatrical producer, a brother of an assistant district attorney, a motion picture actress, a jeweller and several of the Wagner firm's own employees.

The Armours in Chicago and Charles Chaplin were said to have been customers of the bankrupts. Morris Friedburg, Detroit jeweller, claimed he was swindled out of $400,000 in a deal for Willys-Overland stock. William H. Bohlever charged he was defrauded of thousands of dollars in a Famous Players-Lasky Corporation stock transaction.

DISLIKE JURY SERVICE

Irish Women May Be Allowed to Avoid it if They Wish.

DUBLIN, April 4.—Irish women now have the same rights and liabilities as men to serve on juries. For the most part they do not like it, and there is a bill before the Dail Eireann proposing to strike off the jury lists the names of all women objecting to such service. This has provoked a protest from the Irish Woman's Citizen Association, but general opinion favors permitting those woman wishing it to stay at home and attend to the children.

Kevin O'Higgins, supporting the proposed change in the Dail, said that the woman juror was not an out standing success, and this provoked the retort from the Labor benches: "Is the woman voter a success?"

Mr. O'Higgins replied that he would not like to answer that question "in public."

Annual Meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society--Young People Met.

MILLBROOK, April 4.—The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church was held on Tuesday afternoon—Mrs. L. Rea and Miss A. Hampton extending the hospitality of their home for the gathering. About twenty-five members were present, a good showing when the stormy weather was considered, many of the older people and those from the country being prevented from attending.

The retiring vice-president—Mrs. R. H. Edmunds—occupied the chair for the opening period, Mrs. A. J. Brown reading the scripture lesson from the 27th Psalm. The secretary, Mrs. Ross Edmunds, in her report, stated that eight regular meetings were held during year, with an average attendance of twenty-four, and there had been one special meeting. Among the activities mentioned was the sending of seven baskets of cheer to shut-ins at Christmas, a number of entertainments held under the auspices of the Aid, though the financial side of these, owing to unfavourable weather and short time for advertising, as well as the heavy expense involved in some cases, was not as encouraging as in former years. Domestic sales had been held instead of the usual church dinner and entertainment last fall, and the upkeep of the parsonage had been attended to. The painting of the latter, which was decided upon last year, was unavoidably postponed, but the money is in the bank and the trustees will be asked to have the work done as soon as the weather will permit.

The treasurer, Miss Duncan, reported a total of nearly $400 raised during the year, and a balance now on hand of $116.61. The practice of taking a collection at each Aid meeting recently decided upon, had increased the finances, and as a source of income will help swell the total monies raised considerably by the end of another year.

Rev. S. T. Tucker took the chair for the election of officers, which resulted as follows:—

President—Miss M. Needham.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. A. J. Brown.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. J. M'Knight.
Secretary—Mrs. Ross Edmunds.
Treasurer—Miss M. Duncan.
Organist—Mrs. B. R. Raper.
Parsonage Committee—Mrs. R. H. Edmunds (convener), Mrs. G. E. Burnham, Mrs. J. L. Byam, Mrs. P. Stinson, and Mrs. G. Locke.
Visiting Committee—Mrs. S. T. Tucker, Miss M. Widdis, Miss A. Hampton, and Miss Pearl Burnham.
Social Committee—Mrs. C. Garside (convener), Mrs. T. H. Aiken, Mrs. W. F. Fallis, Mrs. O. Williamson.

A hearty vote of thanks to the officers of last year, for their faithful and efficient services, was moved by Miss Burnham and seconded by Miss S. Dean, and carried unanimously.

Miss Hampton and Mrs. Rea, assisted by a committee, served delicious refreshments, and a very pleasant social hour was enjoyed before and Mrs. J. L. Byam moved and seconded the unanimous vote of thanks to the hostesses for their hospitality. Miss Hampton, replying on behalf of her sister and herself, expressed their pleasure in entertaining the Aid, and their personal enjoyment of the occasion.

There are sixty-nine names enrolled in the Aid at present, only one member being removed by death during the past year.

Young People Meet.

The Young People's League, on Monday evening, was taken charge of by the "Wide Awake" Group of Canadian Girls in Training, the series of slides covering the various phases of work with the 'teen age girls, from twelve to seventeen years, throughout Canada being shown.

There are over thirty thousand Canadian Girls in Training now enrolled in the Dominion, and many girls in the United States are following a somewhat similar programme, called the "Girls' Reserve Programme," but Canada has the honor of having originated the organized work among the 'teen age boys and girls, and our cousins to the south have really copied from our plan.

The hymns chosen, "Jesus calls us o'er the tumult," "Faith of our fathers," and the C.G.I.T. hymn "Now we unite to pledge a new allegiance," are among those included in the list with which the girls are to learn the story of during the year. While the slides were being shown, the president(Marjorie Sayles) MMM president (Marjorie Sayles) read the poem, "My Quest," by Mary S. Edgar; and Gladys Tucker, after enumerating some facts in connection with C.G.I.T. work, read "My Purpose," by the same author. The secretary, Jean Burnham, gave a list of the helpful activities of the Group throughout the year, and as the camp scenes were shown, the leader explained that the Group here are trying to raise sufficient funds to send two of the girls to a training camp this summer, over forty dollars being required for the purpose. The Group has now on hand over thirty-five dollars, and it is expected that the remaining amount will be made up by the time it is needed.

Miss May Gemmel, who represents the Presbyterian Church as Girls' Work secretary, paid an official visit to Millbrook last fall and gave much helpful information. Miss Mary R. Allison, B.A., is the newly-appointed Girls' Work secretary of the Methodist Church for Canada, and it is hoped to have her visit Millbrook in her official capacity some time during the year and address the Girls' Groups, conducting an initiation service and giving demonstration of Group games and other activities.

DOWNING STREET BUILT BY SIR GEORGE DOWNING.

LONDON, April 4.—Few people, even the English themselves, are aware that Downing Street, famous as the official residence of British Prime Ministers for nearly 200 years, is named after a man named George Downing, who passed the greater part of his life in America.

Having accumulated a fortune on the other side he returned to England in his latter years and entered Parliament. He became a baronet and was a great favorite of Charles II., who gave him the land in Whitehall upon which he built the famous street.

"COMMUNIST EASTER" PLANS

Moscow Anti-Religious Propaganda Avoids Street Carnivals.

LONDON, April 4.—According to the Moscow Izvestia, the Central Committee of the League of Communist Youth has worked out a programme for a "Communist Easter." This includes an extensive campaign of anti-religious propaganda to be conducted in all party clubs and "nuclei," as well as among "non-Communist youth."

The propaganda is to assume the form of lectures and conferences. No anti-religious street carnivals are being arranged.

Spring Poets

This is open season for spring poets. Hunting laws vary, but in most states the bag limit is not more than two a day.

Memory turns backward at this time of year. Older readers will recall James B. Elmore, "the sweet singer of Alamo, Indiana." Jim was the master poet of his generation. We reprint the spring poem that skyrocketed him into national fame, years ago:

In the spring of the year,
When the blood is too thick,
There is nothing so rare
As the sassafras stick.
It cleans up the liver,
It strengthens the heart,
And to the whole system
New life doth impart.
Sassafras, oh, sassafras!
Thou art the stuff for me,
And in the spring I love to sing,
Sweet sassafras, of thee.

In our long and checkered literary career, we have read thousands of spring "pomes," but never one that excelled Jim's gem. Its tender sentiment, its profound understanding, its universal human appeal place it for all time on a pinnacle by itself.

* * *

Jim Elmore, master of delicate sentiment, became so famous in his generation that he was called on to write for the telegraph wires, about leading news events.

Here's one verse from his poem, "The Great Monon Wreck":

And yonder in the wreck I see
A man that's pinioned down by the knee,
And hear him calmly for to say,
"Cut, oh, cut my leg away!"

To the prohibition movement, Jim contributed a gem:

And he who drinks the fiery cup
Will come to saddest woes;
For, as he takes each dainty sip,
'Twill blossom on his nose.

Elmore was unique among the general run of poets, in that his poems actually contained ideas — thought. How do you like his work? It was so popular, it made him rich and famous. Yes, literature is a peculiar game.

DISOWNS FAWNS TOUCHED BY THE HAND OF MAN.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, April 4.—(United Press) Despite the fact that it is rapidly becoming a domesticated animal, may be herded like cattle and is used to contact with man, the reindeer will disown any fawn which has been handled by man, says William T. Loop, superintendent of Alaska Echool, Medical Reindeer Service of the Department of the Interior.

"The first I learned of this was when, up near Point Barrow, we had a reindeer cow, which fawned in the coral. So tickled were myself and wife over the new arrival that we fondled it and petted it lavishly. When we told the Eskimo herder of it, he asked if we had put our hands on it. Being answered in the affirmative, the herder told me the mother would disown the calf. We put it to a test, but she refused to allow it to nurse or come near her. We hand-fed it for a time, but it succumbed.

"During the fawning season the Eskimos provide themselves with long reindeer hock gloves, that are deodorized, with which to handle the fawns necessary to be carried along, if the herd is moving and the baby reindeer are weak. The fawn is laid upon a fresh reindeer skin in the sled and never touched with the naked hand."

GIRL HAS MANIA FOR EATING OWN HAIR

Three-Pound Ball Removed From Her Stomach.

SHERMAN, Texas, April 3.—Miss Myrtle Smith, 18 years old, of this city, who a year ago was considered one of the prettiest among Sherman's high school girls, now is nearly as bald as a billiard ball and will remain that way for some time to come.

Time was when Myrtle's well-shaped head was covered with a growth of thick, wavy tresses that reached nearly, if not quite, to her waist-line when let down. Of late she has worn her hair shorter, and her bblack curls would have been pretty enough if their length had not been so irregular.

In her early girlhood, it seems, Miss Smith formed the unique habit of eating the hair from her head. She was continually biting off her hair and swallowing the ends. She was frequently reprimanded in school for indulging in this strange habit. However, her appetite for hair grew until she would pull large strands of hair from her head, wad them up in a ball and swallow it with evident relish. When scolded she would often cry and declare she could not resist the temptation to bite off and eat her own hair.

One day last week she became violently ill. She was taken to a Dallas hospital, where an X-ray examination revealed the cause of her strange illness. The X-ray photo showed a large ball of some strange substance in her stomach. An operation followed. Three pounds of hair were taken from her stomach.

When the surgeons were told of the strange habit Miss Smith had formed, a skillful barber was called in and another operation was performed, that of shaving the girl's head. The shaving process will be continued every ten days until the girl's habit is broken. Doctors declare they never before had known of a girl eating her own hair.

The moon's orbit around the earth is in the form of a serpentine curve.

GERMAN ALMANAC RECOGNIZES THE DETHRONED KING.

Refuse to Surrender the German Prerogative of Supplying the Rest of Europe With Kings—Tabulate Already Fallen Among Immortals.

BERLIN, April 4.—(Associated Press).—American women of wealth whose names appear in the Almanac de Gotha are mentioned in such an unpleasant manner in the German reviews of the new issue of the publication, that little encouragement is offered them to sacrifice their fortunes to the rehabilitation of medieaval castles and decayed titles.

There has been rumors that the Almanac de Gotha was about to be discontinued, and European nobility was in a great funk. Without the almanac the hordes of princesses, dukes and couns in Europe would have been lost. They could with difficulty establish their social position, lacking a pedigree certified by the almanac.

But is isn't true that the Almanac de Gotha is suspending. The German issue for 1924 is already out, and the French edition is in preparation. Germany still has hopes of supplying Europe with kings and queens in future generations, and the publishers of the celebrated volume declare they have not thought of stopping the publication of the Who's Wh, in Noble Circles.

In its discussion of the new issue of the almanac, the Berlin Mittags Zeitung remarks upon the marriage of Prince Erik of Denmark to a Canadian heiress, and says the Canadians are now joining the Americans in the "victory route." The newspaper continues:

"It is true that the war brought about many divorces of American women who had joined European princes and counts in order to embroider a coat of arms upon their underwear, or to have it printed on their stationery, but it appears that in the long run titles and names are as attractive to American women as in former years. At least there are some new names added recently to the Almanac de Gotha list.

Americans may be interested to know that the Almanac de Gotha refused to mention the United States until 1824, because the new republic had no connection with the royal families of Europe. The first issue of the almanac was in 1763 and the first copy of the book which is available in the British Museum is dated 1774.

The Almanac de Gotha is strictly a German-made product, and refuses to surrender the German prerogative of supplying the rest of Europe with kings. For example, the Prince of Wied, who was the king of Albania for a few minutes before the war, is still carried in the almanac this year as "King of Albania." It would doubtless be great news to the warlike Albanians to hear that they still have a king, but the "House Wied" is solemnly proclaimed in the almanac of this year, and William Frederick Henry, Prince of Albabnia, and his children are faithfully tabulated among the immortals.

Examine Linoleum for Yourself —Then Buy it with Assurance

Swatch reproductions above are of three popular Dominion Linoleum Rugs; those opposite are of Dominion Linoleum by the yard.

IT is easy to tell genuine Linoleum—the high grade modern floor covering. But if you do not protect yourself by following these simple tests you may easily be fooled.

Always turn over a piece of linoleum or a linoleum rug and make sure that it has genuine burlap backing—all real linoleum has. Then look at the edge—it should have a natural brown tint, much like an ordinary, unused cork.

Nowadays it is well to be careful in buying linoleum, for there are many products on the market that look like it, but which have neither burlap nor cork in their make-up. And if you buy, and do not get real linoleum you will probably be disappointed.

Linoleum is made of cork, oxidized linseed oil, kauri gum and other materials pressed firmly into a backing of strong, tough burlap. The processes used combine to make a floor covering that is very smooth, durable, clean and highly sanitary. For every type of floor it is ideal.

You can buy linoleum by the yard or in the form of rugs, in sizes to suit all rooms. Write us today for rug folder in colors, showing patterns that will please you. Or your nearest house furnishing store will show you the actual patterns of

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

CATARRHAL CONDITIONS.

If catarrh could be banished from the catalogue of human ills, probably more people would rejoice over it than over any other one cause. While it may be called a seasonal attack in many cases, in others it seems to be almost perennial.

The lungs are composed of an immense number of alveoli (air cells), which connect with the outer air by means of, or through, the bronchial tubes. These tubes begin microscopic in size, uniting with others and increasing in size until they enter the trachea (windpipe). At this point, the bronchus (air tube for each lung) begins.

These little alveoli (air cells), all the bronchial tubes, and the windpipe, throat, mouth and nose, are lined with a mucous membrance. There is a direct connection through all these different parts of your breathing apparatus. If one part is affected the others share in the condition. So you may see how important it is to keep your air intake in a good healthy condition.

Catarrh is usually called any inflammation of this mucous lining which increases the mucous discharge above the normal amount. When this condition is neglected and allowed to "hang on" for months, the tissues become weakened and readily yield to any pus germs which happen along this important "airway."

In the change from one season to another, be sure and wear proper clothing. Profuse perspiration, with rapid chilling of the body surface must be avoided. Don't neglect a slight cold a single minute. Be careful that wet feet don't start nasal catarrh. Catarrhal conditions may ruin your whole life.

EYESIGHT OF CHILDREN.

The eyes of school children are their greatest asset.

In many cities and school districts, a school physician is now regularly employed to make a careful health examination of all the children. No more important act than the careful axamination of the children's eyes could be possible. But often the examination is merely cursory and fails to detect the bodily conditions which produce bad eyes, red and swollen lids, lack of centered attention, restlessness, headache and squinted vision.

If the physician finds any of these defects he should have the child carefully examined at once by a competent oculist. If the oculist decides that glasses are needed by ths child, have them furnished at once. Years of acute suffering and pehaps loss of one's life's ambition may often be avoided by corrected bodily habits in connection with the use of proper glasses in time.

It is well to think earnestly about the eyesight of your children, long before they take the path to the school house. Early corrective measures may avoid the sorrowful after-times.

Avoid having a bed so placed that a child on awakening in the morning has the sunlight full in its eyes.

Insist on clean hands and carefully washed eyes, with a weak solution of boric acid at frequent intervals. Start early in life to teach the children the importance of being prompt and regular in bowel movement. Always remember that any small objective work, or using the eyes at close range in poor light, must be avoided. Never allow your child to use the same towel, handkerchief or anything which a playmate has had in his mouth.

Received Exemption

Farmers residing within the corporation of the Town of Cobourg have been given exemption from a portion of their taxes through action taken by the town council. Eleven farmers have received exemption, amounting to 2.91 mills and four have received exemption amounting to 1.13 mills. These exemptions have been made because it is contended that farm lands should not be taxed for water, lighting, sewers and other local improvements, which are not of personal benefit to farmers, and which are a convenience and benefit to other ratepayers of the town. When the town of Cobourg was first laid out the centre of the town was a mile and a half from the present four corners, being where the Home for the Aged, formerly the old county jail, stands. Later, the settlement was more along the lakefront. Hence there is quite an acreage of farm lands within the corporation limits.

Located Still

Inspector George Goodrich and Provincial Constable Cousans went out to Franklin in the northern part of Manvers Township where they found a still in the house of James Whiteside. The still was confiscated and taken to the Department of Inland Revenue at Port Hope. Whiteside came up before Magistrate W. H. Floyd and was fined $200 and costs. The fine was paid.

Missionary Luncheon at Trenton

A noon missionary luncheon was held at Wesley Church, Trenton, last Tuesday, which was largely attended by ministers and laymen from the Belleville, Brighton, and other districts. It covered the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward and East Northumberland. The Women's Missionary Auxiliary of Wesley Church, supplied the sumptuous luncheon that was enjoyed. The gathering was presided over by Rev. R. A. Whattam, president of the Bay of Quinte Conference. The speaker of the day was the general secretary of foreign missions, Rev. Dr. Endicott, of Toronto. By unanimous endorsement by those present, a resolution, moved by H. K. Denges, ex-M.P.P., Plainfield, seconded by Rev. F. E. Mallott, B.A., B.D., Belleville, pledged the representative assembly present to an earnest endeavor to bring in a clear sheet at the close of the year. Rev. J. M. Whyte, Eldorado; W. J. Johnston, Ivanhoe; Rev. Wm. Johnston, Rev. L. S. Wight, W. S. Gordon, C. H. Kerr and J. G. Frost, Tweed; Rev. J. W. Beck, Chas. W. French, Wooler; Rev. I. Snell, P. H. Osterhout, Frankford; F. W. Sutcliffe, Lindsay; Rev. A. H. Foster, Madoc; Rev. H. H. Matton, Fred Denges, T. R. Piester, E. R. Ireland, Ezra Bedal, Smithfield; Rev. W. E. Honey, Sidney; Rev. J. W. Bunner, H. Richards, Stockdale, were some of those present, beside many from Belleville, Trenton, Price Edward County and other places.

Softball League

At a meeting held here it was decided to organize a softball league for this season. All teams intending to join are requested to hand in their names to the secretary before April 15. A representative from each club will be appointed also to comprise the executive committee. On April 16 a meeting will be held to draw up a schedule. The following officers were elected: Hon. presidents, W. H. Dundas, Dr. E. W. Hayden, A. L. Jex, Mayor Boggs and George R. Strong; president, Judd Kennedy; vice-president, George Rothwell; secretary, Archie Cochrane; treasurer, A. E. Cauley.

RADIO NEWS

A strip of tin foil one inch in length and three-quarters of an inch in width is cut into prongs resembling the teeth of a hair comb. The strip is rolled into a small tube or cylinder, and placed in the catswhisker support of the crystal detector. With the 'teeth' spread apart and resting on the crystal it makes an improvement over the ordinary whisker.

Some Causes of Interference

Interferenee in a radio set is often due to the action of a simple electric device in the home. A toy electrical train may become a miniature transmitter of radio waves, a defect in an arc light or in an electric power transformer, such as is found on many electric poles, X-ray machines, passing trolley cars, motors in factories vacuum cleaners and other electrical devices cause interference, although fortunately these disturbances mostly are limited to a very small radius.

Aerial Intelligence

An outside aerial should be inspected at least twice a year. Insulators covered with soot and dirt should be cleaned thoroughly with a brush and gasoline. A layer of soot on the aerial, along the insulators to the pulley and thence to the pole or other supports, allows a lot of energy to leak off the aerial. If it can be afforded, it would be a good investment to replace the corroded and blackened aerial wire with bright new wire. Enameled wire will not corrode and is worth while.

MAYOR TURNER WILL USE THE MARKET PLACE

Boys to Get Marbles and Girls to Receive Jacks at Two O'clock on Saturday--All Children Under 12 Years of Age Invited.

BIG OCCASION

At two o'clock on Saturday on the Market Square His Worship Mayor Turner will distribute marbles to boys and jacks to girls under twelve. The distribution has been arranged by Mayor Turner as a treat for the girls and boys and everyone under twelve in the city is expected to come for this present.

Arrangements have been made with a number of ladies and gentlemen to assist in the distribution, including Miss Brownscombe of the Y.W.C.A.; Miss Kathleen McCarthy of The Examiner staff; Leon Fraser of the Chamber of Commerce George H. Roper of the Y.M.C.A. D. Loomis of the Y.M.C.A.; Ross Dobbin, superintendent of the water works department; Alderman Stocker, Alderman Crowe and Reg. Turner.

The centre walk on the market square will be used, on which a plat form will be placed about 18 inches high with a step at each end. The boys and girls will come up on one end down the other, and as they pass the jacks, which are put up in neat bags of various colors, the girls will take a bag. The boys will reach into the bag of marbles and take a handful—just as much as each hand will hold.

Boys Practicing

Rumour says the boys have been practicing extending their fingers since Mayor Turner's announcement was made so a good big handful could be taken.

It was reported that 15,000 marbles had been obtained, but it was afterwards found that there were really 17,000. Now Mayor Turner has obtained 10,000 more, making 27,000 in all, to be sure there are enough to go around.

Provide for Shelters

Provision is being made to send a quantity of jacks and marbles to the girls and boys at the Children's Shelter and St. Vincent's Orphanage.

If the weather is fine it looks like a very happy time for children and grownups.

Over the top at 2 o'clock to-morrow on the market square!

PERFUME USED TO DENOTE AGE.

This Is a New Way of Telling Without Ever Taking a Peep at You.

NEW YORK, Apr. 4.—There's a new way of guessing your age and your size and your general characteristics without ever taking a peep at you—just by your choice of perfume.

If you are a flapper you probably use very strong perfume, with a conscious or unconscious desire to increase your powers of personal attraction.

If you are a slender woman, and you are crawling up in years, your choice is probably for some delicate flower.

Pungent oriental odors are the universal choice of the heavy type of woman.

These are some of the conclusions reached from a series of experiments in the psychology of smell, just completed by a New York department istore in co-operation with A. T. Poffenger, associate professor of psychology at Columbia University.

And the universal favorite among perfumes is found to be lilac. Here is the way the vote stood:

	Women	Men
First	Lilac	Lilac
Second	Oriental Bouquet	French Bouquet
Third	Jasmine	Jasmine
Fourth	French Bouquet	Oriental Bouquet
Fifth	Violet	Rose
Sixth	Rose	Violet

Older men, it was learned, are not so restrained in their tastes, but voted in a body for the stronger scents. Young men voted for delicate scents.

Tastes were determined by age and size rather than type or temperament. Neither did the occupation of the individual have any influence on her choice of perfume. Housewives, professional women and students seemed to have identically the same choices.

BRITISH NAVY TRIES TO SELL SINGAPORE BASE TO NATION

NEW YORK, April 4.—Bertrand Russell, English sociologist and mathematician, who arrived here Tuesday for a two month's lecture tour, believes that the world—and especially Europe—is in a bad way. The two chief ingredients of his prescription for bringing it back to a healthy state are a "proper" League of Nations and insistence on the part of the United States that France pay us the interest on her war debt.

"Great Britain's most serious situation at present is the French menace, augmented by France's increased air armament programme. MacDonald has done much more to ease the situation than Curzon could. Everything depends upon the forthcoming French elections. If the Left makes material gains, as is predicted by some, that will help matters.

Should Join League.

"The ultimate solution of all problems of the world is in a proper and all-embracing League of Nations," said Mr. Russell. "The present League is France under another name. The United States, Germany, Russia, and all of the other powers must be members of the new League, which must be able to decide things by a majority vote. At present, the vote has to be unanimous, and that is no good.

"There is one simple measure which America could take which would solve all European troubles at once. It would be quite an easy measure. United States should ask France to pay the interest on her debt. Either she would agree to pay and cut down on her expenditures for armaments and on the sums loaned be forced to Poland and the Little Entente, which would ease the situation, or she would refuse to pay. In that event she would be considered bankrupt and could no longer borrow money, and therefore could not carry out serious imperialistic designs.

Reconciled to Labor.

"The British Labor Government has been strengthened since it came into power, and is now liked by those who didn't expect to like it. It has been moderate and statesmanlike and hasn't alarmed anybody. British politics will gradually work toward the elimination of the Liberal Party. Labor will get about three-fourths of the present Liberals and the Conservatives the remainder. Power will oscillate between Labor and Conservative Governments for some time to come, in all probability.

"I should not be surprised to see a monarchy restored in Germany with the former Crown Prince at its head. France would permit this if sufficient pieces of Germany were lopped off and given to her, and she would make this the price of acquiescnce. England has not thought of taking action in opposition to Germany. We are so afraid of France that we don't want to oppose the Germans.

"It is quite possible that Germany and Russia may combine and sweep Western Europe and that this will cause the next great war."

WARKWORTH NEWS

WARKWORTH, Apr. 4.—At the regular meeting of the W. M. S. of the Methodist Church, which was held at the home of Mrs. J. C. Dixon, officers were elected for the following year, namely: President, Mrs. S. A. Kemp; 1st vice-president, Mrs. W. J. Harper; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Geo. McCleary; secretary, Mrs. J. C. Dixon; corresponding secretary, Mrs. T. G. Smith; treasurer, Mrs. G. B. Bowen.

A large number attended the Young People's meeting which was held in the Sunday school-room of the Presbyterian Church on Tuesday evening.

The whole programme was based on patriotism, but the main feature of interest was the mock parliament which held the listeners' interest from beginning to end.

Rev. S. A. Kemp was chosen as speaker, Rev. G. S. Hammond as leader of the government, and Mr. B. Buchanan was leader of the opposition.

The meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Jno. Herriott, Sr., on Wednesday afternoon. After the reading of the minutes by the secretary, Mrs. W. J. Harper, and business was discussed and settled, a good programme was given ,including an excellent paper prepared by Mrs. David Massey on work, worry and waste, after which a dainty lunch was served.

Mr. Earl Skinkle, who has spent most of the winter in Northern Ontario, returned home on Wednesday.

What's Best for a Bad Stomach?

Nine-tenths of all stomach trouble—indigestion, sourness, gas, pain, heartburn, etc., are caused by an excess of acid in the stomach.

Artificial digestents, such as pepsin, are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids, and instead neutralize the acid that has upset your stomach with a spoonful or two tablets of pure Bisurated Magnesia, taken with a little water. This instantly sweetens the stomach and stops the pain and discomfort and your food digests as nature intended. For quick positive relief from Acid Stomach

THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS HEARD MORE EVIDENCE ABOUT BANK PAYMENTS

Manning Doherty ecides Not to Submit is Motion That Hon. ter Smith Take the tand--Case Too Serious.

TORONTO, April 4.—(Canadian Press)—Before the Public Accounts committee of the Legislature this morning Hon. Manning Doherty, U. F.O. leader, said that he did not intend to submit his motion that Hon. Peter Smith, treasurer in the Drury government, be called to give evidence. "I had a motion prepared to call Mr. Smith after evidence about Provincial Securities Company and evidence of Mr Hart and Mr. Ross about their bond transactions had been given," said Mr. Doherty. "I had thought that Mr. Smith should have been given opportunity to have replied to implications in stories of these transactions but evidence since then has indicated that there will be more serious charges than I had expected. The matter has progressed, according to the Premier, to point whether international action is inevitable and even desirable to clean up everything. In view of this I think that I should not insist on the motion.

"Do you think the time has arrived when there should be criminal action?" asked Hon. W. H. Price, Provincial Treasurer. "I made no such statement, I was quoting others," replied Mr. Doherty.

A. E. Calvert, former assistant general manager of the Home Bank, when told what he knew of payment of one per cent. extra as commission on provincial deposits in Home Bank. He said that the general manager, J. C. Mason, had told him that it would cost the bank one per cent. extra to carry these deposits and that the Toronto branch would carry the cost.

"How was the amount determined?" asked Mr. Price.

"It was paid on three or four months' average deposit," was the reply.

Mr. Calvert remembered on one occasion that he had secured from the bank and handed Mr. Mason $3,500 in an envelope for payment of extra one per cent. to province. He had paid this to Mr. Mason in the latter's office in the Home Bank building.

After Mr. Mason had become ill witness had taken money up to his house on one occasion. This was also for payment on provincial deposits.

"Was there any one else there when you gave Mr. Mason the money?"

"No."

Mr. Calvert said that on one occasion Mr. Mason had asked him to make an appointment for him with Hon. Mr. Smith. Witness did not know if the appointment had been kept. Witness also stated that he had seen Mr. Smith in the Home Bank on three or four occasions. He thought these visits had something to do with commission paid on provincial deposits.

"Was he in the bank about the time these payments were supposed to have been paid?" "Yes."

"Did you see him after or before Mr. Mason had got the money handed to him?" "Sometimes before and sometimes after."

Questioned further about anything Mr. Mason may have said witness stated that Mr. Mason had said that these sums were for commission on Provincial deposits to be paid to the province through the Provincial Treasurer.

"Are you satisfied that this money went to the province?" asked Col. J. A. Currie.

"I could not swear as to that. I understood that the Provincial Treasurer got interest for the province," was the reply.

"What was your idea of the transaction. Did you protest?" asked Col. Currie.

"I can't say that I questioned it."

"Did you think Mr. Smith got the money?" asked Col. Currie.

"No I do not."

"Can you swear that Mr. Mason ever passed money to any one?" asked Hon. Mr. Doherty.

"No, I cannot," was the reply.

PAYROLL WAS SAVED

Pittsburg police received a tip that a Pennsylvania railroad pay train, carrying $400,000, was to be held up near that city. Superintendent of Police Edward J. Brophy and detectives hurried to the scene. They met the bandits. A running gun battle ensued. Brophy ordered the detectives' car to pull in front of the robbers'. The machines crashed and overturned. Brophy and five detectives and one of the bandits were seriously injured. Two other gunmen were captured in a hand-to-hand fight, a moment of which is here pictured.

Canadian Stock Exchange and Mines | New York Stock Exchange and Curb Prices

TO-DAY'S QUOTATIONS AND OPINION AND REVIEWS OF THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK, April 4. — The market maintains its firm tone and the rally has now extended for about 3 points for the average with the railroad shares especially strong. The report of increased dividend earnings has helped to fan the flame of interest in the railroads. The general market appears to lack any concerted buying power. It is not buoyant on the other hand lots of stocks have been covered. The upswing at the moment may well be in discount of the Dawes report on Germany's ability to pay reparations. Opinions at the close yesterday were that the upward swing in the price of rails had only started and was likely to continue for some time.

Market Opinions.

Clark Childs.—The Reading issues show strength. Buying of Great Northern ore is based on the official statement that the $2.00 dividend just declared is likely to be repeated in the fall.

Shonnard & Co. — The U. S. Steel report for the first quarter would be at the rate of last year's total earnings. There is no doubt in our mind that the extra dividend of 50 cents a share will again be declared.

Housman & Co. — For the present we favour trading on the long side of the Standard stocks which lately have been subjected to pressure.

Haller & Steiglitz. — We would begin to buy the speculative run of stocks on every good break from now on and at present levels. Sugars and oils are buys. Among the rails we prefer New York Central, Delaware, and Lackawana, and Atchison, and among the lower priced issues St. Paul Preferred, Pitt. and West Virginia, Northern Pacific, and New Haven.

THE MINING MARKET.

The Mining Market this morning continued the improvement noted yesterday, and nearly all the stocks were up from the opening. Transactions, however, were on a very moderate scale, the bulk of the trading being in Tough Oakes. This stock is down ten points from its recent high, and at this level is extremely attractive.

The Toronto and Montreal boards livened up this morning with Toronto Rails and Abitibi being the leaders, both showing good buying, and would not be surprised to see these two stocks extend their gains further. Rouyn gold broke into new low ground this morning, and from the action of the stock worse is still ahead of it.

FORESTERS MEET

Last night, in the Foresters' Hall on George street, a good class of new members was initiated into the Order of the Maccabees. Those taking part in the degree work were Sir Knight J. S. Clark, Commander, as King Antiochus and Appelles; Sir Knight R. Roode, Lieutenant Commander, as Judas; Sir Knight F. Darling, Past Commander, as Apostate Jew; Sir Knight H. Gilbert, Chaplain, as Eleazer and Matthias; Sir Knight G. Hawkes, Sergeant, as Soldier; Sir Knight B. Wright, 1st Master of Guard, as a Soldier; Sir Knight H. Harris, 2nd Master of Guard, as a Soldier; Sir Knight J. W. Deyell, Master of Arms, as a Soldier; Sir Knight H. Newland, Sentinel, as a Peasant; Sir Knight J. Robinson Picket, and Sir Knight R. Morrison, Record Keeper, as a Soldier.

It was decided in the business session that followed the initiation, on suggestion of Sir Knight T. Hall, chairman of the sick committee to have the social to be held on the 17 of this month take the form of a euchre party. The ladies offered to look after the refreshments and assist the Sir Knights in this respect

CITY MOTHERS ISSUE UKASE TO BAD MEN AND MODERN WOMEN.

COLUMBUS CITY, Iowa, April 4. — Eva Bretz, school-teacher-mayor of Columbus City and her cabinet of women, to-day served notice on all lawbreakers here to come into the fold or get out of town.

"We shall not tolerate bootlegging or any other form of lawbreaking," she declared.

Mayor Bretz is against bobbed hair and cigarettes for women.

Every elective office in town fell to the women. Two other teachers, Miss Mary Moore and Miss Nellie Moore, occupy the posts of treasurer and assessor respectively.

"We shall endeavor to show how a city should be run," Mayor Bretz told the United Press. "We don't want bootlegging, petting parties, the mixing of gin with automobiles, and I am opposed to women smoking cigarettes or bobbing their hair."

Mayor Bretz was for 18 years a schoolteacher and almost the entire county, which has at one time or another gone to school to her, is inclined to take her seriously.

TROPICS.

The people of the tropic are more active.

Our nation's trade with tropical countries has increased 130 per cent since 1913, while trade with countries outside the tropics gained only 75 per cent. This is partly a price hoax, for the figures represent higher selling prices instead of increase in actual physical volume of sales. But that doesn't affect the relative standing of tropical and non-tropical.

GAMBLING.

The securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange now total over 58 million dollars. These stocks and bonds represent property, organizations and business activity. To the average patron of stock exchanges, they represent merely chips in a gambling game—a game in which a fourth of our entire national wealth is in the "pot."

DOLLAR.

The whisky king, Sir John Stewart of Scotland, commits suicide. It's said he was swindled out of five million dollars by American bootleggers. They neglected to pay for the Scotch whisky he furnished for transport to America.

If Stewart had it to do over again, he'd put more faith in guarantees, and less in human nature. A Scotchman, trusting bootleggers with five million dollars, is surely the eighth wonder of the world.

LABOUR MEMBER TELLS KIWANIS OF PARTY AIMS

J. S. Woodsworth Outlines Rise to Power of Labor Party in England and Draws Parallel in Canada--International Scope.

EXPLAINS SOCIALISM

Association, co-operation and internationalization of ideas were some of the ideals presented by J. S. Woodsworth, labor member of the House of Commons, representing centre Winnipeg, in his address to the Kiwanis club to-day. In introducing the speaker, Joseph Wearing said he is one of the best parliamentary speakers in the house, voicing ideals with which, personally, he does not always agree, but worthy of a careful hearing.

Mr. Woodsworth expressed his pleasure in addressing the club in Peterborough and in fluent and virile language presented the story of the growth of the labor movement in England and its relation to the political and industrial situation in Canada. He pointed out the diversity of interests, industrial, national and political in Canada, and the difficulty met in striving to get together on a common basis to work out the countrys' problems.

Mr. Woodsworth said he had been asked to speak on the Labor movement in England, the suggestion coming from Deputy Speaker Gordon, and personally he thought a better idea of the scope of the Labor movement can be obtained by studying the Labor progress in England than in any other way.

Tracing the Labor movement back in England to 150 years ago, the speaker said that before that time all production was carried on in home workshops by individual effort. Then the introduction of machinery and the application of mechanical energy revolutionized the whole of the industrial processes and goods were turned out in a constant stream. Transportation was built up by mechanical power, and industry was no longer local but world wide. "The industrial revolution has never been sufficiently studied," he said, "and yet that industrial revolution of 150 years ago in England changed all civilization. The industrial worker had to give up his individual work and his independence and become a mere wage-earner. Now he works in another man's factory and gives his time for wages. Very often those who owned the factories took advantage of the position and the workers had to compete with their wives and children. It was a serious and trying era, and similar conditions prevail to-day in China and Japan."

Beginning of Unions.

Because of these conditions, and the individual helplessness of the workers, Mr. Woodsworth continued, they began to band themselves together, finding that in association with other workers they formed a force that commanded the respect of the foremen and employers. As with the beginning of the mechanical era the sphere of commerce extended across parochial and national boundaries, so the trade unions spread and nearly all the unions in Canada are adjuncts of United States unions.

Another line along which Labor moved was the formation of co-operative stores to eliminate the middleman, and this extensive movement has trained the rank and file of the labor people in business methods.

A third side is the educational movement that endeavors to bring the highest training within the scope of the working class.

The latest movement, that of the entry of labour into politics, had its origin in and drew strength from the three preceding movements.

"Labour is at times accused of representing only a class," the speaker said, "but it must be remembered that the older political parties arose as class movements. The Conservative Party represented the landed proprietors, and the Liberal Party the manufacturing and trading classes. The workers found that their interests were not always the same as those of the employer or the squire, and so the labour movement has arisen. The policy of the new Labour Party is essentially that of Socialism. To-day we no longer live as individual producers, but in collective communities. Labour people say since are living in association we must take the next step and have democracy in our national life. That is what Socialism is — democracy."

Labour Is International.

"I would like to mention the international spirit of labour. It is one thing that makes labour misunderstood. Industry is not confined within one narrow country—it extends over the international boundaries and is international in character. Capital is international and knows no patriotism; it goes wherever it gets the best rewards. Labour is not lacking in patriotism, but is stretching out to meet new ideals."

Concluding, Mr. Woodsworth declared: "Whilst I understand this club is devoting its interest to individual cases, such as attending to the needy in the city, I would suggest that the time has come when it is absolutely essential to recognise the necessity of getting down below the individual symptoms and realising the need of destroying the underlying disease."

Many Visitors.

Dr. Max Yelland and Lloyd Hamilton proposed the vote of thanks, which was heartily accorded the speaker.

The seating accommodation of the club quarters was taxed by a large number of visitors who were welcomed in the Kiwanian way. They included Rotarian F. J. Palmer of Akron, Kiwanian Vol Thompson of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Henry Kroeger of Akron, and a number of local men.

To-day's booster was Harold Perry, and the prize-winners were Alex. Dick, Martin B. Chenhall, and Dr. Max Yelland.

POLICE EXPECTED TORONTO HOLD-UP

Montreal Bandits Said to Have Made Plans for Another.

TORONTO, April 4.—(Canadian Press).—There was going to be another big bank messenger holdup in Toronto this month which the Montreal bandit gang had planned, it became known in police circles here to-day.

It is stated that the Toronto police have come into possession of reliable information about a proposed holdup and that the gang which was involved in the Bank of Hochelaga car robbery had made their plans to come to Toronto if the holdup in Montreal failed. It is said they planned to steal a limousine in Toronto, load the bottom of the car with bricks and heavy stones and drive it full tilt into the Toronto Bank car, figuring on injuring the bank guards and messengers and providing them an opportunity of stealing the money carried by the bank employees. Detective Walter McConnell, who arrived home to-day from Montreal, where he went Wednesday in connection with the suspects held by the authorities, stated that he identified two of the men and one woman under arrest as Ciro Nierri and Guisephe "Joe" Serafine, his wife Mary Serafine, as members of the armed gang arrested in a tooming house on Shuter Street, Toronto, February 1st. They were given a jail term for the illegal possession of arms, but the sentence was afterward suspended on condition that they keep away from the city.

The Thames, England's principal river, is 210 miles long.

A CIVIL ACTION HEARD COBOURG

Cooperage Firm Involved in Action for Damages to Apple Crop.

COBOURG, April 4.—In the action brought by Ira Edwards (plaintiff) v. Frank L. Webb (defendant) in the County Court of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham, upon which judgment was reserved, Judge Ward has found as follows:

The plaintiff, who has a large cooperage business at Colborne, Ontario, contracted with the defendant, who resided at Toronto, and was the owner of the orchards near Colborne, for the delivery at the orchards, as required, of 600 to 800 barrels for the season of 1920. This contract was dated September 14, 1920.

On the same day apparently, September 14, 1920, the defendant entered into a contract with one William Usher, of Colborne, in the following terms: "I, Frank L. Webb, hereby offer William Usher 50c per barrel to pick and pack my apples, tree run, for store, same to be put up between October 1st and October 20th; and 75c per barrel for those, such as cranberry pippins, for immediate spihment, to be put up as first and seconds, or as the purchaser demands." Accepted and signed by defendant and Mr. Usher.

Mr. Usher, who had evidently been instructed by the defendant, intended to pick the early fruit on September 20th, and called on the plaintiff on Saturday, September 18th and asked for barrels, and the plaintiff refused to deliver. Mr. Usher had, before this, engaged two men from Castleton, named Dawson and Hopkins, to assist him in the picking, and when the plaintiff refused to deliver barrels, Usher let the men go and obtained work for them with Mr. Robert Coyle. Mr. Usher decided to go to Peterborough on the morning of the 20th September, and when on the way to the station was informed by the plaintiff that he had delivered the barrels for the early fruit at the orchard. Mr. Usher told the plaintiff it was too late as he had let his men go.

The plaintiff admits that he did refuse to deliver barrels at Usher's request on the Saturday afternoon, but that he went to Usher's house that same evening and told him the barrels would be delivered on the Monday morning. Mr. Usher denies that the plaintiff saw him on Saturday evening.

The judgment next draws attention to the fact that only 20 barrels of early fruit was available, as that was the quantity eventually packed and picked. Further, that the defendant made no attempt to compel Usher, who is a responsible man to go on with his contract on 1st October, the plaintiff having in the meantime shown his intention of delivering the barrels under his contract.

The plaintiff, the judgment states, was wrong in refusing to deliver barrels when Usher notified him on the 18th of September, and he was wrong in trying to get from the defendant an increased price for the barrels, even though the defendant expressed his willingness in one of his letters to consider helping him out to the extent of 10c per barrel.

The defendant, in his counter claim, states he suffered following losses:—$750 for lost apples; 50c increased cost of packing apples; $12.40 for transportation; $63.20 for inferior apples.

The judgment goes in detail into the matter of alleged loss of windfall and of apples of inferior grade, and concludes with this finding:

I think, on the whole, that if five per cent. of the 206 barrels unpicked when the wind came, is allowed, it is quite sufficient, and I so find after careful consideration of the evidence. I also allow the item of $12.40 for transportation. I cannot allow the claim of $83.20 for inferior apples, as the defendant, according to Robert Coyle's evidence, suffered no loss, and he was allowed 10c per barrel by plaintiff on this account.

There will be judgment for the plaintiff against the defendant for $446.15, with interest and costs. Fifteen days' stay.

INVESTIGATORS PROVED SECRETARY TOLD A LIE

Strange Summing Up of Teapot Dome Case by Senator Moses.

PHILADELPHIA, April 4.—(Canadian Press).—Describing the Senate investigations at Washington as a "grotesque spectacle" United States Senator Moses of Newhamp shire told the Republican Women of Philadelphia in an address last night that the only thing the investigators have proved was that the "former secretary in the President's cabinet told a lie."

Senator Moses declared that the only testimony submitted to committees came from "dopes, drunks, and divorcees,' and dealt principally with the rumors regarding the alleged statements of the dead men.

DR. F. P. McNULTY GAVE AN ADDRESS ON GOITRE

A meeting of the Peterboro Chapter of the Graduate Nurses' Association of Ontario was held yesterday afternoon in the hall of the Public Library, with a good attendance. The president, Miss F. Dixon, occupied the chair. The appointment of a delegate to attend the annual convention of the Ontario Association, to be held in Windsor on April 26th and 27th, was not definitely decided.

The feature of the meeting was the address given on "Goitre" by Dr. F. P. McNulty, who spoke for nearly an hour on this important subject, in an interesting and instructive explanation of the causes and treatment of goitre of various kinds, illustrating his address with blackboard drawings, showing the formation and situation of the growths. The speaker centred his attention chiefly on ex-ophthalmic goitre, which affects the eyes and heart, causing abnormal protrusion of the eyeballs and cardiac palpitation. The doctor said that one of the principal causes of goitre was a lack of iodine in the system.

ROSENEATH FARM STOCK AUCTIONED

Good Prices Realized --Farm to Be Turned Into Summer Home.

ROSENEATH, April 4.—Mr. F. C. Shearer held an auction sale of his farm stock and implements on Wednesday last. Despite the bad condition of the roads, it drew a large crowd, and Auctioneer Noble procured very good prices. Mr. Shearer has sold his farm, and it is to be used for an American's summer home. He and his family will move to Harwood, May 1st, when he is to give up possession.

On account of stormy weather, the regular March meeting of the W.M.S. of the Methodist Church was held on Tuesday, April 1st, at Bethany Church.

On Monday evening about fifty met at the home of Mr. Ed. George to welcome him and his bride on their return from their honeymoon.

FOUND BODY OF WOMAN.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 4.—(Canadian Press).—A woman, believed by the police to have been murdered, was found with her throat cut and her wrists ripped open in a gulley in the outskirts of the city this morning. Two workmen found the body. No razor, knife or other instrument was found near the body. The woman was about 35 years of age.

THE ERRING WIFE AND MOTHER is the woman who sacrifices her health and consequent happiness to her ambition. We all know such women,—anxious that their homes shall be kept immaculately neat and attractive and their children well dressed they overdo and soon bring on some feminine ailment which is evidenced by nervousness, irritability, headaches, backache and other aches and pains attending such ills. Every woman should remember that the most successful remedy for such conditions is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which for fifty years has been restoring women to health, strength and happiness.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL

Richard Dix and Lois Wilson, in the feature picture, "Icebound," a William de Mille production, Larry Semon in his latest comedy release, "Trouble Brewing," and a vaudeville trio, "A Peach and a Pair," are the attractions at the Capitol Theatre for this week-end.

The vaudeville act is a mixture of singing, dancing and comedy, mostly dancing, in which the two men and the one feminine performer have a snappy, fast and furious line of rapid-fire dancing, in solo, duo and trio work. The lady wears some gorgeous gowns, and also a coster girl outfit for a "tough" number. The trio is distinguished by a brilliant display of clever footwork, in a brief appearance that is characterized by snap and vim.

A Mack Sennett comedy precedes the Larry Semon episode, in "Only One Love," a conglomeration of trouble for a philandering male. Larry, in "Trouble Brewing," got some good laughs last night in a picture that portrays his trials as a dry enforcement agent, in a very "wet" territory, in which the bootlegger is Larry's usual pal, his big, dark companion.

The feature picture, "Icebound," shows Lois Wilson as the heroine, Jane Crosby, and Richard Dix as the hero, Ben Jordan, youngest son of an "icebound" New England family. The characterizations in this production are well done. Alice Chapin is excellent as the stern, repressed mother, Sarah Jordan, who speaks from her death-bed of her expectant relation as "crow buzzards," and leaves her money to the poor relation, Jane, to use in helping Ben to a realization of his duty in life. John Daly Murphy plays the part of Henry Jordan, the elder grasping brother, and Edna May Oliver is Hannah, the "hired help," who adds a touch of humor to several scenes. Ella Jordan, a spinster sister, is played by Ethel Wales, and Vera Reynolds, Henry Jordan's step-daughter, Nettie, with whom Ben, seeking for some lightness and daintiness in his rigid surroundings, falls in love when she wears Jane's new gown, and Frank Shannon plays the role of Judge Bradford, the family lawyer, who loves Jane. The lady, however, prefers Ben, and the story outlines her efforts to make a man of him, and rescue him from the "icebound" Jordans.

'TEMPLE OF VENUS' GREAT BOOK FOR A MUSICAL PLAY

One Thousand Pretty Girls and Clever Plot Are Some of Attributes

NATURE IS AT ITS BEST

Phyllis Haver, Mary Philbin and David Butler are in Principal Roles

Picture drama and film comedy have been steadily taking important places in the Broadway Forties, but until now musical play has held its own individual rating. Of course, it can't be called motion picture musical comedy, but the Fox production of "The Temple of Venus" is the nearest approach to this of anything that has come to the screen. All it lacks is the music—and some enterprising author may supply that before the picture ends its popularity "The Temple of Venus" opened a 3-day run at the Regent Theatre, last night.

With a thousand beautiful Pacific coast bathing girls in the cast, which is headed by the shapely Phyllis Haver and Mary Philbin, the picture has its setting amid the elaborate splendor of Santa Cruz island in the Pacific ocean. Find a better combination than that for a musical comedy. Then, there is a couple of girls. They love the same man and there you are to start with.

Given a number at this point, called, let us say, 'I want to own an Island Where the Pretty Sprites Cavort"—David Butler, in the male lead could do wonders, if Dave can sing. But only the words count anyhow. Take "Yes, We Have No Bananas" for instance. Then Mary Philbin could follow with a number called "I'm Happy on the Isle with just Your Smile." And Phyllis could come along with "Don't Leave Me All Surrounded with but Water."

At any rate, Director Henry Otto has produced a lavish spectacle and the audience last night appeared to enjoy every foot of the film. Nobody's eyes were hurt, but many were obviously strained. No two of the thousand girls wear bathing costumes alike.

AT THE ROYAL

MARSHALL NEILAN'S 'MINNIE' EARNS CRITIC'S PRAISE.
Leatrice Joy and Matt Moore Featured in Remarkable Picture.

Too much cannot be said in favor of Marshall Neilan's new production, "Minnie," which was shown yesterday for the first time at the Royal Theatre. It is an Associated First National release.

It is real screen entertainment, with an excellent, human story and thrills aplenty, but its big quality is in its humorous situations. The audiences at the Royal roared with laughter time and again. Marshall Neilan has taken life in a small town country hotel and put the incidents on the screen in life-like fashion—nowhere does he exaggerate. Hence the spontaneous humor—the most enjoyable kind.

Leatrice Joy and Matt Moore are featured. The story centres around Leatrice Joy as Minnie, the slavey, drudge in her father's hotel. Minnie is homely, very homely, so much so that everybody tells her about her ugliness with a sneer. Minnie likes to dance, but she's clumsy. Minnie just loves to have a beau, but the beaux laugh and go elsewhere. That makes Minnie angry. She invents a beau. She writes love letters to herself and drops them where the gossips can find them. She writes passionate love letters which cause the gossips to raise their brows and murmur scandal. She sends herself flowers and big boxes of candy. But she overdoes the scheme. Her step-sister demands that Minnie produce the wealthy, ardent lover.

This backs Minnie into a deeper hole than ever. The things she does to square herself only make matters worse and they are so odd that an inquiring newspaper reporter, in the person of Matt Moore comes onto the scene.

Moore was never more enjoyable than in this picture. He is A very forgetful reporter, with a far-away look in his eyes, face covered with freckles, hair unkempt. He wears a coat four sizes too large.

The humor and tragedy of the story continue with the coming of Moore. But Neilan has done his work so well that it would not be fair to tell more of the picture. The great enjoyment of it comes in the surprises he has worked out.

Motion picture-goers will miss something if they don't see 'Minnie.'

MIDGET BALL LEAGUE HAS SIX TEAMS READY

Bantam Series Grooming Four But Intermediate and Junior Company Not Yet Settled—Junior Players Look For Financial Backing.

At the meeting of the City Baseball League held last night there was a good turn-out of baseball moguls and the prospects for the coming season look pretty good. The new president Mr. J. E. Sullivan was present and everything ran very smooth. Mr. T. H. McFadden, president of the Canadian General Electric Baseball Club, could not attend the meeting last night and nothing is known about the C.G.E. team and what they intend doing if an Intermediate City League can not be formed on account of not enough teams.

Mr. L. LeBarr who keeps in constant touch with the other towns who are thinking of entering in the Junior Central Ontario League, says that he is quite certain that the league will be formed. He expects that a meeting for the purpose of forming this league will be called by Jake Solomon sometime next week, and that at this meeting it will be decided upon whether two teams from Peterboro will be allowed to enter or not.

Mr. LeBarr said that there was plenty of junior baseball material in this city to form a four team city league if men to take hold of the boys could be obtained. Mr. LeBarr is willing to enter his team in the City League if four teams are found but that if four cannot be obtained he would sooner go into the C.O.B.L. It was also mentioned that a Junior City League of four teams be formed and not affiliate them with the O.B.A.A. and thereby set an age so that some of the players who are too old for Junior this year may be able to play in this league. This series was left open till the next meeting. In the meantime men to take over these teams will be sought for.

The Juvenile series is O.K. with four teams being assured, the Sacred Heart making up the fourth team. They are willing to enter a team in this series if no other team to make up the four can be found but if a team is found they will likely drop out. Alex Kay's Curlers last year's Midget Champions of Ontario and who are too old to play Midget this year will make the jump and compete against the Maple Leafs, last year's Juvenile City League Champions, a team from East City and a team representing the Sacred Heart Church.

The Midget and Bantam Series are also all set for the opening game. Six teams have been entered in the Midget Series and four in the Bantam. The Midget teams are: Sacred Heart, Curlers, East City Beavers, Rotary and a team to represent the Belmont Club. Nothing definite is known about the Belmont Club entering a team but it is expected that they will do so.

In the Bantam Series the following four teams are assured and it is certain that this league will be as big a success as last year. The teams are Kiwanis, Curlers, Rotary and Belmonts.

A deficit of $20.40 from last year's Juvenile League is to be paid up and also $10 left over from last year's Junior and Intermediate League is to be handed in to this year's City League to help finance it.

A motion was passed that the entrance fee of $10 be paid to the O.B.A.A. on Saturday. At the meeting of the O.B.A.A. to be held in Toronto on Saturday, Charles Curtis is to represent the East Peterboro League while Alex Kay and L. LeBarr Jr., will represent the City League.

It was also decided that an entrance fee to the City League for Juvenile, Midget and Bantam teams will be $5.00. The next meeting of this league will be held on Thursday night, April 10.

Finland's Olympic Team is Compact

PARIS, April 4. — Finland will pin its entire hopes for victory in the Olympic games on a small representation of 45 athletes, the French Olympic committee was officially notified yesterday. The strictest economy characterizes the arrangements now being made for housing the party of athletes — one of the smallest entered. Three modest little cottages have just been rented within 15 minutes' walk of the Colombes Stadium and will shelter the team during the games.

The Finnish team is generally regarded here as most likely to give the stiffest sort of an argument for Olympic honours, many even believing it will prove the winning team of the athletic competition.

In adidtion to the 45 athletes, the Finnish representation will include one manager, one trainer, two rubbers and two cooks.

KINGSTON SIGNS MOSIE COMPEAU

The Shortstop Position Which He Will Fill Will Strengthen the Team a Great Deal.

Kingston Standard: Announcement was made this morning that Milton "Mosie" Compeau, crack shortstop of the A. Davis team last year, has signed with the local C.O.B.L. team and will lend strength to the Kingston entry in the Central League.

Compeau is one of the niftiest fielding shortstops in the city, and has always been a husky batter. On the paths he has been as fast as a streak and if he keeps his head up, and plays ball, the shortstop position will be one of the strongest on the C.O.B.L. team. Compeau has been playing ball for some years despite the fact that he is still a youngster, and it is believed that he can hold his own in the C.O.B.L. circuit.

Manager Daley was elated at the signing of Compeau, and predicts that he will be a success with the local team The mentor of the team further stated that it was the intention to carry along a couple of juniors all season, and use them at every opportunity.

RICKARD TAKES HAND IN HOCKEY

International Leagues In the Professional and Amateur Series With Separate Intercollegiate Section.

NEW YORK, April 4 (Canadian Press). — With plans for the establishment of an international professional hockey league almost complete, New York promoters are attempting to institute an international intercollegiate hockey league, to bring together the teams from the great universities of Canada and the United States.

A statement issued by Tex Rickard yesterday announced that Col. John S. Hammond, vice-president of the Madison Square Garden Corporation, who will have charge of ice hockey at Madison Square Garden, is attempting to arrange for the intercollegiate games, and that an attempt will be made to stage the first contests during the next Christmas holiday season.

Yale and Princeton are the United States universities mentioned in the plans, while an attempt will be made to have Canadian teams from McGill University, Montreal, and Toronto University, come to New York.

Mr. Rickard also announced that an amateur hockey league will be established. The announcement made no mention of the inclusion of Canadian teams in this league, though it was stated that former Canadian university hockey stars, now resident in New York, would be among the players enrolled in two teams which would represent New York.

A full schedule of the professional and amateur hockey programme, as well as the intercollegiate games, will be made public soon, the statement said.

Mr. Rickard announced that plans for the professional hockey league were well advanced, and that the concluding agreements "undoubtedly will be signed" in Montreal at a meeting at which all the cities holding franchises will be represented.

No mention was made of the date set for the meeting.

"HEARTLOCK" AGAIN GETS CHAMP "STRANGLER" LEWIS

"STRANGLER" LEWIS AND HIS BRIDE

CHICAGO, April 4.—There's one hold that can floor "Strangler" Ed. Lewis, champion wrestler.

And that's the "heartlock."

Miss Bessie McNear, Kansas City, Mo., beauty, is the second to apply it successfully.

The first was Dr. Ada Scott Morton, California woman physician, but he slipped from her hold after a few years of married life, and the divorce judge separated them.

There was considerable rough and tumble with romance before the second victory of Cupid vs Lewsi had been achieved.

Billy Sandow, who is Lewis' manager, put the champion under agreement, it is said, to stay out of the matrimonial ring. No more love matches, were the orders, while the "Strangler" was champion.

Now Lewis can use his head as well as his famous "headlock", and on the eve of the marriage the manager was locked in his hotel room. Meanwhile the parson gave a decision of "married."

Sandow, reported to be a bit angry, is charging that the marriage is a violation of the contract, and there may be some later argument as to whether the "heartlock" can be listed in the regular wrestling rules.

Lewis' first wife was an authority on physical training and built for her wrestler husband one of the finest gymnasiums in America, this being her wedding present.

Some time ago there were rumors that a little Russian princess, Mary Travaski had been matched with the champion, but the "heartlock" didn't seem to work.

RECRUIT PITCHER HOLDS KEY TO CLEVELAND'S PENNANT HOPES

LAKELAND, Fla., April 4.—Colonel Tris Speaker is counting on the incongruous combination of a tenor singer and a thunderbolt—a McCormack and a Thor—to put his Indians back in the hunt for the American League trophy this year.

The tenor singer is Joseph Shaute a curly, black-haired miner from Pennsylvania, whose physical attributes suggest Jack Dempsey; the thunderbolt is a batting attack made up almost exclusively of .300 hitters and established fence demolishers.

Speaker needed one more great pitcher to step in and help the veterans, Uhle and Covelskie, carry the burden. The Texan assures you he has that man in Shaute, a young left hander who began to come in mid-season last year.

Shaute has fine speed and a splendid pitching style. Next to Uhle, star of the staff, he should be Speaker's most dependable twirler this year. The two between them should win 40 games. Covelskie grows oldre and gets no better. Twelve or 15 will be a large number of wins for him.

Spoke's Slab Strength.

Speaker has others to back this trio up; Metevier, who has adopted Uhle's slab form and is a remarkably improved pitcher; Edwards, the tall left hander who still lacks a real fast ball; the ancient Sherry Smith with his baffling balk movement, and the usual flock of promising youngsters."

Aside from his pitching skill note should be made that no finer vocalist has come to the big leagues in years than Shaute. "Somewhere a Voice Is Calling" is his favorite. It is also Speaker's favorite. "I hope it's the world series voice," he comments.

The Indians led the league in batting last year. They will come close to doing it again this year. Such scientific subtleties as the sacrifice, the bunt and run and the squeeze will have no place in the Indians' scheme of offence. The idea will be to swing from the hip and swing often.

Stephenson, who replaces Wambganss at second, also replaces him in the batting order, hitting after Jamieson, lead-off man. Wambsganns, crack bunter, was one of the cleverest sacrifice hitters in the league. This was why Speaker had him hitting second.

So Long, Mr. Sacrifice!

The Indians, however, will not miss Wambganss' genius as a sacrifice hitter because the sacrifice is not to be used. Stephenson is a slashing slugger, whose main and consistent intent is to mutilate the ball with every swing. "Go ahead and mutilate" will be Speaker's instructions to him.

And Speaker, who follows in the lineup, will swing his mace with a similar purpose. So will Joe Sewell, the clean-up hitter, and Burns, the new first baseman, all of whom for years have hit better than .300 against American League pitching.

No wonder the silver-voiced Shaute is rehearsing a new dirge. "The Base Hit Blues," to be sung at the expense of opposing pitchers.

Nineteen Nations In Olympic Soccer.

PARIS, April 4 (Canadian Press) —The French Olympic Committee has postponed until 13th April, the closing of entries in the Olympic Association football competition, entries for which were to have closed at midnight last night.

Nineteen nations are already officially entered, the largest number recorded in any event thus far. They are:

Belgium, Bulgaria, Egypt, Spain, France, Holland, Hungary, Ireland, Italy, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Roumania, Sweden, Switzerland, Czecho-Slovakia, Turkey, Portugal, and Uruguay.

Great Britain will not participate owing to a difference with the French committee over the committee's interpretation of the Olympic rules.

Major league managers insist there is going to be a revival in base running this year. Big league leaders are paying much attention to this feature of play in the southern camps. Here we have Jimmy Johnston showing the rookies the proper way to slide and Andy High illustrating the proper way to put the ball on the runner.

SOCCER NOTES

Congratulations! Rev. Father Phelan on your activity in the interest of soccer in Campbellford. He is president of St. Mary's team.

C. P. C. intend running two teams in the Junior league.

An excellent financial report was read by Jas. Ball, treasurer of the J. F. A. which proved that they were in a good financial position.

The DeLaval Juniors will travel to Campbellford on Good Friday to play one of the teams in an Exhibition Soccer game.

The Thistle players will hold a practice game on Saturday afternoon at King Edward Park.

The annual monthly meeting of the P. andt D. F. A. will be held in he Chamber of Commerce Rooms on Monday Evening at 8 p. m. The Juniors will meet at 7.30 prompt.

It is rumoured that the De Laval will run a team in the senior league.

Charles Lloyd, newly elected president of the J. F. A. in his presidental address spoke on the welfare of the boys and hoped that some day they would all become internationalists(?). He also mooted that a prominent gentleman was giving a Cup for Peterboro and County.

Read and think! When the question of the Junior Association affiliation with the Senior Association was discussed at the General Meeting of the P. and D. F. A., the decision was held in abeyance until the Junior organization had held their annual meeting. At this meeting, Mr. Willis, President of the P. and D. F. A. was present, gave an appropriate address on the advancement of the sport through co-operation and would bring it before his executive. He called a meeting a few weeks later to organize for the season but was held over through the lack of enthusiasts, only three attended. It was mentioned in the press that the J. F. A. would settle the question of affiliation at their annual meeting, and, no doubt, was accomplished when Mr. Edwards, moved and Mr. Downer, seconded, that the J. F. A. do not affiliate with the senior body or the O. F. A. An amendmend was moved and seconded along with an excellent argument put forth by D. Grant on the fallacy of the motion when they had not been visited by any delegation from the parent executive but failed to get co-operation or advancement. ..The senior executive never at any time decided any particular attitude in regards to affiliation of J. F. A., also never mentioned or appointed any delegation from their association, nor such mentioned in the local press.. The local junior association could not join the parent body.

Burns the Only Cincinnati Regular

Three New Pitchers Added to Squad

In Danger of Losing His Berth

LEFT TO RIGHT: JAKIE MAY, CARL MAYS; (INSET(TOM SHEEHAN.

ORLANDO, Fla., April 1—George Burns, veteran outfielding star of the Cincinnati Reds, is facing the shadows of obscurity.

A hero of many world series skirmishes, and for years one of the greatest outfielders in the game, Burns this spring finds himself with his back to the wall, battling to hold his job.

Except for the possibility of Burns passing to the bench the Reds remain practically intact, with a holdover catching department, a veteran infield and three additions to the pitching staff, May from the Coast League, Sheehan from the American Association and Mays, late of the Yanks.

Burns, who grows no younger as the springs roll along, is having a hard time getting started. His old speed is gone and drives that used to fall into his gloved hand are now going for base hits. He has taken on weight and is no longer a feared man on the paths.

George Harper, for three years the Reds reserve outfielder, and Ed Hock, a .300 hitter from Oklahoma City, are leading candidates for Burns' old stand.

Harper is not a great hitter and if Hock, who is both fast and a skilled fielder, can keep close to the .300 mark against major league pitching he will oust Burns.

This is Hock's third trip to the Reds' camp.

The passing of Burns would mark the end of an outfield combination that has ranked with the elite in the big leagues. Roush is one of the great ones of all time and Duncan, with his timely hitting, is more than fair.

ISSUES CHALLENGE

PHILADELPHIA, April 4.—(Canadian Press).—Walter M. Hoover, former holder of Philadelphia Gold Challenge Sculling Cup, will challenge A. E. Garrett Gilmore, of this city, holder of trophy this year, Harry Penn Burke, member of Cup committee, announced to-day. Paul Costello, of this city, already has challenged Gilmore.

SCORED A KNOCKOUT.

PATERSON, N. J., April 4.—(Canadian Press).—Ad Stone, Philadelphia lightweight, scored a technical knockout over Tom Roper, Chicago, in the eleventh round of a twelve-round bout here last night. Roper's seconds threw water on the Chicago boxer as he was taking the count and the referee disqualified him.

SAMMY SLOW WILL BE OUT TOMORROW

You Will Know Him by His Aggressive Look

This is Sammy Slow. His teacher has just been reading a story with a moral all about a little boy who cultivated aggressiveness and the "go-get-it" attitude of mind. The little boy in the book grew up to be the Premier of Canada, and reached a place in Hall of Fame. Sammy has come home with the firm determination to be terribly aggressive. He has donned a real cowboy neck scarf, has rolled up his sleeves and assumed a pugnacious posture in front of the mirror. As can plainly be seen, his expression is one of fierce resolve.

Is Sammy thinking of a time when he will control the destinies of the Dominion, like the boy in the book? Or is he speeding up for a fight with Johnny Freckleface, or is he just preparing to terrify his small sister? Not at all. Sammy is merely getting ready to be there on time to-morrow when the Mayor distributes the marbles. And he isn't going to be slow this time. He's going to be there on the dot and be real aggressive and get a handful—yes, Sir!.

The NUT CRACKER

BY JOE WILLIAMS

TAMPA, Fla., April 4.—The baseball bug cares not who breaks the laws of the land, if he may be assured the weather forecast for opening day will be "fair and warmer."

Abe Goldstein, new bantamweight champion, is to take up law ....We fear it would be too much to ask him to take up fighting.

Al Jennings, who used to be a train robber, is now a politician..... Thereby proving that reformation is not as easy as some folks think.

Having been bunked by the smart boys in Washington, Tex Rickard is expected to confine his future operations to the poor but honorable thugs of the prize ring.

The mud tee has been eleminated from football as a non-essential, and yet the cheer leader stays on. How come?

Of course the prince could even things up by letting the horse ride him and reversing, at intervals, the throwing process.

There are only eight spitball pitchers left ....We may yet live to see the day when sporting writers quit using the phrase, "saliva slant."

Babe Ruth has had the walking flu ....If the pitchers don't walk him the doctors do.

A petition is being circulated to persuade Luis Firpo to stick to the boxing game ....We suspect Dempsey's name heads the list.

King of New York dope ring has been captured ....This will doubtless end the perennial rumor that Collins is going to the Yankees.

"M'Graw looks for close race" sings headline .....Does this mean that he plans to explore Scotland?

REPORTS READY ON REPARATION

Will Be Ready for Commission on Saturday or Sunday,

By Webb B. Miller, United Press Staff Correspondent.

PARIS, April 4.—Care to preserve the most minute shades of meaning in the draft of the experts reports was taken to-day, as interpretors completed the task of translating the results of the committee's labors from English into French.

As soon as the two texts are identical, Louis Barthou, France's representative on the reparations commission, will summon his colleagues to receive the reports. This is expected to occur Saturday night or Sunday.

The reports are awaited with interest, bordering on excitement on the part of the French. They will be made public as soon as submitted to the commission. General Dawes, American Chairman of Committee No. L. will read a covering letter with the major report, and Reginald McKenna, Chairman of Committee No 2, will likewise cover his report on German capital abroad.

Louis Barthou, who will reply for the Commission, said copies will be given to each member and to the various governments, who will be afforded opportunity to study the findings.

A meeting, to which the Germans will be invited, then will be called.

Barthou informally cautioned the French Press to remember that: 'three distinguished Americans are largely responsible for the plans," and the French newspapers should therefore use "all possible delicacy," in commenting thereon.

FLIGHT POSTPPONED

SEATTLE, Wash., April 4.—(Canadian Press).—Departure of four United States Army Airplanes for Prince Rupert, B.C., on their flight around the world, was postponed to-day until to-morow on account of adverse weather reports received from along the route.

SIR HENRY THORTON ENDORSES NEW LINES

Broader Grounds Must be Considered Than Immediate Revenue Possibilities.

OTTAWA, April 4.—(Canadian Press).—Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways, put his imprimatur upon the Government branch lines proposal in a letter read in the House of Commons yesterday by Hon. Geo. P. Graham. The letter was written after request on Tuesday by the Right Hon. Arthur Meighen that the House should have the opinion of the head of the railways as to the need of branch lines.

"While it is true," said the letter, "that all of these lines may not be entirely justified from the present railway economic standpoint, particularly if viewed from the first year's operation, broader grounds must be considered when preparing a system of feeders for a railway of the magnitude of that entrusted to the present administration of the national railways."

"I can think of no more effective way," said the letter in another part, "to eventually bring about the ruin of the Canadian National Railway system, than the refusal to embark upon and consistently maintain a reasonable branch line program."

In a postscript to the letter, Sir Henry stated that the Canadian National Railway had now under consideration the sale of the Huberdeau branch to the Canadian Pacific Railway, and this information was the subject for some adverse comment in the House. Progress was made in regard to resolutions for various branch lines, several of these being passed and bills based upon them given first reading.

Already the issue has been raised this year which resulted in the rejection of the Branch Lines Bill by the Senate last session. This is the [illegible] to having votes enacted as a [illegible] inserted in the estimates year by year.

MISS MASSON'S RECITAL
The recital which is given in the Conservatory of Music Hall this evening is not by pupils of Miss Mathilde Masson, as is the impression in some circles, but is a recital by Miss Masson herself. The young vocalist, who was the winner of the silver medal for supremacy in soprano work at the Ontario Musical Festival last year, will give a carefully-prepared programme of songs and will be assisted by Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland, reader. 1d 82 1366

SPECIAL SERVICES GEORGE STREET

For some months past the people of the George street Church have been looking forward to the New Life Mission to be held just before Easter, led by Rev. Newton Jones, of London, England. As has been announced, Mr. Jones is to conduct a mission of Bible Study and preaching for the ten days beginning next Sunday, April 6th, and concluding on Wednesday, April 16th.

Mr. Jones is an Englishman, who has spent many years in conducting missions of this nature. The major part of his work has been carried on in the British Isles, but he has recently made several trips to America, and has found a warm welcome, and the deepest appreciation on this side of the Atlantic. As a Bible expositor and preacher he has made a tremendous impression on the thousands who have listened to his messages, and his missions are looked upon wherever he has come as times of the greatest refreshment and inspiration.

Rev. F. E. Malott, recently pastor of Trinity Church in this city, introduced him to his congregation in Belleville, in December last, and has the following to say of him: "A man of charming personality and of great versatility, Mr. Jones at once gripped the hearts of both old and young as he carried on his many sided work. His chalk talks to boys and girls, his Bible readings for adults, his evening messages to all have been wonderfully suited to the needs of his audience. He is not a sensationalist. Not an item of his preaching creates controversy. The Gospel in its simplicity, its purity, its sweet reasonableness and its fullness, is preached consistently and constantly by word and life. From the beginning both pastor and people knew that a man of God was among them."

In the many places in Ontario where he has conducted his missions Mr. Jones has won the same sort of golden opinions of his work. Kingston, Smith's Falls, Orillia, Sarnia and other centres, have the same story to tell.

Mr. Jones will speak in the George street church twice each day of his visit, excepting Tuesday, April 8th, when he will not hold an afternoon service. The afternoon meetings will be in the nature of Bible expositions during the first week and chalk talks for children during the second. The evening services will be preaching services.

He will also preach twice on Sunday. The subjects for next Sunday will be announced in to-morrow night's paper. All are invited to attend the services.

UNANIMOUSLY CONDEMN CHICAGO DIVERSION OF INTERNATIONAL WATERS

Provincial Legislature Passes Resolution Without Dissenting Voice, Calling on Dominion Government to Protect Canadian Rights — Ask U.S. to Discipline Unruly Child.

CITY MAKES MONEY.

TORONTO, April 5.—The Legislature yesterday afternoon unanimously passed a resolution proposed by F. H. Keefer (Port Arthur) 'this House respectfully urge upon the government of the Dominion of Canada to use every means within its power with the United States to restrain the city of Chicago from illegal and improper diversion of water from th e international waters in which Canada and particularly Ontario are so vitally interested" and further "that this Legislature also recommends that the Government of United States to take and exercise control of the works which permit of any diversion at Chicago instead of allowing same to be under the jurisdiction of one interested party only.

Premier Ferguson heartily supported the resolution as did W. E. N. Sinclair for the Liberal party and Hon. Beniah Bowman for the U.F.O. Mr. Keefer said that the original agreement permitted of 4000 feet per second to be allowed for the Chicago drainage canal. "How 10,000 feet per second is being used and Canada has allowed the matter to drag along without a great protest" said Mr. Keefer adding that there was no blame to be attached to Ottawa which was protesting vigorously now. The resolution by the Legislature was simply to strengthen the hand of the Dominion government "We must publish from the house tops our grivance. I do not think that the people of Canada realize the great injury being done and the danger to great lake navigation from this violation. We must enlist with us those in the United States who do not believe in this wrong doing. According to a report made by United States Secretary Simpson this diversion of water means a lowering of the water levels in Lake Huron and Michigan 6.9 inches; Lake Erie, 5.4 inches and Lake Ontario 4.5 inches. The Canadian Marine Association claims the reduction to be greater. It means increased freight rates because ships won't be able to carry capacity cargoes through the shallower canals. The Lake Carriers' Association estimates the loss to be $90,000,000.

The Prime Minister said the legislature could well give the matter attention in view of the fact that vital decisions were pending at Washington on the matter. He was ordinarily opposed to make resolutions to pass on to the Federal government but the importance of this subject justified the action. He was willing to see that Ontario had a representative at Ottawa to assist the Federal authorities. This action of Chicago continued would destroy the greatest inland waterway in the world and the great channel of commerce for both United States and Canada" said the Premier. If we reduce water transportation it puts us more at the mercy of the railways This diversion in power means a loss of one half of what the Chippawa produces.

"We are face to face with the problem of providing more power in the immediate future. We have several alternatives, a new canal at Niagara, development in the St. Lawrence or the Ottawa and steam generation I do not like to adopt the latter policy. This matter is so vital that it strikes at the future of Ontario and we are more than justified in this protest to be made through the Federal government."

The resolution carried without a dissenting voice.

Judge Takes Part of Busy Flapper

NEW YORK, April 5.—Cigarette smoking and refusal to do housework do not make a working girl a flapper, according to Judge Charles W. Boote, of Yonkers, who refused to issue a summons for Laura Fagnan, 17 years old. When her brother, T. C. Fagnan, made his complaint, Judge Boote bluntly asked him why he did not do the housework himself. The brother admitted that the girl gave $10 or $11 out of her $14 weekly pay to maintain the home in which she and her invalid father live, while he, the brother, lived at another address and contributed only $2 or $3 a week.

"What, me!" exclaimed Fagnan, at the suggestion that he undertake domestic duties. "Why make me the goat?"

"But your sister is the financial head of the family and its chief support. Why make her the goat? You could go to the house and help with the housework just as well as asking her to do it," the Judge answered.

Fagnan was told to tell his sister to come to court for an informal talk. Judge Boote remarking that he thought she was too young to smoke cigarettes.

HAND OVER YUKON TO B. C. PROVINCE

Suggestion of Sir James Lougheed in Senate — Represents Big Expenditure.

OTTAWA, April 5.— That the Yukon territory should be handed over to British Columbia for administration was the opinion expressed by Senator Sir James Lougheed, Conservative leader in the Senate yesterday. He asked that the Government table in the Senate any correspondence between the Federal Government and British Columbia in relation to taking over of the Yukon.

The point came up on the second reading of an amendment to the Judges' Act to increase the salary of the judges in the Yukon. Sir James said there was no section of Canada where so much public money was spent per capita than in the Yukon, which had about four thousand inhabitants and an army of officials." Before he retired as Government leader in the Senate in 1921, Sir James said, he was arranging for a re-organization of the services in that district.

Senator R. B. Ross protested against salary increases to judges and also the retirement of judges who were quite capable of performing their duties.

Senator Dandurand, Government leader, also thought that greater care should be exercised in the retirement of judges.

British Submarine Blew Up a Steamer

PORT SUDAN, Egypt, April 5.—The British submarine, K-26, yesterday morning in the Red Sea blew up the British steamer Frangestan, the cotton cargo of which caught fire Wednesday morning, threatening the lives of 1,200 passengers, who, however, were taken off by vessels summoned by wireless distress calls. When the Frangestan was sent to the bottom she was still blazing fiercely and ultimately would have been a total wreck.

DEPUTIES APPROVE POINCARE'S CHOICE

Pensions Bill Developed Vote of Confidence in the Government—327 to 201.

PARIS, April 5 (Canadian Press) —Premier Poincare's choice of new colleagues for his Cabinet apparently was vindicated yesterday when the Government secured a vote of confidence in the Chamber on the most dangerous part of the Pensions Bill.

Yesterday Minister of Finance Francois-Marsal succeeded where the former Minister of Finance De Lasteyrie recently failed, resulting in the resignation of the Cabinet and the formation by M. Poincare of a new one.

The Chamber was in an ugly mood when the Pensions Bill was brought forward. Some of the members demanded that Premier Poincare appear personally and make the vote on the measure one of confidence in his Government.

"I have full authority to make it a question of confidence," exclaimed M. Francois-Marsal to the deputies. "You express surprise at the Premier's absence. The reason for this is that he now is receiving the German Ambassador and engaged in defending the interests of France."

After some further debate the Government secured a majority of 126 in the balloting.

Inquiries at the Foreign Office regarding the reasons for the visit of Ambassador von Hoesch to Premier Poincare were without result.

The vote in the Chamber was 327 ot 201 in favour of the Government.

The Opposition offensive was launched with the same weapons, along similar lines and under the same conditions as that of last week, when the Chamber overthrew the Cabinet by a vote of 271 to 264.

The new Cabinet emerged yesterday from the struggle strengthened, and it now appears certain that it will carry on until the dissolution of Parliament, tentatively set for 12th April.

U.S. Ambassador Lauds St. Lawrence Project.

MANCHESTER, England, April 5.—Frank B. Kellogg, United States' Ambassador to Great Britain, replying to a toast to his health at a dinner given in his honor by the Manchester branch of the Anglo-American Society here last night, expressed the hope that in the not far distant future Canada and the United States together would build a St. Lawrence River canal, enabling ocean-going ships to go from Manchester to far into the interior of the United States and Canada.

Mr. Kellogg said that the growth and advancement of the civilization of the world had followed the great lines of water transportation.

Belgians Have Not Abandoned Priority.

BRUSSELS, April 5. — The Belgian semi-official News Agency last night published a denial of reports which have appeared in a portion of the French press to the effect that Belgium might abandon her right to priority of German payments under the Versailles treaty.

"We are authorized to say," the agency declares, that the Belgian government never entertained the question of abandoning Belgium's right to priority of German payments granted under the Versailles treaty."

The reports arose in conection with the discussion of the expected report of the reparation experts, and its probable conclusions.

Divorce Sought By a British Baronet.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 5.—Affidavits filed by attorneys here today disclosed that Sir Charles Ross, British baronet, soldier and military expert has filed a petition in circuit court for a divorce from his wife, Lady Patricia Ross, formerly Miss Patricia Ellison, of Louisville, on the ground of abandonment.

The divorce action is a sequel to that filed by Lady Ross in London also seeking a legal separation. The London action is based on incidents said to have taken place on a hunting expedition in East Africa in 1923 in which Sir Charles and a New York society women are said to have been members.

Alberta Police Recover Bonds Stolen in Big Bank Robberies

"Smiling" Johnny Reid Guided Police to Cache of Big Haul—Biggest Coup In Years.

EDMONTON, Alta., April 5.—As the result of revelations made by Smiling Johnny Reid, as he is known in criminal circles and visits by provincial police officials to different parts of Montana and British Columbia, bonds stolen from the Union Bank at Formost, Alta and the Royal Bank at Ladner, B.C., to the amount of more than $200,000 have been recovered intact and are now safely in the hands of the authorities.

This was disclosed yesterday by Commissioner Bryan of the Alberta provincial police following a visit to the city of Assistant Commissioner Nicholson, who has been in Southern Alberta and other parts of Canada and the United States investigating the gigantic bank robberies in Western Canada during the past few years. It was the biggest coup pulled off in the seven years' existence of the provincial police.

One hundred and twenty-eight thousand dollars' worth of bonds were dug up at Havre, Montana, and the balance in Stanley Park, Vancouver. The hiding places for the stolen bonds were disclosed to the police by Reid, according to the police, who has made a clean breast of all he knows of the various robberies. Reid is twenty-six years old and has an international reputation in criminal circles.

The arrest of two men, Reid and James Wilson followed a round-up of alleged bank robbers in Montana early this year. The Alberta Provincial Police secured a clue through a confession given by one Davis, a bank robber, who is now serving a fifteen-year sentence in Montana.

Reid and Wilson, arrested by the Monttana police were extradited into Canada by the Alberta Provincial Police, and are now being held in Lethbridge for trial.

The Ladner bank robbery occurred on March 22, 1922, while the bank at Foremost, Alberta, was raided on August 29 of the same year.

When charged with the crime, Reid made a clean breast of the affair and offered to lead assistant commissioner Nicholson to the hiding places, where the bonds had been secreted. In both instances at Havre, Montana and in Stanley Park, Vancouver, the valuable papers were found in the exact spots that Reid designated in his confession.

PASSENGERS IN TRAIN INJURED

Ten Hurt When Passenger Train Crashed Into Work Train—Two Seriously.

MONTREAL, April 5.—Ten persons were injured, one of them seriously, when the Canadian Pacific through passenger train from St. John, N.B., to this city, crashed head-on into a work train on the C. P.R. tracks two miles east of Poster, Que. yesterday morning. The victims include six passengers, the engineer who was the one seriously hurt, and the cook on the passenger train together with two men on the work train. The engineer of the latter train leaped clear just before the smash and escaped without a scratch.

The most seriously injured victim is W. Hutherford, engineer of the passenger train who suffered a broken hip, broken ribs and cuts about the head and face. He was taken to the Western Hospital here, where it was reported to-night that he was in no immediate danger.

S. Higginson, cook aboard the passenger train, sustained slight scalding and burns, caused when the collision upset a boiler of hot water. He was also taken to the Western Hospital.

The other victims suffered cuts and bruises but these were only of a slight character, necessitating no special medical attention. Information as to responsibility for the accident was not obtainable at the Canadian Pacific Railway head offices here to-day, but it is understood from eye-witnesses that the work train had not been removed at the right time from the track which the express was to take. There is a curve in the track at this point and neither engineer was able to see the other until a few seconds before the collision.

Another report stated that the accident was caused by failure to clear the switch for the passage of the passenger train. This report was neither denied nor verified at the headquarters of the railway.

The St. John train was due here at 12.30. The passengers were transferred to the Sherbrooke-Montreal train which arrived here at 2.30 this afternoon.

Bankrupt Failed to Account For Money.

OTTAWA, April 5. — (Canadian Press).—Magistrate Joynt formally committed Michael Raport, local fruit merchant, for trial at the next Assizes here on two charges, one of a breach of the Bankruptcy Act in not accounting for certain money to W. Y. Denison, liquidator, and another of stealing a sum of money which he had on contract from the Union Bank of Canada, and was bound to account for or pay to the bank, and which, it is alleged, he neglected to do. Raport is out on bail of $5,000.

The victims include six passengers the engineer, who was the one seriously hurt and the cook on the passenger train together with two men on the work train. The engineer of the latter train leaped clear just before the smash and escaped without a scratch. The most seriously injured victim is W. ESTHONIAN MINORITIES ARE HAPPY.

REVAL, April 5 (Associated Press). — Esthonia, with its population of 1,500,000, including 200,000 Germans, Swedes, and Russians, has reached a solution of the minority problem which has been vexing the Government since the little Baltic state was founded and which is reported to be working most satisfactorily to all concerned.

Terms of the agreement, based on the principle of cultural autonomy and local self-government, were approved some time ago by the League of Nations.

Pillow Fight Was in Progress When Manager Butted In

NEW YORK, April 5. — On the question of whether or not there was a pillow fight in Room 373 of the Hotel Belmont between a group of representatives of the pulp and paper associations and Miss Anne O'Brien, the hotel manicure, hinges the outcome of two suits called for trial before Supreme Court Justice Ingraham.

Miss O'Brien and Frank Martin, a barber, are each demanding $10,000 from the L. M. Bates Operating Company, then controlling the Belmont. They say that they were in Room 373 during the holding of a pulp and paper convention at the hotel, legitimately performing the functions of a manicurist and a barber; that Miss O'Brien was manicuring one of the guests and Mr. Martin was shaving him when the manager of the hotel entered the room, ordered them out and denounced them, with the result that they lost their positions and suffered chagrin.

Assistant Manager O'Connell said that he entered the room and found a "pillow fight in progress," with Miss O'Brien receiving the pillows hurled at her by a number of "dignified pulp and paper men." The cases were not finished.

SENATOR REMARKED BRITISH COURTESY

Discussion in Senate of the Liquor Convention—Sir James Lougheed Criticizes United States.

OTTAWA, April 5. — Canadian Press. — The Senate yesterday discussed the liquor convention between Great Britain and Canada touching on the three mile limit. It came on a motion by Senator Dandurand, the Government leader, for approval of the convention. The House of Commons has already aproved the convention.

Senator Dandurand said the convention was a strong expression of good-will on the part of Great Britain towards the United States.

Senator Barnard raised the question of jurisdiction in the Juan De Fuca Straits, where, he claimed, it would be possible for the American preventative officers, under the convention, to search British ships in British waters.

The motion for approval of the convention was still under consideration when the Senate adjourned.

WILLIAM J. BURNS WAS STAR WITNESS

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(Canadian Press.)—William J. Burns, director of the Bureau of Investigations of the Department of Justice and a close personal friend of the former Attorney General Daugherty, appeared yesterday as star witness before the Senate Commission investigating Department of Justice. The testimony dealing chiefly with alleged illegal traffic in whiskey and drugs, created a real sensation.

Mr. Burns made two direct and serious charges .He stated that the investigation that the agents of his bueau had made of the smuggling of "dope" into Federal penitentiary at Atlanta had been called off at the instance of Rev. Heber Votaw, brother-in-law of late President Harding, and Superintendent of Prisons, at the time when the trial was leading to men "higher up" who controlled the source of supply. He expressed a firm conviction that had the investigation continued the "dope" ring would have been smashed.

Taking up the whiskey deals, Burns testified that his agents had been called off as he understood it, from Attorney General Daugherty at the request of the Treasury Department and that this had happened also at the time when, in connection with investigations of conditions in New York, the trail was leading to "very prominent men."

Korean Foreign Trade For 1923 Was Enormous

SEOUL, Korea, April 5.—(Associated Press).—The foreign trade of Korea for 1923 broke all previous records, reaching a total of 527,450,000 yen, or 46,200,000 yen more than in 1922, the record year previously, according to official figures just published. Imports were slightly in excess of exports, 265,780,000 yen against 261,660,000 yen. The large total gain was due principally to increased exports of rice to Japan following the earthquake.

The United States is third in the list of countries selling to Korea, with a total of 11,172,550 yen, ranking after Japan and China. Practically all Korea's exports go to Japan, and the United States, fifth in the list of Korea's customers, is shown as having purchased only 99,000 yen worth.

Two Steamers Lost in Southern Storm

BUENOS AIRES, April 5.— The small Italian freight steamer Montesubio, and the British freighter Westbury, were driven ashore south of Bahia Blanca, Argentina, in a storm Wednesday and both are believed to have been lost, according to despatches from Bahia Blanca. The crews of both ships abandoned them.

Reports of damage due to the storm reaching here from various points along the Argentine coast indicate that the property loss may run into millions of dollars. The storm is described as the most severe ever experienced in the region. Phenominally high seas destroyed many buildings on the shore which were supposedly beyond the ocean's reach.

LIVELY DEBATE ON LIQUOR PACT

Dail Eireann Questions Use of Words, "King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland."

DUBLIN, April 5.—A proposal to ratify the Anglo-American liquor treaty provoked a lively debate in the Dail Eireann yesterday. Dr. Edmond Fitzgerald, Minister of Foreign Affairs, in moving ratification of the treaty, said he had called the attention of the British authorities to the fact that the words 'King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland," no longer were descriptive of the fact, but that he had not pressed upon the British Government that it take immediate steps to amend this wording, pending a settlement of the Irish boundary question.

The Irish Government, the Minister added, would endeavor to put no hindrance in the way of the United States in enforcing its own laws.

Deputy Esmonds moved an amendment to the proposal, to the effect that the Dail should withhold approval of the treaty pending consideration of the full text of it. He challenged the whole situation represented by the use of the words "United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland," and said the Dail would have to discuss whether Sir Auckland Geddes, former British Ambassador to the United States, was authorized by the Free State Government to sign the treaty on its behalf.

Deputy McCarthy, former Government Whip, declared the procedure looked like the playing of a confidence trick on the Dail and that it was not the first time a tricky agreement had been made by the Foreign Minister. Other deputies also criticized the Government for its action with regard to the proposed treaty.

The amendment of Deputy Esmonde was defeated by a vote 35 to 29. Debate on the treaty was then adjourned until next Wednesday.

KEY WITNESSES TO BOND DEAL IN U. S.

TORONTO, April 5.—(Canadian Press).—Charles A. Matthews, Jr., the suspended Deputy Provincial Treasurer, and L. C. Mason, son-in-law by marriage of Matthews, are said to be in Detroit. Both these men are the key witnesses to the investigation now going on before the Public Accounts Committee, and, in the opinion of those conducting the inquiry, they can give the best available evidence in connection with the bond deal manipulations. Matthews left Toronto a week ago yesterday afternoon, leaving his car on one of the streets in the downtown district. Mason went away from this city on Tuesday, March 25th, going from here to London, where he remained until he joined Matthews in Detroit. Both these men, it is felt, have vital information which goes to the root of the whole inquiry proceeding in Queen's Park. As there has been no charge laid against either of them they were, prior to leaving Toronto, and are now, at liberty to go where they like.

"It is understood that the Public Accounts Committee will sit indefinitely until the whole inquiry is finished. The larger transactions in connection with the bond deals and the Provincial insurance schemes have not yet been touched upon and it will require many special sittings of the committee to complete the work.

It is the feeling in Queen's Park that Charles A. Matthews, Jr., knows the inside story of all the transactions of the Provincial Treasury now under investigation, and the Government is firmly determined to get his evidence under oath in every detail.

Five Hundred Delegates Rallied to Conservative Banner Upheld By Hon. H. H. Stevens and Other Prominent Party Men—T. H. Stinson of Lindsay Elected President.

Distinguished Company.

Some 500 delegates, representing 12 electoral districts in East Central Ontario, gathered in Victoria Hall, this city, yesterday afternoon at what proved to be one of the best Liberal - Conservative conventions held in West Peterborough for years. Called together for district organization, the occasion was marked by earnest business-like procedure and old-time rousing enthusiasm, coupled with extreme optimism for a Conservative sweep of the whole Dominion at the next Federal elections. The representation consisted of prominent citizens in th. Conservative ranks from all quarters of the district, including a fair sprinkling of the fair sex. From Victoria and Haliburton Counties, including Lindsay Town, there came a battalion of no less than 150 delegates, while the proceedings were graced by the presence of Hon. H. H. Stevens, M.P., of Vancouver, B. C., Minister of Trade and Commerce in the late Meighen administration at Ottawa, and an old Peterborough boy.

New Organization.

The object of this convention was the organization of a concrete, workable district Liberal-Conservative Association for election campaign and other party purposes; and that objective was achieved without delay following an unanimous vote to that end. The new organization is to be known as the East-Centre Liberal-Conservative Association of Ontario, and on vote it was decided that the annual meetings shall be held at Lindsay, the next gathering to be called for in June.

Major Belford, M.P.P. of East Northumberland, and R. J. Patterson, M.P.P. of South Victoria, moved for June meetings, while F. W. Reynolds and J. E. Finlay moved for the meetings to take place at Lindsay because that town is a railway centre.

An amendment by Delegates Smith of Port Hope and Alex. Anderson of South Monaghan in favor of Peterborough as a meeting place failed to carry.

The preliminaries of the convention were in the capable hands of J. R. MacNicol, Toronto, President of the Liberal-Conservative Association of Ontario, and W. G. Clysdale, Secretary and energetic Organizer of the Provincial organization.

Officers Elected.

The chief executives elected are as follows:

President— T. H. Stinson, K.C., Lindsay.

First Vice—Dr. Kaiser, Oshawa.

Second Vice—Mrs. Howard Fallis, North Monaghan (West Peterborough.)

Secretary-Treas. — Cecil Frost, Lindsay.

Auditor—Harry L. Walker, Warkworth.

Territory Affected.

The territory in which this district body will function follows:

East and West Durham.
Muskoka.
East and West Northumberland.
North and South Ontario.
East and West Peterborough.
Parry Sound.
North and South Victoria.

The draft of a working constitution was adopted and the fees for each riding fixed at $10.

Distinguished Company.

In company with the provincial officers there were seated on the crowded platform a distinguished number of well-known members of the Federal and Local Houses and representative men and women, including Major J. F. B. Belford, M.P. P. East Northumberland; Col. F. D.

PRESENTATION TO HASTINGS COUPLE

Rev. Mr. Hinton and His Wife Honored by Congregation — Good Programme.

HASTINGS, April 5. — A congregational meeting was held in the school room of the Methodist church last evening. The school room was packed to the doors, it being one of the largest crowds and one of the most successful meetings ever held in the church.

Music supplied by the orchestra opened the meeting.

The minister then requested the meeting to sing "Blest be the Tie that binds."

The chairman, Rev. Mr. Hinton, explained the object of the meeting and called on the recording secretary, Mr. R. C. Doxsee, to give the financial statement of the church, which he di.

After reports were given from the various departments of the church, a programme was given, Mrs. J. Johnson giving a reading entitled "Aunt Martha's Vocation." A piano duet was played by the Misses Ona and Carrie Doxsee, "Aluinni Reunion." Mrs. J. Watson, of Toronto, gave a recitation "The Strike in the Church of Millville." After the latter was given a change in the programme tok place, Mr. Doxsee calling on Mrs. N. Beavis, for a reading, which she gave on verses made up on the life of the present minister, and his younger days, when he was first married. Mr. and Mrs. Hinton were called to the platform when an address and presentation were made to them.

Mrs. Alfred Metcalfe read the address, which was as follows:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Hinton,

We, the members of the Hastings Methodist Church, feel that we cannot let this, the eve of the twenty-fifth anniversary of your wedding, pass without in some way showing our appreciation of your work in our midst.

The interest you have taken in the different departments of our church work, your kind and unselfish helpfulness in sickness and your sympathetic manner in death have endeared you to us all.

An occasion of this kind seems a fitting opportunity to express our appreciation. Feeling that our happy association together will be long remembered by all of us, we present this gift as a token of the esteem in which you are held. May it be God's will that you will be long spared to do the work that you are so able and willing to do in the Master's service.

Signed on behalf of the congregation.

The gift presented was a cabinet of silver, consisting of one dozen each of dinner and tea knives and forks, one dozen teaspoons, one dozen dessert spoons, and three large tablespoons, all in the "Old Colony" pattern, each piece being engraved with the initial "H."

A wicker tray holding the large spoons, also held twelve twenty-five-cent pieces.

Mr. Hinton then thanked the congregation for the generous gift, telling how much the gift was appreciated. Mrs. Hinton also rose and said although it was seldom she ever spoke on an occasion of this kind, this was one time she could not let pass by without thanking each and every one for their kindness shown to them at this time, and invited any of those present to come to the parsonage at any time and she would use the gift to the best of her ability.

The Chairman then called on little Miss Madeline Bond for a solo, which she sang, substituting the names of the minister and his wife's name, Milton and Lavina, to the tune of "Put on your old grey bonnet, on the old farmhouse veranda."

Lunch was served by the ladies of the church, when another social half-hour was spent amongst those gathered.

Congratulations were extended to Mr. and Mrs. Hinton, before the happy evening was brought to a close.

She is in Perfect Health To-day

Thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills

Quebec lady suffered from backache, and was completely relieved by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Causapscal Station, Que., April 4. —(Special)—"I do not know how to praise Dodd's Kidney Pills enough. I have suffered several years from backache. Three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills have completely relieved me of my trouble and I am in perfect health today. A thousand thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

This tribute to Dodd's Kidney Pills comes from Dame G. Boldue, a well-known resident of this place.

Kidney trouble is very common amongst all classes of people, and usually a lot of valuable time is lost by using unsuitable treatments. A good plan is to watch the kidneys and keep them healthy. Dodd's Kidney Pills stimulate and strengthen weak kidneys. They are used and recommended all over the civilized world.

Dodd's Kidney Pills have restored sound health to thousands of troubled women and men.

WALTER SCOTT BROKE HIS ARM SAWING WOOD

CAMPBELLFORD, April 5.—Mr. Walter Scott, of Meyersburg, broke his right arm in two places while helping to saw wood at Mr. James Jones'. His arm was caught in the pulley and was drawn in and broken twice before he was released. Fortunately this kept him from being taken in, thus saving his life. The accident happened when Scott slipped and fell toward the machine.

Dr. Free was called and attended to the arm, and though he is suffering, Mr. Scott is able to be around, but will be unable to do much work for many weeks.

ANNIVERSARY OF ST. JAMES

St. James' Methodist Church, which is holding its anniversary next Sunday, is one of the most recently organized churches of Peterborough. Its beginning dates back only a few years.

The first services were held on the second Sunday in July, 1908, in a tent at the corner of Romaine and Aylmer streets, where the present church now stands, and were conducted by Rev. H. M. Manning. At this service there were present 51, and at the Sunday School 39.

The services were continued in the tent until November and were then discontinued until the basement of the new Sunday School hall, then in course of erection, was available. But the Sunday School was continued without interruption in the hall of the King Edward School. The corner-stone of the present modern Sunday School building was laid in 1908. It continued to be used both for the church services and Sunday School purposes until April, 1916, when the present beautiful church edifice was opened and dedicated to the worship of God, during the pastorate of Rev. B. Greatrix.

ST. JAMES' METHODIST CHURCH.

Out of these small beginnings St. James' Church has grown to be a large and flourishing cause, with the promise of a splendid future. It has a large Sunday School, with an enrolment of over 500. For the success which the school has attained much credit is due Mr. A. E. Prest, who has been superintendent since the beginning of the school. He is ably assisted by a faithful staff of officers and teachers who have the work very much at heart.

Splendid financial assistance has been given to the church by many friends throughout the city, and special help has been given to the cause of St. James' by Messrs. W. G. Morrow, B. F. Ackerman and A. W. Cressman, who are members of the Trustee Board.

The present pastor, Rev. J. D. Richardson, M.A., came here last July from London. During his pastorate the church has shown marked improvement, and the congregations have greatly increased. By special request, he will preach at the anniversary services on Sunday, and will be assisted in the services by Rev. H. M. Manning, under whose ministry St. James' Church was instituted, and also by Rev. B. Greatrix, during whose ministry the present church edifice was erected.

HASTINGS AND THE DISTRICT

Reeve W. M. Fowlds Was Unable to Return in Time for Council Meeting.

HASTINGS, April 5.—Reeve W. M. Fowlds was in Cobourg yesterday on Counties Council business, and owing to the condition of the roads, he was unable to make the return trip, travelling as he was by automobile, in time for the regular session of the village Council last night. The meeting was accordingly postponed until some night next week. The usual routine budget was on the programme.

Funeral Yesterday.

The funeral of Mary Ellen Scriver, wife of William Clapper, of Hastings, was held from their home in Asphodel Township, on the Norwood Road, yesterday afternoon.

The service was held at the house at 2 o'clock, Rev. M. L. Hinton conducting. The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Arthur Knight, J. W. Valleau, William Preston, Alex. Wilson, and Gilbert Ireland.

Deceased was seventy-five years of age, and has been a life-long resident of Hastings. The surviving relatives are two brothers, John and Albert, of Hastings; two sons, William of Hastings and Lewis, formerly of Toronto; two daughters, Mrs. Wilcotte Wave and Mrs. A. Brunnell, of Hastings.

Interment took place in the Trent Valley Cemetery.

School Boards Meet

A meeting of the following school boards was held on Wednesday evening to discuss the school question of a Consolidated school for Hastings. Fife's school, Flemming's school and Elgin School. Nothing definite was done as the matter has to be laid before the people living in the section mentioned, so it was decided to hold another meeting in the near future.

Home on Visit

After an absence of about thirty years, Mr. Zack Hill of Detroit, Michigan, has been renewing acquaintances here in the village. While here he spent the time at his brothers' homes Thomas and William, and has now gone to Peterboro to visit his other brother who resides in that city.

Mr. B. MacVicar of London, was in the village this week.

Miss Beryl Hill was in Campbellford on Wednesday.

Miss Scott Fife was in Campbellford this week.

Miss Teressa Lamey has returned to Windsor after having spent some time at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Lamey, Gravel Road.

GERMANS TO RACE IN IRELAND

DUBLIN, April 5.—(Associated Press).—The race for the Governor General's Cup to be run at Punchadown in April has taken on an international aspect through the announcement of several German officers of their intention to enter horses and bring crack amateur horsemen from Germany to ride them. It is probable that Italian and Austrian army officers also will enter the field.

The Governor General's Cup was presented by the first Governor General, T. M. Healy.

MR. SMITH'S ATTITUDE.

Hon. Peter Smith has announced that he does not intend to volunteer to give evidence before the Public Accounts Committee, and Hon. Manning Doherty, the Progressive Leader in the Legislature, declares that, although he was going to move that the former Treasurer be called as a witness, the more serious charges that are developing have caused him to decide not to press the motion.

The general impression seems to be that Mr. Smith is making a serious mistake in not coming forward now to tell what he knows about the transactions under investigation, and that his friends are not giving him wise counsel in urging him not to volunteer his evidence.

The longer he holds back the stronger will become the public conviction that he has good reason for not facing the cross-examination of the committee.

He chooses to stay away, but the committee should see to it that he gets an invitation to be present.

SOMETHING WRONG HERE.

The campaign in the West to secure the completion of the Hudson Bay Railway continues to increase in intensity.

Page advertisements in Western newspapers give numerous reasons why the road should be finished and the terminal completed.

Some of the arguments used are more appealing than they are truthful.

For example, these advertisements declare that when the Hudson Bay line is completed the farmers of the West will save $30,000,000 from a single season's crop.

If this were a fact it would undoubtedly be a convincing argument in favour of completing the line as soon as possible.

But how could $30,000,000 be saved in the face of the fact that the report of the Senate Committee which investigated the undertaking in 1920—a report that is, by the way, invariably quoted by Westerners in support of their claims—estimated that 15,000,000 bushels of wheat per year would be the maximum that could be expected to be moved out of Hudson Bay?

That would mean that in order that $30,000,000 would be saved there would need to be a saving of $2 on every bushel of wheat that was shipped—and wheat is 70 cents a bushel.

ANOTHER FOOLISH HIKE.

Municipalities along the route will be interested in hearing that unemployed in Toronto are proposing a hike to Ottawa for the purpose of impresaing upon the Federal Government the necessity of proceeding with the famous viaduct.

One of the leaders behind the movement thinks that he can persuade 2,000 men to take part in the expedition.

The good folks of Oshawa and Port Hope and Cobourg and Belleville and other towns along the way, remembering how they had to feed the "hiking harvesters," will no doubt throw up their hats and cheer madly when they realize that they are likely to have the honour of entertaining a small army of unemployed.

This "hiking" farce has been overplayed, and the municipalities likely to be affected should lose no time in declaring that they do not propose to be cafeterias for every band of out-of-works that chooses to parade along the highway.

If Toronto wants the moral support of several thousand unemployed to strengthen its claim for the building of the viaduct it is up to Toronto to see that the hikers are provided with enough food to carry them through to Ottawa and back.

There is no reason why other towns should have to continue this Santa Claus business indefinitely.

THEY WANT THE TRUTH.

The public is not so much concerned over how the investigation into Provincial finances is conducted as it is about seeing that the inquiry is complete and exhaustive.

The Progressive Leader has suggested a royal commission; the Premier declares that the Public Accounts Committee is the proper body to carry on the investigation.

The people generally are not greatly interested in what form the inquiry takes, but they do want to see it carried through until the whole mess is cleared up, and probably the Public Accounts Committee, which is not pinned down by rules of evidence, will get at the facts as quickly and satisfactorily as any other body.

It is the facts that are demanded.

That there was gross inefficiency and unbusinesslike methods in the Provincial Treasury's office during the regime of Hon. Peter Smith has already been revealed.

There are rumours and suggestions of much worse things than inefficiency.

These rumours must be proven or shown to be false.

If there has been grafting in the administration of Ontario's finances the people of this Province demand to know the identity of the grafters.

They want them exposed, and they want them punished, and they don't want the inquiry dropped until every last scrap of evidence bearing on these transactions has been produced.

The Public Accounts Committee has made considerable progress, and if it continues its work as it has commenced there will not be many complaints from the people whose only anxiety is that the truth shall be revealed.

UNWARRANTABLE INTERFERENCE.

In proposing his amendment to the Church Union Bill, which carried in the Private Bills Committee yesterday, W. J. Finlayson, member for East Simcoe, said that the promoters of the bill "made the common mistake of the day—the worship of size."

The promoters of the bill are the Presbyterian Church of Canada, the Methodist Church of Canada and the Congregational Church of Canada, all of which have decided to unite, and, being incorporated bodies, are asking that legal effect be given to their decision.

The competence of these religious bodies to govern themselves is not open to question. Outsiders who label the decision reached after twenty years of deliberation, as the worship of size, commit an impertinence. Members of Legislatures exceed all bounds when they set themselves up in the Upper House of sectarian Parliaments.

Public bodies have enough to do without meddling with the affairs of religious denominations. The Finlayson amendment, introduced by a member of a church not affected by the bill, and carried by the votes of other such members, is an unwarrantable interference with the rights of great religious denominations. Its effect will be to frustrate the object of the churches that have resolved to unite. And it is calculated to give rise to an interminable series of lawsuits.

The Private Bills Committee will have a chance to reconsider its unfortunate action of yesterday. On second thought the members should realize that the representatives of the state have no right to change a church union movement into church secession.—Toronto Star.

CANADA'S FUEL SUPPLY.

After another day-long debate, during which all the old fiscal ghosts were paraded, and half of the House showed that it was willing to vote for most anything or nothing, Parliament has decided that Canada's fuel supply must be made independent of the United States. It is a laudable, if not particularly original decision; the question is, how is it going to be achieved? We have been talking about making Canada independent of United States coal for half a generation, yet last year we imported more coal from the United States than ever before in our history. We have wasted tons of ink, and days upon end of Parliament; we have had experiments with peat and coke; we have had fuel committees and fuel inquiries; we have published blue-books and bulletins by the ton; we have spent almost millions upon investigations—and where have we got? More than that, where are we going to get now?

The people of Canada are sick and tired of politicians and newspapers and geologists telling them that we have billions of tons of bituminous and anthracite coal. What they want to know is how this coal can be put into their coal bins at a not prohibitive price.

Alberta, as The Journal demonstrated to Ottawa fuel-users last year, has good coal. But The Journal's experiment equally demonstrated that with existing transportation costs Alberta coal cannot be marketed in Ottawa. It simply cannot be done. That being clear, the simple question is: Can our railways haul it any more cheaply, and, if not, should the Government fix a rate that would enable the coal to be marketed in Central Canada at a reasonable price, and stand prepared to compensate the railways for whatever loss cheaper haulage might involve?

If the State stands prepared to do that, then Central Canada need not depend upon the United States for coal. If we can't do that, then Central Canada must depend upon the United States for coal.

Talk of a higher duty on American coal is sheer nonsense. The only certain result of higher duties would be to compel the people of Central Canada to pay more for a necessity that is already abnormally high. They wouldn't bring Alberta coal or Nova Scotia coal to Ottawa one cent more cheaply than for what it can be brought here now; and they would add to the cost of United States coal that would continue to come in.

Mr. Meighen last night talked of the danger of the United States refusing Canada coal. That, surely, is a remote contingency. We can imagine a United States strike, or a United States transportation blockade, curtailing our supply—a possibility worth consideration—but surely it is going a little far afield to contemplate the peope of the United States deliberately using their coal resources to either coerce or to bargain with the people of Canada. If we are going to act on that assumption, then what about cotton and oil? What about the 475,000,000 gallons of oil that we imported from the United States last year—75 million gallons more than during the year before? An American embargo on oil would almost hit us as hard as an American embargo on coal, because whereas we have coal, we haven't any oil—and oil has come to be a tremendous factor in the life of a nation.

There is no use in wasting time and thought about such possibilities. What Canada needs to do is to see if she cannot develop her own coal fields for her own sake. She can do that only, in our judgment, by solving the question of transportation; and it is to that question, not to foolish fiscal measures, nor to more investigations such as we have been plagued with, that she should address herself.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Peter Smith says he has been advised by his friends not to make any statement just yet before the Public Accounts Committee. Such friends may mean well, but they are on the wrong track.

Sir Henry Thornton doubtless realizes that all his difficulties are not to be found in the actual operation of the railways under his direction.

The Public Accounts Committee is of more importance than the Legislature just now, so far as the interest of the public is concerned at least.

sanne is valuable inasmuch as it will cause Canadians to remember there was such a treaty. But if the Canadian Parliament doesn't ratify, it will Canada still be technically at war with Turkey?

The "hiking harvesters" have obtained from their tramp to Ottawa just what the Examiner said they would get—nothing.

I.O.D.E. Will Hold Tag Day For Blind.

Under the auspices of the I.O.D.E. chapters of the city, a tag day in aid of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind will be held in Peterboro on Saturday next, April 12th. It is two years since the Institute has solicited any funds in this city, and the local appeal will be shortly in advance of a Province-wide tag day, to be held sometime in the month of May.

The Canadian National Institute for the Blind is a Dominion-wide organization, about fifty per cent of its expenses being paid by the Dominion, Provincial and Municipal Governments and the balance by public subscription. It cost $235,000 to maintain the Institute last year. The head office is in Toronto, and branch offices and work-rooms are maintained in Halifax, Ottawa, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

BONES OF EARTHQUAKE VICTIMS CAST ASHORE BY JAPANESE GALES.

TOKIO, Japan, April 5 (Associated Press). — During heavy storms which have whipped the eastern coast of Japan recently, scores of bodies and many bones, believed to be those of victims of the September earthquake, have been washed ashore at Koyasu, a summer resort and fishing village near Yokohama, according to Japanese correspondents.

Many of these bodies are believed to be those of Koreans or supposed Koreans who were killed by the fisherfolk of this and neighbouring villages during the panic succeeding the earthquake.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, April 4.—With a nicely regulated run of cattle this week at the Union Stock Yards, the buying was able to take of all offerings and the engendered competition sufficient to advance prices in all butchers except bulls from 10 to 25 cents a cwt. The receipts were only a little over 5,500 head for the four days. This week's supply of butchers could have been improved on in the matter of finish and more of the choice and near choice could have been used without impairing prices. Some of the smaller beef dealers had difficulty in getting supplies as the commission men refused to break up loads when they were able to sell them in bulk.

The exporters were able to get about their full supply and took in all 1070 head. Except in bulls, the export prices were up in accord with the butchers this week. The really good steers were available below $8 a cwt. and some cost as high as $8.50. Fat heifers for overseas cost 7¼ to 8 cents a pound, and cows averaged about 5½ cents. Bulls were not in too good demand and the prices paid ran all the way from 3¼ to 5¼ cents a pound. Nearly 20 per cent of this weeks' receipts at the yards were taken for export and this trade is helping out what otherwise would have made a bad congestion.

Good to choice handy and medium weight butchers' steers and heifers were over 7 cents a pound at $7.50 a cwt. was paid for some not altogether choice. Good medium butchers averaged 6½ cents and common light butchers with any kind of kill in them, sold at 5¼ cents a pound. Butchers' cows continued to be in demand, although prices are out of line with other beef stock. The extra fat patchy cow for special purpose runs from 6¼ to 7 cents, with the useful choice cow from 5½ to 6 cents. Good cows at 4¾ to 5 cents, and mediums up to 4½ cents. Cows average 25 cents a cwt. higher this week. Bulls were dull and about unchanged in price. Baby beeves are selling firm.

A fair volume of feeding stock was turned over in the four days. Feeders and stockers are high and with not too much demand. Breedy feeders around 900 lbs. each are from $6.10 to $6.50 a cwt. and light stockers less than 700 lbs. each, are selling up to $5.75 a cwt. Any springers that came in this week were taken care of, but this trade is by no means good. With a reasonable run of butchers' cattle next week the market should be good as there will be the usual Easter demand to be arranged for.

Deliveries of calves have not been as heavy as anticipated and only one heavy run was recorded for the week. This consisted principally of dairy calves, but the market found no difficulty in using them up. Choice calves touched 12½ cents and good mediums were around 10 cents all week. The common light calf sold anywhere from 6 to 8 cents.

Last year's lambs are about done and the few available are bringing from 15½ to 16½ cents a pound. Spring lambs are running freer and those 40 to 50 lbs. are good for from $14 to $17 each. Choice sheep are strong at 9 cents and yearlings are a cent better.

Packers fought hard to keep hogs down to $7.25 a cwt. f.o.b., but the pressure of offerings was too light to admit of this, and the quotation had to be put back to $7.50 at which it stands for next Monday's deliveries.

DOCTORS WANTED TO OPERATE

Mrs. Quillon Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her from an Operation

Muskegon, Michigan.—"After doctoring for eight or nine years with different physicians without any relief at all, they said at last that medicine would not reach my case and I should have an operation. I had heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and often saw it advertised in different papers where some women had suffered just as I did and got well and strong again by taking the Vegetable Compound. I decided to see what it would do for me, and before I had finished the fourth bottle I was much better, the weakness stopped and the severe pains in my sides left me. I am now much stronger and do my own work and work in the factory besides. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound and give it all the praise."—Mrs. NELLIE QUILLON, 17 Morris St., Muskegon, Mich.

Women should heed such warning symptoms as bearing-down pains and weakness, for they indicate some female trouble, and a persistent and faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will seldom fail to help.

A Severe Attack Of Heart Trouble Wa Relieved By MILBURN'S Heart and Nerve Pills

Mr. S. E. Barnes, Athens, Ont., writes:—"Four years ago I had a very severe attack of heart trouble. I consulted my doctor; he treated me for some time, but I only seemed to be getting worse. I finally went to our druggist and purchased three boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and derived immediate relief from their use, and I can truthfully say they are a wonderful medicine. I always keep a box on hand, and if I feel out of sorts I take a few pills and feel all right again."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BRITISH LOSING HOME MARKET

LONDON, April 5.—(Associated Press).—Supplies of foreign meat in the markets of Great Britain are gradually ousting those from the Dominions, according to figures of imports for 1923. These show that only 28 per cent. of beef, mutton and lamb imported was produced within the Empire, while in 1922 it was 35 per cent. and in 1920, 43 per cent.

Played Their Part.

In reviewing the history of the Provincial Liberal-Conservative Association of Ontario, its president, John R. MacNicol, of Toronto, stressed that organization's activities in the last Provincial elections, contending that its members had played an important part in ousting an incompetent administration and electing a sane and efficient leader and Premier in Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, who he declared grows bigger and bigger every day. Pointing out that last fall the province had been divided into eight Conservative districts, of which this East Centre one is the sixth, he warmly congratulated Secretary Clysdale on his phenomenal success as an organizer. Optimistic in the growing strength of Conservative organizations, he declared that no matter when the Federal elections are staged, "we'll trim the King administration and its supporters in protection of Canada's agricultural, labor and industrial interests." (Cheers). Characterizing the proportional representation and transferance vote projects as an iniquitous piece of legislation— a system which by its very nature creates groups— there here followed three rousing cheers and a tiger for Fenelon Falls, which did its part in the defeat of Edgar Watson, chairman of the committee which tried to inflict proportional representation in Ontario. The speaker expressed inspiring confidence that in the next Dominion elections, which he declared cannot come too soon for the welfare of Canada, Ontario Conservatives will send no less than 65, possibly 70 members to Ottawa to line up behind a government coming in shortly under the premiership of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen. (Prolonged applause).

Letter from Meighen.

A communication from Right Hon. Arthur Meighen expressed regret at his absence from this convention owing to the House at Ottawa being in session. He also sent cordial greeting warm expressions of good will.

Confidence in Leaders.

The convention unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

Moved by Wm. A. Robinson of Cannington and seconded by Roland Denne of Peterborough, that the East Centre District Conservative Association, congratulates Hon. G. Howard Ferguson upon his sweeping victory of June 25th, and upon his assuming the Premiership of Ontario, and expresses confidence in his leadership of the Conservative party in the province.

This meeting also expresses pleasure at the character and ability of the men he has for his Cabinet, and feels confident that they will carry into effect the policies inculcated in the last election campaign, which will make for the development of the Province, and the general welfare of the citizens of Ontario.

Moved by T. H. Stinson, of Lindsay, seconded by A. R. Dundas of Cobourg, that the East Centre District Conservative Association, expresses confidence in the Right Hon. Arthur Meighen as leader of the Conservative party for the Dominion, and is sattsfied that his steady adherence to the historic principles of the Conservative party will result in his return to power at the head of a Conservative government, which will bring about a restoration of confidence, stability and prosperity, in agriculture, business, and other pursuits. We hereby pledge our individual support.

On to Ottawa.

Secretary Clysdale, in an address during the afternoon, was simply elated at the large gathering present, and urged co-operative effort to ensure that every man and woman of age in the district are enrolled on the voters' list this fall. And he earnestly counseled that "On to Ottawa!" should under existing conditions, be the slogan of the Conservative organizations and Conservatives individually.

Appreciates Honor.

In assuming the chair and appreciating the honor conferred upon him President-elect Stinson touched on the trying times in the Dominion just now, and emphasized that in all big issues Conservatives had always stood four-square.

Reviewing the party's record while handling the reins of power he reminded the convention that Conservatives had to their credit Federation of the Dominion, construction of the C.P.R. as a great highway from coast to coast, and the conducting of those great war issues and consequent expenditure of millions of dollars without one single charge of misappropriation having been laid against their administration. He contrasted the country's experience under the U.F.O. government, and concluded with a scathing arraignment of Drury and Company for spending $560,000 in a vain attempt to besmirch Hon G. Howard Ferguson's character.

A Grave Crisis.

Hon. H. H. Stevens, the guest of honor, here talked his way into the hearts of the gathering in a speech necessarily brief owing to his being the main speaker at the evening public meeting. Declaring that never had their been a period in the history of Canada when Canadians were faced with so grave an industrial and economic crisis as at present, to his mind there is only one institution which can save the country from industrial chaos, and that is the Conservative party with its national policy. And he continued, while stressing the serious problems before the people to-day, there was never a time when this great Dominion had so inefficient a government to tackle such a menacing situation—an administration weak, wobbling and vacillating, leaving these problems to solve themselves But the Conservative associations of both Ontario and the Dominion are, he said, keeping in touch with affairs; they believe in the principles for which the party stands and they endorse the policy of Right Hon. Arthur Meighen. And Premier King, when he goes to the polls will find that people did and do expect election pledges to be kept.

Other Speakers.

The remainder of the afternoon before dinner was served the delegates by Conservative ladies, was taken up by brief two and a half minute speeches.

Following a few remarks from Delegate Senn of Haldimand, Dr. Harcourt of Parry Sound, did not believe any Canadian province had a Cabinet to-day doing the business that the Ontario government is wading through, nor a leader equal to Premier Ferguson.

F. W. Bowen of Durham expected Ontario to send 65 or 70 conservative members to Ottawa next election.

A. J. Fallis of East Durham believed that from this and similar conventions there will radiate a conservative enthusiasm which will not only sweep this province but the whole Dominion. Get together and organize ready for the fray, he urged, for the time is not far distant when you will be called upon to help unravel the tangle at Ottawa. — (Cheers.)

T. H. Thompson of East Hastings considered this convention an inspiration from which concrete results will follow. He believed organization was responsible for the the election of two Conservative members in Hastings in 1921.

Major Belford of East Northumberland, was proud to be a follower of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen and a humble lieutenant of Premier Ferguson. In his opinion, despite all opposition, criticism, the interests of the country are infinitely safer in the hands of the old Conservative party than in those of that miserable, incompetent and extravagant U.F.O. contraption, now defunct.

W. H. Bradburn, the local member of the Legislature, warmly congratulated the president upon his election, and upon the latter's home town of Lindsay having been voted the place in which this new organization is going to to meet. Coupled with the assurance that Peterborough section shall be well represented at these gatherings, Mr. Bradburn extended hearty thanks to the large number of delegates present here from Victoria County.

Major Johnston of East Peterboro, R. J. Patterson of South Victoria, J. R. Mark of North Victoria, and M. E. Maybee of Northumberland each held the interest of their audience with inspiring talks.

Mrs. (Dr.) Gould of Fenelon Falls and Mrs. Howard Fallis of North Monaghan were also heard to good advantage.

The National Policy.

Dr. Kaiser, a life-long worker for the Conservative party because he believes in their principles, claimed that the growth of Oshawa is due to its protection foundations laid of the Conservatives' national policy. "We in Oshawa look upon Mackenzie King as like a man, torch in hand, wandering among the industries of Canada, and menacing this country's industrial fabric," he said.

LINIMENT FOUND TO BE POWERFUL GERMICIDE

Originally, Absorbine Jr. was sold only as a pain reliever and an embrocation. It was quickly discovered that the liniment was positive death to all forms of germ life, and it is now used as a mouth wash, for wound dressing and for all disinfecting purposes.

Another surprise was yet in store. A Wm. Pratt of Springfield, Mass., applied Absorbine Jr. to a varicose vein to relieve the intense pain. Not only did the pain leave, but he noticed every day the swollen vein becoming smaller. The treatment was kept up and, today, Mr. Pratt's legs, though he has never used anything else on them, are as smooth as when he was a boy. It has now been proved that Absorbine Jr. is an actual specific for varicose veins, leg ulcers, boils, pyorrhoea and a number of other ailments and injuries besides that for which it was first prepared. LIBERALS AROUSING IN CAMPBELLFORD PROMISE A RETURN TO THE FOLD Constituency Was Not Always So Conservative As It Appears To-Day— Hon. Nelson Parliament Will Lead Strong Campaign — Opening Gun Soon Expected.

AN UPHILL FIGHT.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 5. — The Liberal Association for East Northumberland, after being quiescent for several years, is beginning to show signs of returning animation and the members are now planning to hold a convention in Campbellford in the near future, where the party will be reorganized and put into fighting order for the next Federal campaign. J. Nelson Stone, of town, is president of the association, and F. M. Brintnell, of Colborne, is secretary-treasurer. D. J. Lynch is the vice-president for Campbellford. One of the speakers whom it is proposed to bring here to address the convention and to inspire the faithful and still intensified with new enthusiasm is Hon. Nelson Parliament, who was Speaker of the Ontario Legislature during the Drury regime. Others mentioned are G. N. Gordon, M.P., of Peterborough, Deputy Speaker of Parliament, and Hon. Geo. P. Graham, Minister of Railways. Mr. Graham's parents were residents of this county, leaving here a short time before the birth of their illustrious son.

Uphill Fight

Of late years the Liberal party in East Northumberland has been traveling a rocky road. They put no candidate in the field in 1919 when Wesley Montgomery of Brighton was elected on the U. F. O. ticket.

At the last Federal election an attempt was made to induce Sam Clarke, of Cobourg, who has represented West Northumberland in the Legislature for the past quarter of a century or more, and who is acknowledged to be the strongest Liberal vote-getter in the county to forsake the Provincial for the Federal field. Northumberland County has two members in the Legislature and one in the Dominion Parliament.

Mr. Clarke was not disposed to sever the associations of years and enter new surroundings for after giving the proposition careful consideration he turned it down. The party finally nominated Charles W. Kerr, of Toronto, a member of the well-known family of that name in Cobourg, and brother of F. D. Kerr, of Peterborough, and W. F. Kerr, crown attorney for Northumberland. The election in 1921 was a three-cornered fight, the other candidates being M. E. Maybee, Conservative, and Fred Slade, Progressive. Mr. Maybee was elected.

The Election in 1923

The Liberals allowed the riding to go by default in 1923. A meeting of the association was held at Warkworth, political headquarters for the county, when the matter of nominating a candidate was discussed. Major Belford, the present Provincial representative, and Wesley Montgomery, the then member, were in the field and the outlook for Liberal success in a triangular contest, was not encouraging. Dr. W. G. Robertson, of Colborne, was the most likely prospective standard bearer and the association was willing to give him first place, but it was finally decided to take no action.

The Liberals, however, will be in the field in the next election whether that is held this year or in 1925. After the convention the organization will be strengthened all over the riding. There are plenty of strong and popular members of the party from whom a candidate can be selected.

Not Always Conservative

Northumberland County has not always been as solidly Conservative as it appears today. In the past, the Liberals have had a fair proportion of the years of representation. The late J. M. Ferris represented the riding at Toronto, in the days of Sir Almer Mowat for over 15 years. Another Liberal sent to Toronto was J. H. Douglas, now of Toronto, but formerly a leading farmer near Warkworth.

The Farmers' Club

The Farmers' Club here is as active as ever in the aims for which it was organized, but the Progressives have not held a meeting since the cataclysm of last June. The Liberals anticipate a return to the two-party system and this they regard as a brighter prospect for their own future.

More Cattle Die

Roy Walker, a farmer in Rawdon Township, near Menie, recently lost four head of dairy cattle, the trouble having the same symptoms as the disease which caused the death of eight cattle belonging to Albert Stephens. A Campbellford veterinary who was called, says that the cattle were poisoned by sweet clover which Mr. Walker had been feeding, and which was stored in a mow.

Three Petitions Out

Three petitions are being circulated among the business men all dealing with the weekly half holiday problem. One petition asks the town council to set aside Wednesday afternoon, another favors Thursday and the third would retain Friday. Some are in favor of a weekly half holiday 11 months in the year, while others would have it last from May until November.

Up to last night the advocater of a Wednesday half holiday has the lead in the number of signatures to this petition. There is a wide difference of opinion among the business men. As an evidence of this the names of the two members of one firm appear on different petitions.

Gone to Peterborough

C. H. Davidson, I. A. Humphries, G. L. Kingston and W. J. Armstrong were among those who went to Peterborough Friday to attend the Conservative convention.

Home From California

J. A. Stewart, manager of the Standard, and Mrs. Stewart, who spent the winter in California, have returned to town. Mr. Stewart being completely restored in health. They spent the most of their holiday in Los Angeles, which is the winter resort of tourists from all parts of the continent. While the people at home were worrying over the fuel question, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart were endeavoring to keep cool in a temperature that sometimes rose as high as 90 degrees in the shade.

Mr. Stewart says that he visited B. I. and Mrs. Gibson, who went from here to Redlands last fall. Mr. Gibson is now owner of a fine orange grove and is now harvesting his season's crop, which is a bountiful one. He likes the country and is well satisfied with his new business outlook.

Drugs Have Never Cured Constipation

Internal Bathing the Only Permanent Remedy.

It is a surprising fact to note the number of persons who persist in taking drugs of various kinds for constipation and go on, year after year, gradually becoming worse all the time.

The system is continually becoming poisoned, not only with the poisonous waste which accumulates in the intestines, but the drugs themselves become absorbed, until the system becomes weakened, the blood becomes thin and poisoned, you therefore become liable to any disease that is prevalent.

You take cold easily, digestion becomes troublesome, heart becomes weakened, rheumatism or neuritis sets in, then sleepless nights and kidneys become affected. In other words, you shorten your life and lose the pleasure of real health and the joy of living.

Internal bathing with the J.B.L. Cascade has restored thousands to perfect health.

It completely removes constipation, keeps the system clean so that the blood circulates through a healthy colon. Soon the blood becomes purified again and you feel just like a different person. That elastic step soon returns, and you feel that you have something yet to live for.

Now this is not fiction, it is the experience of thousands who have pulled themselves out of the drug and medicine rut and used their own commonsense. The J.B.L. Cascade is the perfected invention of Dr. Chas. A. Tyrell of New York, for Internal Bathing. His theory is: Keep the blood pure and you will be well. A jeweler of Cobalt wrote us the other day saying: "Before getting the J.B.L. Cascade our doctor's bills were over $200.00 each year, and since receiving the Cascade two years ago have not had a doctor in the house. We all use it."

If you want to be healthy all the time get a J.B.L. Cascade and Bath Internally. Send for Booklet, "The What, the Why, the Way of Internal Bathing." It is free, and you will learn many facts about yourself and the way to be well all the time. Write for Booklet today. Address, Tyrell's Hygienic Institute, 163 College St., Toronto.

This booklet may be obtained also at Warne Drug Co.

A new stain-resisting silver, called "Silanca", which does not tarnish in ordinary use, has been discovered.

BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SPRING

The Spring is a time of anxiety to mothers who have little ones in the home. Conditions make it necessary to keep the baby indoors. He is often confined to overheated, badly ventilated rooms and catches colds which rack his whole system. To guard against this a box of Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in the house and an occasional dose given the baby to keep his stomach and bowels working regularly. This will prevent colds, constipation or colic and keep baby well. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ENGLAND'S TRADE GAINS IN BRAZIL.

Americans Admit They Are Being Ousted From Profitable Market.

By U. G. KEENER.

RIO DE JANEIRO — April 5.— (United Press).—American business men in Brazil, accustomed to look upon with only passive interest propaganda of their rival tradesmen of European countries, are at last feeling the effects of their mistake in failing to carry out any kind of programme of organized propaganda for their products. Now, however, late, they are organizing a campaign for effective advertising of their wares.

The American Chamber of Commerce for Brazil has appointed a propaganda committee whose duty it is to bring to the attention of Brazilians what Americans have done towards development of this country and what America still has to offer Brazil to assist her in further development.

The necessity of such a campaign was brought home to Americans by the British Financial Mission, which has been in Brazil since the first of the year making a study of economic conditions and industries in Brazil and, at the same time, putting in a word now and then for British businessmen.

British Mission a Success

Due to the investigation of Brazilian financial and economic conditions by this important commission, it is generally believed a Brazilian loan will soon be floated in England, which will probably be a funding loan consolidating all of Brazil's foreign indebtedness.

Americans forecast that such a loan would have certain strings tied to it, and that British industrial interests in Brazil would be given certain concessions in recognition of this help. With the operation of the British Mission here the newspapers have been full of its activities and as a consequence much confidence is being placed in the ability of English financial experts and in Britain generally.

Americans have witnessed a great change in Brazil's international trade during the past two years, a change to the advantage of England at the expense of the United States. During the five years ending with 1922 Brazilian imports from the United States amounted to a total value of 138,585,947 pounds, as compared with only 75,677,889 pounds from Great Britain. Brazilian exports for the same period of five years to the United States were valued at 168,475,300 pounds and to Great Britain only5 ,297,300 pounds. Since 1922 these figures have been changed, and imports into this country from the United States now fall far below the total value of merchandise received from Great Britain. The United States, however, remains as Brazil's principal buyer, due to the large consumption of Brazilian coffee.

So far, Americans in Brazil have not lived up to the reputation of being the world's greatest advertisers. American firms operating in this country do some advertising, but so far there has been a sad lack of good organized propaganda for their products.

On the other hand, British, French, German, Italian and Portuguese importers, assisted by their respective Governments, have carried on well organized propaganda for many years.

NAVY CHARTS HELP PACIFIC FISHERMEN

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 5.— (United Press).—Science has come to the aid of fishermen off California's coast.

New bathymetric charts, compiled by the hydrographic office of the United States Navy, shows fishermen how to locate fishing banks, according to C. S. Bauder, eputy Fish and Game Commissioner, who says this system has revolutionized the industry.

These charts account, Bauder says, for the big catches now being made.

From San Francisco to Point Descanso, below San Diego, destroyers charted the ocean bottom, extending 100 miles out from the coast. Some 34,000 square miles were covered.

Probably the most popular fishing bank discovered by use of the charts is 20 miles west of San Nicholas Island, south of Beggs Rock.

Tortured for Three Years

Helpless from Rheumatism Until Relieved By "Fruit-a-tives"

No wonder people regard "Fruit-a-tives" as a faithful family friend and are so eager to tell what it has done for them.

After years of suffering, they appreciate the wonderful powers of this fruit treatment in relieving them of pain and misery and discouragement.

As Mr. P. R. Boissinot, of LaBroquerie, Man., wrote: "For three years, I had to give up work; my arms were so swollen and I was so sick. I felt I would never be able to work on the farm any more. But one day, a cousin came to see me and advised me to take "Fruit-a-tives". Now, I am in good health. I rest well and do all my work. I can recommend "Fruit-a-tives" for Rheumatism that made me suffer so much and I thank you for this good remedy".

"Fruit-a-tives" is the wonderful medicine made from the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes and tonics—and is the only complete treatment ever discovered for Rheumatism, Pain in the Back, Lumbago, Neuralgia, Headaches and other troubles due to the improper action of the stomach, bowels and kidneys.

SNAKESKIN THE NEWEST THING IN LONDON HATS

LONDON, April 5. — (United Press).—Snakeskin hats are the latest things in spring fashion here.

Rattlesnake hides—with the rattles—were the favorites at an opening display of the newest millinery.

Leopard-skin trimmings competed closely with the reptilian creations.

Aside from the zoological section of the hat stores the new styles seem to run to futuristic effects—big crimson rosettes splashed against bright yellow, and all sorts of smashing color contrasts.

An inviolate rule of hat construction this year appears to be that one side of the brim must never, never be allowed to know what the other side is doing.

Chicago is building a $100,000,000 railway terminal which will be the largest in the world.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Easter Meeting of the Women's Auxiliary

MILLBROOK, April 4.— The Easter meeting of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of the Methodist church was held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. P. Stinson, over forty members and visitors being in attendance.

The chair was taken by the president, Mrs. (Rev.) S. T. Tucker, for the opening devotional period and the business session, the minutes being read by the secretary Mrs. C. W. Richards.

On motion of Miss Dean seconded by Miss S. Hetherington, Mrs. L. Rea was appointed delegate to the Branch meeting which will be held this year in the Port Hope Methodist church, on June 3, 4, and 5. Miss Hampton was appointed alternate delegate, but it is expected as the convention is so near, there will be a number of car-loads motor over and attend the sessions.

The president announced that all groups must have their money in the hands of the treasurer by the end of April as the year's report must be made out and the money sent to the branch treasurer Mrs. J. Kendry, Peterboro, not later than May 6th all funds received after that date being carried over until next year. Mrs. Tucker also reminded the members of the special service to be held on Easter Sunday morning, when Miss E. C. Hawken, our missionary to Kolokreeka, Alberta, will be present and give an address on her work. The Auxiliary Circle, and Band will attend in a body and occupy the centre front pews.

Certificates were presented by the president to the three new life members, who have paid the necssary fee of twenty-five dollars during the year, Mrs. J. H. George, Mrs. M. Weatherup, and Mrs. E. S. Burnham. Mrs. Victor Lambert, who has recently moved to the village, is also a life member of the W.M.S. and adds another to the list of the local Auxiliary, making fifteen in all now on the roll.

A communication was read from Mrs. N. E. Ashton, of Campbellford, president of the Bay of Quinte Branch, asking that all W.M.S. members throughout the province form a prayer league, the only condition of membership being that each one pledges herself to pray daily for the retention of the Ontario Temperance Act, and that a resolution be forwarded from each Auxiliary to Hon. W. F. Nickle, Attorney-General of Ontario, requesting that no change be made in the O.T.A. until fuller trial of its merits can be given. "A federation of Christian women of all the churches, together with the W.C.T.U., has been formed to throw all the weight possible into the fight to retain the Ontario Temperance Act." Misses Burnham and Hetherington were appointed to draft the resolution, which must be signed by the president and the corresponding secretary, and forward same to Toronto.

The "Watch Tower" brought many interesting items from the mission fields though the news from China that opium production in West China increasing and "like a huge octopus, from which escape is well-night impossible once its arms have been wound round its victim, is sapping the life from the people," is discouraging.

One new member in group "F" Mrs. I. M. Nattrass, was enrolled. On motion of Miss Hampton, and Mrs. Stinson, it was decided to hold the W.M.S. meetings for the future on the second Wednesday of each month, instead of the first as has been the custom, to avoid having the Ladies' Act and the missionary meetings come in the same week. It was also moved and seconded that the Auxiliary provide lillies for the church on Easter Sunday, all present signifying their approval.

Group "F", Mrs. J. McKnight convenor, then took charge this being the meeting for which they were responsbile, and after an opening hymn a beautiful responsive Easter service was conducted the entire gathering taking part. Mrs. A. J. Brown gave an Easter reading "Could ye not watch with Me one hour?" which was most impressive and the concluding number, "The Gift of Gold," which had special reference to the Easter thankoffering, was followed by the W.M.S. Watchword which brought the programme to a close.

The annual meeting will be held at the parsonage the first Wednesday in May, when all reports from the various groups will be received and the business of the year wound up. The election of officers will take place at this meeting, and Mrs. Tucker extended a very hearty invitation to every member to be present.

Mrs. Stinson, assisted by the members of group "F," served dainty refreshments and a pleasant social hour was enjoyed before the guests left for home. A vote of thanks to Mrs. Stinson for extending the hospitality of her home for the gathering was moved by Mrs. Brown seconded by Mrs. McKnight, and carried unanimously.

Those present included: Mrs. T. Douglas, Mrs. H. A. Earle, Mrs. B. Raper, Mrs. V. Lambert, Mrs. R. H. and Mrs. Ross Edmunds, Mrs. F. Johston, Mrs. C. Garside, Mrs. G. Raper, Mrs. C. W. Richards, Mrs. G. Spence, Mrs. Cecil Hubbeard, rs. W. Larmer, Mrs. Offa Williamson Mrs. J. McKnight, Mrs. G. Locke, Mrs. W. Mullen, Mrs. E. S. Burnham, Mrs. G. E. Burnham, Mrs. W. Elmer, Mrs. H. Lang, Mrs. F. Smith, Mrs. T. Lux on, Mrs. I. M. Nattrass, Mrs. R. unn, Mrs. J. Turner, Mrs. Tucker, Mrs. A. J. Brown, Misses M. Needham, M. Duncan, M. E. Hetherington, Estelie Hetherington, A. Hampton, E. Krieger S. Dean, M. Lunn, L. Crocker and others.

New System of Fat Reduction

Here's a new way for all fat people to laugh together at that old bugaboo—Obesity. The saying that there is nothing new under the sun does not now apply to fat people any more. Here is something new for them—a new sensation, a new pleasure, a new and graceful figure, easily found by anyone who is passing beyond the limits of slimness. Everyone has heard of the Marmola Prescription; that harmless combination of fat-defying elements perfected by one of the foremost physicians. Now from the same high authority there comes another idea—the idea of condensing these same pure, harmless, ingredients into a pleasant little tablet. Taken after eating and at bedtime they help the stomach to dispose of all the fatty foods, converting them into compact, solid flesh, muscle and energy, without dieting or exercise. Marmola Prescription Tablets regulate the entire system— do for you what bodily exertion and self denial cannot do, and the fat, once routed, is gone for good. You can prove all this at a trifling cost. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or sent postpaid by the Marmola Company, 4612 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Mich. A box—sufficient to bring results—is but one dollar.

FARMER FASHIONS TRACTOR FROM CAST-OFF AUTO

FRESNO, Cal., April 5.—(Associated Press).—From the wreck of a small obsolete automobile R. H. Bartlett, street car motorman who also owns and cultivates a farm, has built a home-made tractor at a cost of $15. Those who have witnessed the machine's performance declare it "does the work."

The tractor is mounted on a wooden frame that Bartlett built. The gear is from a worn-out pump. It runs on the wheels of an old automobile stripped to its rims. On one set of wheels he fastened outer rims from wheels that once did duty on a mower, this pair giving him the required traction.

"Many farmers could build serviceable tractors at small cost," declares Bartlett.

A GOOD MEDICINE FOR SPRINGTIME

Do Not Use Harsh Purgatives—A Tonic Is All You Need.

Not sick—but not feeling quite well. That is the way most people feel in the spring. Easily tired, appetite fickle, sometimes headaches, and a feeling of depression. Pimples or eruptions may appear on the skin, or there may be twinges of rheumatism or neuralgia. Any of these indicate that the blood is out of order—that the indoor life of winter has left its mark upon you and may easily develop into more serious trouble.

Do not dose yourself with purgatives, as many people do, in the hope that you can put your blood right. Purgatives gallop through the system and weaken instead of giving strength. Any doctor will tell you that this is true. What you need in the spring is a tonic that will enrich the blood and build up the nerves. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do this speedily, safely, and surely. Every dose of this medicine helps to enrich the blood, which clears the skin, strengthens the appetite and makes tired, depressed men, women, and children bright, active, and strong. Mr. Henry R. Robinson, Cruickshank, Sask., says: "My blood was out of order and I was nervous and run down. I got a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after taking them for a while they fully restored my health. I am now feeling fine and have no hesitation in recommending these pills to all who are feeling unwell."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail, at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SPECIAL SERVICE AT GROVE SCHOOL

Rev. Walter Cox Was the Speaker For the Occasion —Lakefield News.

LAKEFIELD, April 5.—A special service was held in the Chapel at The Grove on Thursday evening to which an invitation was extended to all those who could to attend. In spite of the muddy condition of the roads a large number attended, including a number of those who had assisted in the building operations. Rev. A. W. Mackenzie took charge of the service and Rev. Walter Cox was the preacher. R. L. Loosemore read the lesson.

The singing was hearty as everyone sang the dear familiar hymns led by Mrs. Fawcett who presided at the organ.

Rev. A. W. Mackenzie spoke a few kind words of welcome to the visitors expressing pleasure at the increased bond of sympathy between the school and the village and his feeling that the building of the chapel would serve to strengthen the tie as in every instance possible the work was done by local men.

Mr. Cox spoke on the relation of the chapel to the school. God is our Father and the Church is our Mother, who takes us into her arms in infancy and baptizes us into membership of God's family and carries us through life till death claims us and until we are deposited in mother earth the offices of the Mother Church are our. There are three things which are well for us to know and to remember—the value of self reverence, self knowledge and self control. All these things the chapel will help us to gain as one can quietly steal away in a spare minute to the quiet chapel, taking our cares, troubles and joys to God, finding comfort there.

After the blessing the vesper hymn was sung after which the National Anthem was sung.

CANADA NEEDS POLICY TO PROTECT INDUSTRY SAYS HON. H. H. STEVEN

One Time Peterboro Man Tells Need of Country From the Conservative Viewpoint — Condemns Bolshevism and Socialism.

AT PUBLIC MEETING.

In Victoria Hall last night, crowded for the occasion, there was held one of the most successful and virile political meetings that has graced Peterborough in many years, when Hon. H. H. Stevens, under the auspices of the Conservatives of the east-centre district of Ontario, was the speaker, Roland Denne, President of the Liberal-Conservative Association of West Peterborough, was chairman and there were associated with him on the platform all the leading Conservatives of the district.

STEVENS.

The meeting was outstanding in two particulars—it was featured by only two addresses, concluding at 9.30, and when the war was carried into the enemy's country it was in a gentlemanly manner, with more of constructive suggestion than of destructive criticism.

In introducing Hon. H. H. Stevens of Centre Vancouver, Mr. Denne described him as an old Peterboro boy who had made good.

"It is the old Conservative party to put things back where they belong. When they want things done right they must call on the Conservative party," he said.

Hon. H. H. Stevens said his visit yesterday to Peterborough marked his attendance at as fine a political convention as it has been his privilege to attend, and from which he had taken great inspiration.

"We believe in standing firmly and unflinchingly behind the proven principles of British Parliamentary procedure," he said, in outlining the principles of Conservatism. "There are many loose, irresponsible suggestions being made now in regard to our parliamentary procedure which a great many people treat too lightly. They are antagonistic to the established principles of the government by which we stand.

"We believe in electing members to represent us in the legislature clothed with responsibility and not to exercise mere parochial views. A man elected under the old British system represents all the people of the country. But under the so-called innovation of proportional representation it serves to create groups into representatives of industrial occupation and groups. We stand behind the good old British parliamentary procedure in responsible government.

"We believe in personal rights and judgment in business, social, religious and private affairs. That is what has made the British Empire great. We believe in private property and the sanctity of contract.

"The opposite of that is the efforts of the Russian communistic party. In Russia they deliberately attack and try to cancel the principle of private rights in property and refuse to recognize the sanctity of contract. The result is chaos, industrial rot, stagnation and the end of the regime is seen in a changing Russia. We present an unalterable front to Bolshevism and Communism."

Canada's Fiscal Policy

Turning to the fiscal policy of Canada, the Hon. speaker said under Sir John A. MacDonald a new fiscal policy was formed in which they said the natural resources were useful only insofar as they were developed by the hand of man and brought into use. A ton of ore is no more use in the ground than a ton of mud. So it is with the farm land and the forest.

Each operation by the hand of man adds to its value. The fathers of this policy said they would encourage this and so they put on the tariff. The greater the perfection of the article produced, the greater the value to the country and the higher its value to the country.

One of Canada's problems is that the production of the farm has advanced beyond the consuming possibilities of the country.

The business of government, parliament and citizen, of the country is to ask "how are we to bring about a more equitable condition between these two factions"?

The statement that a tariff is simply to give some avaracious manufacturer a monopoly is a deliberate mis-statement.

The tariff has a protective element that says to the citizen of Canada: "You are living on a high level, therefore it is wise and reasonable that the produce of your hand should be protected to give you returns adequate to maintain your position.

The tariff gives to the hand of the government a bargaining weapon. How can the representatives of Canada go to the United States and say we want access to your markets, if we have a low tariff, or no tariff at all?

Great Britain is receiving into Sheffield millions of pounds of cutlery from Germany. Why? Because in Germany, with highly developed industrial conditions and high scientific standards, how can Britain compete with the German, considering the depression in currency when Britain has no protective tariff? Sheffield cannot compete because Germany can produce under depreciated currency for one quarter the cost to Sheffield.

We need the tariff also for the purpose of preserving the home market for the Canadian industrialist. We have a consuming citizenship of eight million people. We have industries, but with no tariff the manufacturers from across the line can come in and split the market in half, while the Canadian, by this iniquitous system, is shut out by a tariff wall from competing in United States market

The greater the competition the worse for the Canadian manufacturer.

These three functions should be carried out by the tariff. A tariff that fails to meet these things is not an adequate tariff for Canada. I maintain that the present tariff in Canada is not sufficient.

Meet All Classes.

A tariff policy to be satisfactory, must meet the needs of all classes and all parts of the country, and must be of general application.

The industries of Canada—the manufacturies of Peterboro—cannot prosper unless they are protected.

Mr. Stevens said he had worked in the William Hamilton foundry thirty years ago, and he recalled shipping machinery from there to British Columbia. If we put sawmill machinery on the free list, where does the William Hamilton Company get off? he asked. It goes out of business.

What shall it profit the mining industry of British Columbia if this consuming centre of mining products is put out of business even if they get their machinery from United States free?

The tariff policy we need must be applied equitably and consistently all over the country.

The woollen industry in the country is almost ruined, because two years ago the government reduced the preferential tariff 2 per cent. That allowed the lower cost woollens of Great Britain to come to the extent of $42,000,000 last year and shut the Canadian goods out of the market. Prices to you are no cheaper.

The U. F. O. party passed a law fixing a minimum wage, which meant the woollen industry could not pay less than $10.50 a week, whereas the wages in Great Britain are lower by half. The results of these was that a year ago there were 23,000 employees, and now there are only 8,000. There is where the farmer is losing, because his consumers are moving over the line. And the loss to Canada in skilled man-power is greater than the economic loss.

The operatives in Peterboro like their homes, and do not like to be wrenched out and forced to move here or there to earn a living. What they are entitled to is a home and employment in the country of their choice. That should be an objective of the tariff policy.

We hear a lot about free food—a most ambiguous expression. What's the sense of having free food if you have no work?

On the one hand you have free food and no employment. On the other side you have protection and the highest prices that are paid anywhere.

Condemns Socialism.

Bolshevism, communism, socialism cannot function unless they engender in the proletariat of the country a bitter hatred of their fellow men.

When they come soft-tongued and say socialism is based on internationalism, ask them to turn to the records and show a socialistic regime that was not accompanied by hatred, bloodshed and starvation. They can't do it.

What is the socialistic principle? That you get the full return of your labor now. Where would be the industrial situation of the country if the profits of business had not been turned back into the business?

Socialists and communists confound the law of production with law of disturbance. The science of economics is that a man who is frugal will make provision in bright days for the days of depression.

It human kind had always an assumed equitable prosperity, I fail to know where he would sink to. The period of abnormal prosperity of 1920 was, I believe, a greater curse than the war itself. What we want is a reasonable standard of living.

Farm Problem.

Turning to the farm problem, the speaker said any who live near prosperous cities recognize the value of prosperity in the city, as it redounds on the farmer.

Mr. Stevens said he remembered meat being sold at 3c a pound on Peterboro market. There has been a revolution in the relation of industry to agriculture since then.

The one cure for the unrest in Canada is to build up the industrial consuming market in the country.

If, by a proper fiscal policy, we can build up the industrial life of Canada, we could use wheat which would relieve the world market of the excess which depressed the market, and the immediate reflex would be an increased price to the farmer. Not only for you in Ontario, where you feel the results immediately of a factory closing down, but also on the western farm lands the need of a fiscal policy which will build up the industrial consuming citizenship of the country is felt.

Last year we bought from the United States two dollars worth for every one they bought from us, and Great Britain bought from us three dollars worth for every dollar's worth we bought from Great Britain.

I contend that we should put such a duty on our general tariff that will correct this adverse trade balance with United States.

We talk about tariff, but our friends to the south laugh at our tariff policy.

The other day they ran their wheat tariff up to 42 cents a bushel.

They bring our wheat through Buffalo and there they steal it. They mix soft American wheat with Canadian wheat and ship it out as Canadian wheat.

Tool of United States.

With an adverse balance against us, it simply makes us a tool of New York. Great Britain takes up New York bills against us, and we haven't the control of our own finances even.

From the standpoint of fiscal independence it behooves us to build up a fiscal policy that will give Canada liberty to build up her industrial development as she has a right to do.

At the conclusion of the address, three cheers for by Mr. Denne, were heartily given in honor of the speaker.

Mrs. Fallis Throws Challenge.

Mrs. W. H. Fallis spoke briefly on the outlook from the standpoint of the farmers. "I resent very much the attitude the progressives have been taking towards the conservative party," she said. "They have said that the conservative party has never done anything for the western farmer. I challenge the liberal party to show half as fine a record, and the half has not been told."

In concluding, she lauded the Ferguson government for its effort to open up the north country. "The people of Canada will never prosper until they cease to think in terms of east and west, city and country, and think in terms of Canada."

YOUR GARDEN

GARDEN FLOWERS.

Your garden should not be without flowers after sufficient allowance for food has been made.

You can plant them either in formal patterns in the yard or as a decorative bordering in the vegetable plot.

Full-foliage plants which grow to considerable height serve as attractive screens for fences, objectionable views and other obtrusive objects. They may also be arranged against buildings.

Castor-beans, sorghums and sunflowers are included for this purpose.

For the rented dwelling, annual plants may be cheaply grown in substitution for expensive shrubbery.

However, it must be borne in mind, that the first killing frost will obliterate whatever landscape effect they produce. Hence they should be sown as early as possible in order to gain the longest lasting bloom.

Soil for annuals should be well supplied with every possibe plant food. It should be well drained and of such character to permit retention of reasonaby large quantities of moisture.

Possibly the best average soil for most of these plants can be prepared from a light, rich loam well mixed with rotted manure.

The best practice is to make the bed of suitable depth and then fill it with the enriched earth.

Use of rotted stable manure, hen manure, prepared sheep and cow manure (obtainable from florists or any agricultural supply house), cottonseed meal or bone meal, of relative value in the order named, is almost essential to successful growing of flowers in your garden.

Before any of these materials are employed, however, the ground should be reasonably good as to texture to start with, and the fertilizer should be thoroughly worked into the soil.

Drainage is another important factor to consider. Flowers need plenty of water, but not too much.

To prevent gathering of excess moisture dig your flower bed to a depth of three feet and on the bottom place a layer of crushed stone covered by inverted sods. Over this foundation place your soil.

The drainage layer thus prepared should be equipped with some sort of suitable outlet. A stone drain may be used for the purpose. But it is better to have the outlet run to a sewer or adjoining ditch.

Seeds for flowers may be sown broadcast or in rows. But the inexperienced gardener had best plant them in rows.

This applies especially for slow germinating seeds liable to be mistaken for weeds and pulled up.

Flower seeds grow best in soil having slight, rather than excessive moisture. The soil should be mellow and protected from drying winds.

The beginner will probably obtain best results by starting his flowers in window boxes, hotbbeds or coldframes.

Construction of these devices has been explained in a foregoing chapter.

Their use when properly employed will hasten the period of bloom by almost two weeks.

HELP ASKED IN FIGHT ON FIRES.

Over $17,000,000 Worth of Timber Is Destroyed Annually By Forest Fires

MADISON, Wis., April 5.—(United Press).—A program for intensive research as to means of controlling forest fires has been announced by a committee of Federal administrative and research foresters, meeting in connection with the Forest Products' Labboratory here.

The committee report siresses paramount importance of co-operation of weather forecasters in determining "fire weather conditions," and aiding in control of fires by designating areas to which the fire is most likely to spread.

Methods have been devised, according to the committee, of accurately designating areas where greatest care must be taken to prevent fires. The report also recommends study of lightning storms, held responsible for a large majority of fires.

Over $17,000,000 worth of timber is destroyed by fires annually, it is estimated.

Principal points in the foresters' program follow:

1. A special effort should be made to put to practical use all available statistics on fires, placing emphasis on nature, extent and appraisal of fire damages.

2. Weather bureaus in Washington, D. C.; Chicago, Denver and San Francisco will be requested to furnish a special weather report to forest officials in the regions covered by each bureau. This data will be studied to determine areas in which fires are likely to occur.

3. An appropriation will be requested for assigning meteorologists to the forest service and weather bureau to assist in fire hazard studies. It is recommended that observation of lightning storms be undertaken in Western districts.

4. Investigations are recommended to determine inflamability of forest growths, with study of actual fires with reference to such points, as rate of spread, general behavior and control.

5. Supervision of cutting in timber areas with relation to fire hazards.

New Safe Way To Remove Teeth Stains

New Discovery Bleaches Dark Teeth Instantly!

A new safe treatment has been discovered which dissolves teeth stains instantly, giving dull, dingy teeth a charming new whiteness and lustre. This new treatment is called the Bleachodent Combination. It consists of a safe mild liquid and a new kind of paste. The liquid instantly curdles or softens the stains, while the paste removes them and if used daily prevents the formation of future stains. You just brush your teeth with a few drops of the liquid, then use the paste, and before your very eyes your teeth acquire a clear, flashing whiteness that even ten times the scouring by old-fashioned methods could not give them.

It is vitally important that only a safe, mild preparation like Bleachodent Combination be used on children's teeth, which are especially subject to stains and decay. Bleachodent Combination is safe and harmless, for its mild ingredients are especially combined to act only on surface stains. It does not affect the enamel in any way. Gritty and abrasive dentrifices should never be used. If you want sparkling white, pearly teeth get Bleachodent Combination today. Costs only a few cents. THRILLING RACE WITH THE FLAMES

Fire Destroyed Ship But Passengers and Crew Were Saved.

PORT SUDAN, April 5.—(Canadian Press).—Thrilling narrative of fate which on Wednesday overtook the pilgrim ship "Frangestan" on its way from Bombay to Jeddah with 1200 of the faithful aboard, is given by Sir Derrick Watson who was a passenger.

When flames were spreading an aged Pilgrim offered his small vessel of holywater confident it would quell the fire. Meanwhile Frangestans wireless staff had got into communication with 47 ships when Steamer Clan MacIver arrived in answer to dall for help European passengers were transferred first from burning ship and then pilgrims and baggage. Night fell before transfer was completed. Smoke was then rising in dense clouds. An Italian ship standing by turned her searchlights on the Frangestan and disclosed a weird spectacle smoking ship was surrounded by swarms of hungry sharks led by pilot fish.

The crew of Frangestan remained aboard and the wireless operator despite oppressive heat and smoke stuck to his cabin till just before Captain ordered the crew to abandon the ship. Flames spread forward devour in the saloon first then the lounge under bridge on which captain was still at his post. Ship began to list heavily and settle by the head. The heat was so intense that steel plates fell off like scales leaving the ships skeleton silhouetted against a roaring furnace.

Lights of her sister ship the Tangestan were sighted at 10 in the evening and by that time it was impossible for captain of Fragestan to remain longer on the doomed vessel, as he departed, he paused on the gangway to light a cigarette and simultaneously the gangway caught fire. Proceedings throughout were most orderly and passengers saved all their effects and all were little the worse for their experience.

COLLEGIATE PLAY WAS SUCCESS

(By JEANNETTE)

An audience that reached beyond the five hundred mark filled the Collegiate Institute Hall last evening for the first performance of "The Charm School," a sparkling comedy in three acts produced by the Literary Society of the P. C. I. The story of the play is well suited to the scope of the youthful actors taking part in it, and the cast of sixteen young people provided an exceedingly good entertainment for a pleased and appreciative audience.

The play itself has a plot that moves swiftly. Dramatized by Robert Milton from a story written by Alice Duer Miller, it relates the adventures of a good-looking young man, who has always had a passion for teaching, but has been condemned to sell automobiles instead. He inherits a girls' boarding school from an aunt, and tries the experiment of running it according to his own firmly-held ideas.

The entire performance was likeable in the extreme. The cast gave evidence of good drilling in their parts. They entered into the meaning of the plot beautifully, and the choice of roles in every instance appeared to fit their possessors to perfection. There were no tiresome waits, the performance ended at a reasonable hour, and the whole production moved with snap and zest, making it one of the most attractive offerings in the way of dramatic amateur performances of the season. The settings were splendidly worked out, the interest was sustained from beginning to end, and the young people taking part manifested an enthusiasm and a degree of genuine histrionic talent that afforded a very pleasant entertainment for their parents and friends.

As the production will be repeated this evening, a detailed description of the story would be unfair. However, the situations that arise when Austin Bevans takes charge of a girls' boarding school are funny in the extreme. This young man, whose part was taken by Harry Ebbs, was much in the foreground. The gravity and determination with which his portrayer invested the character were extremely effective. Austin, conversing with his boy chums in the first act, when the boys' room on the top floor of an old-fashioned New York house is shown, declares that the world is run by old people, who are in a conspiracy to teach young people the wrong things as long as possible, so that they may continue to run things to suit themselves. Austin, who yearns to be a teacher, is condemned to a life spent in selling motor cars; David, who wanted to be a farmer, is studying law, and George, with an ambition for fame as a violinist, is an expert accountant. Austin's revolutionary ideas of education with regard to girls declares that they should be taught charm rather than arithmetic. He thinks the two most important things in the world are knowledge of how to earn a living and how to fall in love, and says that young men should be taught the psychology of women, rather than astronomy.

When Austin inherits the Fairview School, he proceeds to put his ideas and ideals into practice, and sensational results develop immediately. He takes along his quartette of chums, in David Mackenzie (Bruce Copping), George Boyd (Ross Thompson), and the hilarious twins, Jim and Tim Simpkins (Cecil and Bertram Cragg), "who toil not and have never seriously considered spinning." Austin is under guarantee to Homer Johns (Ross Lord), who holds a mortgage on the school, to resign immediately should any of the impressionable young ladies take a fancy to him. Austin, declaring that he is not an attractive person to the fair sex, departs on his mission of revolutionizing standard educational practice.

Act Two has two scenes, staged at noon in the main hall of the school, where Austin makes a dramatic appearance, and in the same place, a fortnight later. There are some excellent characterizations in the feminine roles portrayed here. Miss Eleanor Hays, second in command in the school, is a very good-looking lady with a strong dislike for men. Jean Gilman has this role, and does it exceptionally well, her haughty attitude toward the entire male sex contributing much to the fun of the piece. The school secretary, of a yielding and amiable disposition, is Miss Theodosia Curtis, a splendid foil for her superior officer, and a part that gets excellent treatment from Jean Bryce.

The heroine of the play, who mixes things up for the youthful principal and goes her charming, heedless way, intent on achieving the goal she has aimed at, is Edith Killaly, whose delineation of the part of Elise Benedotti, president of the senior class, is extremely attractive. One of the most enterprising members of the senior class, whose accent and whimsical manner bring her much attention, is Vera Wagar, playing Sally Boyd, the charmer of the impressionable twins, and sister of George Boyd, enamored of Elise.

A bevy of young girls who add much life and color to the play include Muriel Doughty (Ruth Abramson), Ethel Spelvin (Emma Lou Chenhall), Alix Mercier, a French maiden (Dorothy Moir), Lillian Stafford (Gladys Green), Madge Kent (Thelma Wiley), and Dotsie, a junior who is always in the way (Alida Stinson).

The third act shows the climax to Austin Bevans' educational schemes, and provides much amusement for its audience. In the meantime, the girls have discarded their regulation middies and dark skirts, and appear in resplendent costumes. Miss Curtis also sheds her stiff attire, but the unbending Miss Hays refuses to relent, until matters arrange themselves to her liking.

"The Charm School" will be repeated this evening, and is well worth a visit from anyone interested in youth and its light-hearted fun.

The committee in charge of arrangements includes Miss Muriel I. W. Wallace, B.A.; Miss Pearl B. Faint, M.A.; Mr. L. J. Pettit, B.A.; Mr. C. S. Browne, M.A., and Mr. F. J. A. Morris, M.A. (chairman).

A pleasant interlude is provided during intermissions by the school orchestra, which plays popular music in bright, tuneful fashion, led by Miss Helen Lamb at the piano.

Oxford Crew Heavier But Were Defeated by Four and Half Lengths,

PUTNEY, England, April 5. — Cambridge won the annual boat race from Oxford in Thames to-day. The Oxford crew was heavier and more experienced, but the light blues crossed the mark by four and a half lengths. It was the seventy-sixth revival of the historic race from Putney to Mortlake and the result was a complete surprise.

The smashing victory of the Cambridge crew, made up largely of unseasoned oarsmen, over the much touted Oxonian veterans, stroked by W. F. Mellen, completely unset the calculations of experts. It was a David and Goliath struggle and before the race the advantage seemed to rest with the much heavier crew of the dark blues, six of whom had rowed for Oxford before, while the light blues had only one veteran in the boat. The easy victory of Cambridge youngsters was won in fast time, the mark they made being only twelve seconds slower than the record of 18 minutes, 29 seconds, held by Oxford.

There was scarcely a member of the Cambridge eight who showed any signs of overstrain at the finish, while in the Oxford shell boat, numbers 2, 3, 4 and 6 and stroke Mellen appeared to be distressed.

LOCAL ENGINEERS TO HOLD MEETING

Speaker Will Give a Talk on the Motion Picture Industry.

A meeting of the local branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada, to be held at the Chamber of Commerce, on Thursday evening, April 10th, will be addressed by Mr. Bernard E. Norish, General Manager of the Associated Screen News of Canada, on "The Making of Moving Pictures." The company of which Mr. Norrish has been the guiding spirit since its organization in 1921, has two major functions, distinct from each other and of equal importance, the production of motion pictures in certain fields for the theatre screens and entertainment purposes, and the making of films of industry, putting the screen into the service of Canadian enterprise. The speaker should, therefore be quite conversant with his subject, and be fitted to present it in a manner interesting to his hearers. He is a graduate of Queen's University, an associate member of the the Engineering Institute and a member of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. It is hoped that a large number of members, friends of members, and any other persons interested, will take advantage of this opportunity to hear something of the motion picture industry. Mr. Norish is bringing an operator with him, and some motion pictures will be shown during the evening.

BRITISH NAVY USES BRONZE PROPELLERS

Of importance to motor boat builders is the announcement that the British Navy use a particularly high-grade manganese bronze from which propellers are made for their battleships and motor boats.

J. Stone & Co. Limited, of Deptford, the largest and oldest concern of its kind in England, supply these propellers, and it is believed arrangements are completed to export this particular bronze to the Wm. Kennedy & Sons Limited, Owen Sound, Ontario, who are Canada's oldest and largest propeller makers. They will supply the Canadian trade with the same high-quality propeller as is obtainable in England.

Canadian motor boat builders are hoping for an early completion of so important a feature in connection with the manufacture of boats.

SPECIAL SERVICES GEORGE STREET

As is announced in another part of the Examiner, the New Life Mission in George Street Church will begin to-morrow. Rev. Newton Jones arrived in the city last night, and to-night meets the board of the church in a preparatory gathering. To-morrow he will inaugurate his work here by preaching at both services in the church and addressing the Sunday School.

Mr. Jones has had wide experience as a teacher and preacher. In addition to many years of preaching in Great Britain, he has conducted extensive missions in many other parts of the world. In South America, Australia, New Zealand and twice in the United States and Canada, he has been welcomed as an interpreter of Scripture and preacher of the Gospel.

Perhaps his greatest success has been achieved as a preacher to young people. His messages are designed to help particularly those who are facing the problems and difficulties of life's earlier years, and he has everywhere succeeded in interesting and gripping young men and women. Thoroughly understanding their problems as he does, Mr. Jones is certain to have a special interest for the young people of Peterboro.

His subject at the morning service to-morrow will be "The Royal Commission," and in the evening, "Wake Up, Get Up, Light Up." The choir will have inspiring anthems, and there will be solos by Dorothy Allan Park at both services. On Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock he will give a Bible lecture, illustrated by blackboard, on "Twofold Life," a study of John's Gospel, and in the evening the subject of his address will be 'A Consecrated Personality.' All will be welcome at these services.

APPROVED BYLAW C.G.E. EXTENSION

Executive Council of the Chamber of Commerce Had a Meeting.

Following concise remarks by Mayor L. J. Turner on the situation relative to the by-law to be submitted to the electorate on April 23, the following resolution was unanimously adopted by the Executive Council of the Chamber of Commerce at the meeting last evening:

"Whereas, a by-law will be submitted to the electorate of the City of Peterboro on April 23rd, to grant an extension to the Canadian General Electric Co. of this city, of a fixed assessment of $150.000, exempting all other assessment from taxation, with the exception of school and local improvement taxes from January 1st, 1931, to January 1st, 1935.

"And whereas, this by-law is being submitted with the consideration that the above named company will extend its present manufacturing facilities to the extent of approximately $400,000, including a new building of 50,000 square feet floor space, before July, 1925,

"Therefore resolved, that we, the Executive Council of the Chamber of Commerce, desire to be placed on record as heartily supporting the above-mentioned by-law, and strongly recommend the approval of this by-law by the electorate in a decisive manner on April 23rd.

"And further resolved, that in substantiation of this expression of support, we would suggest that together with all other interested organizations, the Chamber of Commerce take an active part in securing an overwhelming majority of votes in favor of the by-law."

Armour's Hill.

At the request of the Patriotic League of Ashburnham, it was decided that the Chamber take the responsibility of establishing the necessary organization to plant 5,000 striplings on Armour's Hill in the near future.

This will require the assistance of a number of other organizations in the city, and the time of two hundred men for about one hour each for two nights to plant 250 striplings each.

The striplings are being supplied by the Provincial Government free of charge, and the planting will be under the supervision of Mr. H. J. Moore, forester, Department of Public Highways.

League of Nations.

At the request of Lieut.-Colonel C. H. Ackerman, the Chamber will be sponsor of a public meeting to be held in the Capitol Theatre on Wednesday, April 9th, which will be held in the interests of the League of Nations Society; the speaker for the evening will be Sir George Foster.

A committee comprised of the following members will be responsible for the arrangements: F. D. Kerr, K.C.; J. H. Vanstone, R. Denne and C. H. Ackerman. It is expected that Mayor J. J. Turner will act as chairman of the meeting.

Cobourg-Rochester Ferry.

Pursuant to further communications received relative to establishing a convenient automobile ferry service from Cobourg to Rochester, the Chamber will endeavor to enlist the active co-operation of the New York State Automobile Association.

New Member.

Mr. Wm. Hartley, manager of the Colonial Weaving Co., was admitted to the membership of the Chamber.

The following members of the Executive Council were present: President, J. F. Fraser; Vice-President, G. A. Gillespie; Treasurer, W. R. Morris; Thos. Barrie, R. A. Brown, C. G. Graham, J. Hamilton, F. C. Hungerford, W. A. Richardson, Major J. J. Turner and D. R. Wren.

General Meeting.

The next general meeting of the Chamber will be held on Tuesday, April 15th.

Use of Chamber's Room.

For the past five years the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce have been open for meetings to all public organizations free of charge, and the cost of maintenance, repairs, light and cleaning has been considerable. It was believed that organizations other than those of purely charitable character using the rooms would be desirous of assisting the Chamber to a small extent in this cost, and it was decided that in future a nominal charge would be made.

During the year sixty-eight different organizations used the Chamber rooms during 1923, aggregating over three hundred and fifty meetings. Voluntary contributions to the cost of the maintenance of the Chamber room have been made heretofore by the Junior Football Association, Rotary-Annes, Exhibition Board, the Engineering Institute, and the Bell Telephone Company, which was appreciated greatly.

Any arrangements for the use of the rooms should be made in advance with the secretary.

BURNABY WANTS THE FARMERS SPEAK OUT

TORONTO, April 5. Canadian Press. — R. W. E. Burnaby, a former president of the U.F.O., and former president of the Canadian Council of Agriculture, discussing recent disclosures before the Public Accounts Committee, calls on the United Farmers of Ontario to condemn rottenness and wrong doing, "Let the bricks fall where they may."

In a letter he says in part:

"In view of recent charges and insinuations made on the floor of the House at Queen's Park, as well as editorials and other articles in public press, I feel that organized agriculture should speak in no uncertain voice and let the public know their stand.

"The organized farmers were in a large measure responsible for the late government. Surely then our duty is plain. We must either be prepared to defend these charges and insinuations or repudiate them. Are farm men and women, farm boys and girls in our young peoples' organizations, satisfied to allow this bundle of disgrace (I think the word none to strong, to rest on organized agriculture?"

CANADIANS PAYING MORE THAN CHINESE

Grain Can Be Shipped to China and Japan Cheaper Than to British Columbia

VICTORIA, B.C., April 5.—(Canadian Press).—Figures compiled by Premier Oliver on his fight for lower freight rates show that it costs $3.80 a ton less to ship grain from the prairies to China and Japan, than to this coast for use here.

"In other words," the Premier said yesterday, when he had these figures before him, "the Chinese and Japanese can get our grain cheaper than can the people living in British Columbia under the present grossly unjust rates. This fact is the cause of widespread complaint among the farmers of British Columbia who have to pay an excessive price for feed for their stock."

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Prudence Page—a pretty country girl, is slowly recovering from her infatuation with

Bert Traymore—a fascinating, unscrupulous philanderer. Prudence is mystified to discover him digging at the foot of an elm tree in a secluded spot, where he has evidently concealed something, but she speaks of the incident to no one.

Janet Mercer—Prudence's friend, an older woman, plain but clever, is relieved to find the girl becoming indifferent to Traymore, whom she dislikes. Janet is in love with Will Ogilvie, whom she intends to marry some day. In the meantime she is masseuse to the delicate child of Mrs. Vansittart—a pleasure loving, woman-of-the world, owner of Winston Towers.

Virginia Dale—her ward, is a calculating beauty, who counts Traymore among her many swains. She is genuinely interested in

Peter Armstrong—a brilliant young inventor, clever and ambitious, who has evinced considerable liking for Prudence. Virginia, aware that Prudence is a dangerous rival, plans to do the girl harm in some way.

Janet warns Prudence of Virginia's determination to "win" Peter.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

An Unpleasant Prospect.

"But I'm sure that Mr. Armstrong isn't attracted to Virginia," cried Prudence in a much more emphatic tone than the occasion warranted. Had she realized the hot eagerness of that phrase it would have surprised herself as much as it surprised her listener.

"I never said he was." A sudden idea turned in Janet's brain. How splendid it would be for Prudence—who was young, and ignorant, and intensely feminine, and needed a strong shoulder to lean upon—how splendid and suitable she and Peter Armstrong fell in love! "I only said that the Dale girl was wild about Peter. If he's a wise man, he'll give her a wide berth."

Prudence's pretty face had clouded. That hint of shadow gave Janey hope.

Young girls were kittle-cattle, and contrary. Prudence hitherto had pretended absolute indifference to Peter. But now—if she was indifferent to him—why did Virginia's name in conjunction with the young inventor's bring that worried line to her smooth forehead?

"She's very, very lovely," was, however, all that Prudence answered.

"Lovely? Huh! Handsome is as handsome does! Besides you ought to see her in the early morning. As yellow as a duck's foot, and the lines showing, before she's got the cold cream and the powder in to hide 'em, I know." Janet nodded her head sagely. "Not that she isn't young enough, though old in knowledge. Old as Egypt. It's the life she's led has told on her. Dancing till all hours of the morning. Playing cards, with her eyes as keen as a rapier, and as hard and merciless to an opponent. Mouth set like a steel trap. You'd think her very life depended on it, as I do believe it does, for it's my belief she makes her living at bridge and poker and these gambling games."

Prudence shivered. The insecurity of such a mode of existence frightened her, even in the hearing.

"Luck's been against her lately, too," continued Janet, warming to her theme. "I heard her trying to borrow fifty pounds from Mrs. Vansittart the other day. Mrs. Vansittart has lent her money before, and made an excuse about Lucia's last operation being so expensive, and a lot of other bills she had to meet. And Miss Virginia—who sometimes does know when she's defeated, and when not to press a point until a more fortuitous time—passed it off with a giggle and the proverb that if one was unlucky at cards one 'ud have lots of luck in love. But Mrs. Vansittart up and told her, if that was so, she'd better bring matters to a crisis, and get a husband capable of paying her debts and stopping her gambling and look after her. Miss Jinny was as mad as a wet hen in a thunderstorm!"

Prudence had to laugh at that quaint simile.

The two girls left the tea-shop, and, walking along the main street of the little country town, saw Mrs. Vansittart's imposing car standing outside the post office.

"A special dinner-party at the Towers to-night," vouchsafed Janet, with a slight curl of the lips. "How these folks do live for pleasure! All the out-of-season dainties, no matter what the cost! And in spite of all the noise and fuss, I don't believe there's much enjoyment in these parties."

Prudence was too young and fresh to take that view.

"It must be rather nice to have so much money that you can get anything you fancy," she hazarded rather timidly, for she was afraid of Janet's cutting tongue.

But before the latter could comment upon the observation, Mrs. Vansittart herself came out of the post office looking rather worried.

She walked directly towards her car, and then, sighting the two young women, paused a moment, her brow lightening.

"Miss Mercer! funny, I never thought of you! Could you help me out of a difficulty?"

"Depends what it is," said Janet gruffly. Mrs. Vansittart's wealth and power in the neighbourhood couldn't overawe her.

"A guest has suddenly failed me for to-night, and it means we'll have to sit down thirteen to dinner. Lord Cumbermere is coming, and he's awfully superstitious on that question. He'd rather eat in the servants' hall than chance such a number—and that's saying something, for the old fellow loves his food better than home or wife or family!"

Janet looked rather stolidly at her employer.

"Lucia has her massage at six-thirty, and she isn't sleeping well. I won't be through with her till nearly eight o'clock."

"Oh, leave the child this once! She'll be all right," said the impatient mother, her thoughts centered on the success or failure of the important dinner.

The trained nurse shook her head. Conscience wouldn't allow me." I wouldn't be able to swallow a morsel. Besides, I've another case at half-past eight. And I'm no social star, anyhow. I'd only put my foot in it."

The hostess already knew that well. In despair she turned to Prudence.

"Couldn't you help me out? I know you're rather young, but that's no fault nowadays."

Prudence shrank back.

"I haven't got a frock."

"Well, I can lend you the very thing. Virginia Dale ordered it from town, and hated it when she tried it on. It was too tight for her and didn't suit her. So I bought it from her to send to one of my nieces for her coming-out party, a month from now. She's just your figure, dear, and it would fit you perfectly." No matter if you spoiled it, I could get another." This with the easy speech on money matters that was peculiar to Mrs. Vansittart and her kind.

Prudence hesitated. Already in

The postman brought us these cooking helps:

THIS ADVERTISEMENT is different. We didn't write it. It was written by real home cooks and other friends of Crisco. It consists simply of the gist of friendly letters that the postman has brought us and remarks that housekeepers have made in the course of conversations about home cooking in general and Crisco cooking in particular. Once you try Crisco we believe that you, too, may wish to write us a letter.

Prize Winning Cakes

A clubwoman writes: "You know, every community has its prize cake bakers and Mrs. Anderson is one of ours." (Mrs. Anderson of course uses Crisco.) Another friend writes, "My white loaf cake made with Crisco won a blue ribbon at the Food Exposition." And still another recent letter was from a woman whose Crisco cake won a $75 gas stove in a cooking contest.

Yes, Crisco makes perfectly delicious cakes that stay fresh longer and it makes equally delicious pie crusts, biscuits, muffins and fried foods.

Healthful, say this lawyer and this doctor

A lawyer sends a two page letter commenting on Crisco's wholesome digestibility. The head cook in a sanitarium says, "The doctor insists on Crisco because of its ready digestibility." Another doctor, speaking of the harmful effects of disagreeable cooking odors, says in part: "Crisco at proper frying heat does not smoke and I am therefore obliged to prescribe its use."

"Again and Again," says Leon

Leon, the expensive West Indian cook in an exclusive home, tells us: "Crisco makes a delicious and very flaky pie crust—people tell me my pies are wonderful. Crisco is a quick frier too and after frying with it I can strain it and use it all over again." (Yes, Leon is right. You can fry fish, then onions and then potatoes in Crisco and the potatoes will not even hint of the fish or onions.)

Natural food flavors, she reports

One gentle old lady of long cooking experience comments especially on the way Crisco lets the real flavors of foods come out in cooking. "To bring out the natural flavors," she says, "is one secret of fine cooking." Crisco foods have these natural flavors for Crisco itself is very delicate in flavor and never intrudes itself into the flavors of the ingredients.

"Stays sweet for years"

A Western woman remarks with surprise on Crisco's ability to keep fresh, sweet and wholesome without ice box help. She tells us that on moving to the West from the East she stored a can of Crisco with her household goods. When she finally did use the Crisco it was three years old, yet as sweet and fresh as ever. (Probably quite an unusual happening. But Crisco does stay sweet and fresh for a remarkably long time — without refrigeration.)

Of course Crisco foods will not stay fresh for years, but one housekeeper did have this experience. She made some Crisco cookies in May, put part of them in the pantry and forgot all about them until December. Her letter says, "We ate them and found them perfectly sweet and good."

Alone, it serves every purpose

Great numbers of housekeepers have, of course, commented on Crisco's versatility, for Crisco alone serves every shortening and frying purpose. One typical statement was this: "I prefer Crisco because it is the one shortening I know of that I can use for any kind of cooking—for such simple things as frying eggs and for the most elaborate cakes or pies."

HALLINAN AND THORNE HIGHLY RECOMMENDED AS NEW C.O.B.L. UMPIRES

Both Arbiters Have Good Records In Toronto Baseball—Worked in Ontario Championships Last Fall — Peterboro Face Them For Total of 21 Games.

THE NEW STAFF.

According to Norman Albert and Bert N. Bryden, who write amateur baseball dope for the Toronto Sunday papers, the Central Ontario Amateur Baseball eLague made a "homer" when it selected Umpires Hallinan and Thorne of Toronto to "call 'em" during the 1924 season. The former has the following 'boost' for the two umpires:

"Frank Hallinan has had several previous chances to graduate to higher ball and has to his credit sixteen continuous seasons in Toronto in practically every senior league. His records runs to 18 season, having umpired two years in Michigan. His move in joining the staff of the Central Ontario League is considered a step up and a boost for Toronto umpires. One stipulation is that he works behind the plate in all games. Hallinan has been with the Spalding Senior League for two years and his level headed handling of good teams in that circuit has been noted.

"Walter Thorne, umpire at Willowvale Park last summer, while also on the list of the Central Ontario League, will not likely umpire in all schedule dates, but it is known that the teams and officials were impressed by the work of Hallinan and Thorne in the Ontario championships last fall and no doubt the two Toronto men will pair off regularly. Most of their games in the section which includes Belleville, Peterboro, Oshawa and Kingston.

Scribe Bryden shoots the following:

"Frank Hallinan, whose voice has echoed on the city parks for the past sixteen years, will not be heard this year. Hallinan closed a deal Wednesday of last week to umpire in the Central Ontario League. In his sixteen years Hallinan has worked in many leagues and when the Senior League was formed in 1922 he was appointed official arbitrator. Spalding League were counting on Hallinan for this season. His departure will be a hard blow to the Leagues and he was offered many contracts, but had to turn them all down, owing to business reasons."

Good Umpiring Assured

With Hallinan and Thorne of Toronto; Geo. Sullivan, of Kingston; Ken Collings, of Belleville; Cliff Boundy, of Cobourg; Si Dell, of Oshawa; Chuck Allan, of Port Hope; and Stan Nurse, of Belleville, the latter two being new comers to the league official list, the fans of the inter-city senior circuit should be guaranteed good work both at the plate and on the paths.

Peterboro bumps into umpire Hallinan 14 times, Thorne 7, Boundy 12, Allan 5, Sullivan 2, Collings 5, and Nurse 3. Belleville works with Hallinan 17 games, Thorne 5, Sullivan 5, Boundy 12, Dell 3, and Allan 6. Kingston, Hallinan 6, Thorne 5, Boundy 12, Allan 6, Sullivan 1, Collings 9, Dell 3, Nurse 6. Oshawa, Hallinan 13, Thorne 11, Sullivan 4, Collings 6, Boundy 4, Allan 7, Nurse 3.

Chambers and Mills who wore Bowmanville uniforms in the Central Ontario Baseball League last year and migrated to Toronto made good with the Goodyear Hockey team in the Industrial league during the winter months and will likely be fitted into baseball outfits when the sun hits both sides of the fence.

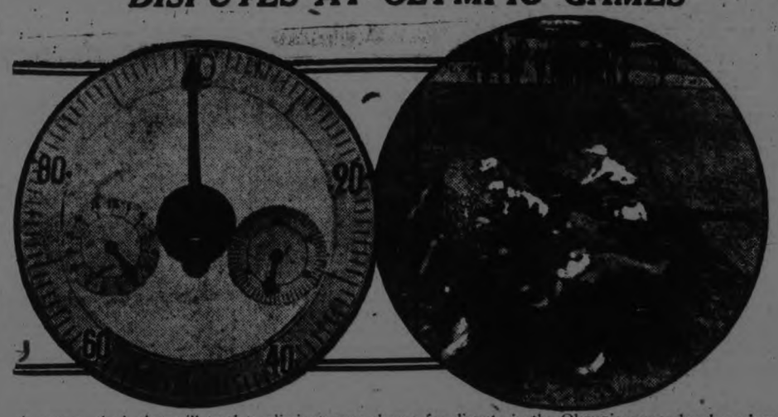
CAMERA CLOCK WILL ELIMINATE ALL DISPUTES AT OLYMPIC GAMES



A camera clock that will tend to eliminate any chance for dispute in the Olympic games has been invented by Maurice Branger. It registers the time to a hundredth part of a second and at the same instant takes a photograph of the finish to elim-inate any question as to the winner. A thin string stretched across the finish line breaks when touched, registers the time and snaps the photo. The picture shows the clock, a close finish in a horse race and tell how accurate the timing apparatusworks the camera to catch the finish.

KEENE CURLERS DOWN LAKEFIELD

In a Friendly Exhibition Game Played in Lakefield on Tuesday Afternoon.

LAKEFIELD, April 5. — On Thursday afternoon a rink of curlers from Keene visited the village and played a friendly game with a local rink resulting in the score of 11-12 in favor of the visitors. This friendly visit was much appreciated as the Keene curlers are popular in the village as genuine good sports. The game was very close and consequently had plenty of thrills. In fact so strenuous was the play that the literary member of the local rink was compelled to retire for a rest and J. R. Hill took his place.

The personnel of the rinks were:

Lakefield	Keene
R. H. Jory	Doris
H. G. Fitzgerald	Nelson
J. W. Ridpath	Mather
D. H. Charlton	Moore
Skip 11	Skip 12

In spite of the fact that the calendar says spring the curlers are still able to enjoy their sport and say that the ice is not bad at all. On Wednesday afternoon the ladies tried but it was too heavy and they could not play.

Games played on Monday and Tuesday nights resulted as follows:

D. H. Charlton 10—Geo. Millar 12. Two extra ends were played to decided the game.

H. G. Fitzgerald 9—F. Morin 7.

H. G. Armstrong 17—N. A. Morin 4.

B. Q. Dench 9—D. H. Charlton 6.

J. E. Galvin 7—H. G. Fitzgerald 4.

H. G. Armstrong 7—E. A. Tanner 9.

If all is well the curlers hope to play several games in the mornings before the season is called over.

Irish Racehorses Served as Tidbits in French Capital

PARIS, April 5.—"Irish Racehorse Stew" was the characterization French judges applied to a story, unfolded in the Paris courts yesterday of how two race horses bred and owned by David Brindley of Dublin and shipped to Pierre Wertheimer in Paris, with the intention that they become stable mates of the great Epinard, instead of flashing past the winning post to the plaudits of the multitude by a strange irony of destination, ended their careers in the frying pans of kitchens in the Paris slums.

Brindley sued Wertheimer for 20,000 francs as payment for the two Irish jumpers, Villora and Mediator, which were shipped to Epinard's owner in 1922, after, Brindley alleged, Wertheimer had accepted his terms and conditions. Wertheimer contended that he never bought the horses, but accepted them merely on trial, and turned them over to Eugene Leigh, the United States' trainer, with orders that they be fed and taken care of until the Irishman disposed of them.

Leigh later applied to Wertheimer for the amount of the horses 'board. Wertheimer referred him to Brindley, who, in turn told him to collect from Wertheimer. Leigh declared that, buffeted between Wertheimer and Brindley for several months, he finally lost patience and sold the horses for 1,400 francs to a Paris butcher shop licensed to sell horsemeat to its customers.

Judgment in the case will be given next week.

ODDS ON OXFORD IN THAMES RACE

Cambridge Partizans Are Not Without Hope — Bitterly Cold Weather.

LONDON, April 5.—Odds of as high as 2 to 1 have been offered on the Oxford eight to defeat Cambridge in the annual up the Thames to-day. Cambridge partisans, however, are not without hope that their crew may confound the towpath critics by outrowing the heavier and more experienced eight stroked by W. P. Mellen.

Even the weather seems more favorable to Oxford's heavier crew, but the partisans of the lighter Cambridge shell are hopeful that the wintry blasts, which have been whipping up the river all week, may moderate to-day. Unless the bitter cold winds abate they are likely to affect, not only the oarsmen, but the size of the crowd. The English do not seem bothered by the dampness, to which they are accustomed, but few of them relish standing tor hours in the bitter Arctic breezes as most of those who see the race are likely to have to do. The natives complain that this has been the coldest spring in many years, although it had the saving grace of being also the driest.

The crews strike off from the Putney Bridge at full tide, about 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Constant Headaches And Dizziness.

It is hard to struggle along with a head that aches and pains all the time, and in nine cases out of ten the persistent headaches are due to some derangement of the stomach, liver or bowels.

Undoubtedly the cause must be removed before permanent relief may be had.

Burdock Blood Bitters removes the cause of the headaches, as it acts on every organ of the body and strengthens, purifies and regulates the whole system.

Mrs. Peter Curran, 27 Morrison St., Sydney, N.S., writes:—"I have been troubled for the last five years with constant headaches and dizziness. After trying several remedies, which I found to be of no avail, Burdock Blood Bitters was recommended to me.

B.B.B. did me a world of good, and I cannot praise this remedy enough."

PA STRIBLING SEEKS 12 ROUNDS--FOR SON

The Athletic Commission Refuses to Allow More Than Six Rounds.

NEW YORK, April 5 (Canadian Press).—"Young" Stribling, Macon, Ga., schoolboy light heavyweight, must confine his boxing in New York State to 6-round bouts, the State Athletic Commission decided yesterday in refusing a request of "Pa" Stribling, his manager, to match his son in a 12-round bout at an Olympic Fund benefit show here.

Stribling is but 19 years old, and the State boxing law prohibits boxers nuder 21 from competing in exhibitions of more than 6 rounds.

In refusing to waive the law, Chairman George E. Brower said the Commission did not wish to establish a precedent.

"Pa" Stribling announced that he would not allow his son to compete in 6-round bouts, and told the Commission he would not take out a license in this State on the basis permitted.

Promoters of the Olympic show on 29th April had sought to match Stribling with Mike Burke, New York light heavyweight, for a 12-round contest.

"Pa" Stribling also declared his son was ready to meet again Mike McTigue, world's light heavyweight champion, whom the Georgian outpointed decisively at Newark last Monday night.

Newark promoters have begun negotiotions to bring the pair together

Argentine Champ Ready For Fight He Says is Last

BUENOS AIRES, April 5.—After two weeks of the hardest training since he prepared for his fight with Jack Dempsey in New York last summer, Luis Firpo, Argentine heavyweight champion, enters the ring here to-night with Al. Reich, United States boxer, in what he says will be his last fight. Firpo has trained faithfully for this fight because he believes Reich is superior to both Farmer Lodge and Erminio Spalla, and says he does not intend to be remembered as having ended his career ingloriously.

Firpo told the correspondents here yesterday during his last training session that he would finish the fight in the first round if possible, "in order to show the world that I am quitting as good as ever."

Firpo's fine condition was evident as he danced about his sparring partner lightly and fast. His spirits were buoyant. The Argentine said that his left arm, which troubled him after his bout with Spalla, is now entirely well.

RADIO DOG-HOWLING CONTEST IN ENGLAND

LONDON, April 5.—(United Press).—There was an awful howl in London recently.

It could be heard over half the world—if you happened to be listening in.

One of the big British broadcasting outfits conceived the idea of having a radio dog-howling contest.

Noted bow-wowists all over the British Isles were entered. This was one time when the mongrel, out in the bback alley who keeps the neighborhood awake all night with his wails was in demand.

The "grand howl" lasted half an hour. The winner was named "George," and his voice was officially catalogued as "Mezzo-alto-robusto."

They're figuring on a cat-yowling contest next.

Carpentier Tangle Is Now Straightened Out.

NEW YORK, April 5. —Georges Carpentier, French light heavyweight, will meet Gene Tunney, United States' light heavyweight champion in New York or New Jersey, the week of June 9, and the winner will meet Tom Gibbons in Chicago, Detroit or Michigan City, Ind., on July Fourth. This was announced yesterday by Billy Gibson, Tunney's manager, after a final conference with Floyd Fitzsimmons, Benton Harbor promoter, who came east to straighten out the tangle over the Frenchman's engagement here.

The Carpentier-Tunney match originally was set for the week of June 16, but in order to give Fitzsimmons more time to promote his show, Gibson agreed to hold his match one week earlier. This agreement was reached after Gibson refused Fitzsimmons $30,000 offer to give up his contract with Carpentier.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND

ARLIE MARKS COMING

Canada's own comedienne, Arlie Marks, will open a three days' engagement at the Grand Opera House, Monday evening, April 7th, with a Wednesday matinee. This sterling stock organization needs no introduction to the lovers of popular-priced amusement as their name is a household word. Many companies have come and gone since the name of Marks became identified with the class of amusement, but it has been a case of the survival of the fittest, and this company, like Tennyson's brook, bids fair to go on forever.

Manager Lindsay E. Perrin has surrounded his popular star with the best supporting company she has ever had, a company composed of fifteen people. Up to date vaudeville will be given between the acts, and, like the play, changed nightly.

The opening offering, "My Irish Cinderella," is a dainty little comedy of Irish life in which Miss Marks has a role that fits her like the proverbial glove.

SPECIAL RETURN ENGAGEMENT

The latest gloom destroyer and novelty attraction, "Bringing Up Father on Broadway," will be the next entertainment at the Grand Opera House, Saturday, April 12, matinee and night. From all accounts the offering looms to the fore as one of the best seen hereabouts in seasons, based on the famous cartoons of George McManus. The play, which is in two acts, and five scenes and was written by John P. Mulgrew, introduces all the beloved characters who figure in a series of side-splitting adventures and situations. The supporting cast consists of nearly forty capable artists.

RUTH ST. DENIS AND TED SHAWN TO PRESENT "MUSIC VISUALIZATIONS."

In the programme to be given by Ruth St. Denis, Ted Shawn and the Denishawn Dancers at the Grand Theatre, on April 14th, one group is devoted to what Miss St. Denis has called "Music Visualizations." She has employed this term in order to avoid the use of the overworked and rather meaningless terms "interpretative" and "classic" as applied to the new movement in the dance.

The Denishawn Dancers attempt in these music visualizations to accurately translate into visible form the actual mathematical and architectural construction of the written composition. "Here," Miss St. Denis explains, "there is no dancing as the music makes the dancer feel—no aimless wandering about the stage, picking imaginary daisies and drinking from invisible fountains, but rather each eighth note, each arpeggio each trill is conscientiously paralleled by an analogous movement of the dancer, with careful thought to the rendering of the melodic themes.

This group includes Beethoven's "Sonata Pathetique," Chopin's "Revolutionary Etude," Schumann's "Soaring," Brahm's Waltz, and Liszt's "Liebestraum."

"LOVE LETTERS" IS COMING HERE SOON.

(Advance.)

The latest Shirley Mason picture bearing the interesting title, "Love Letters," comes to the Regent Theatre for three days, starting on Monday. This Fox production, directed by David Solomon, is the second in which Miss Mason has worked under his supervision. The combination appears to be a happy one, judging from the first effort.

Miss Mason has been surrounded by a cast which blends favorably with her characterization. Gordon Edwards, who was in "The Shepherd King," staged in Palestine, and "The Silent Command,' produced in New York, showed in those two productions that he was capable of portraying responsible parts. Playing the male lead opposite Miss Mason, Mr. Edwards appears at the Fox West Coast Studios for the first time. Miss Alma Francis, whose acting and beauty brought her attention when she apepared in a John Gilbert picture, "The Wolf Man," has a prominent part in "Love Letters."

The story is described as a romance of youthful folly, into which the thread of mystery has been twined. The action is said to be swift with a surprise for a climax. From advance indications the picture starting its run at the Regent next Monday should contain much that is entertaining.

AT THE ROYAL

LIFE AT HOLLYWOOD EXPOSED TO WORLD IN E. GLYN'S STORY.

Patrons of the Royal Theatre are in for a genuine surprise when they witness "The World's A Stage," Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, by Elinor Glyn. There have been screen plays, but never a screen play like this one. In the first place it is different. The author holds the mirror up to life—the life of a screen actress in Hollywood, and paints a wonderfully vital and true canvas of the hopes and trials, illusions, dreams, sorrow and happiness of the average screen star. Mrs. Glynn knows Hollywood. Therefore she writes with authority.

It is not a misstatement to declare that the picture will create as big a sensation on the screen as her other photoplays, "Her Great Moment," and "Beyond the Rocks," and as much as "Three Weeks," did with the fiction reading public. She has written in a straightforward manner, telling her story with little flourish, but emphasizing the salient moments which compose the everyday life of a screen star. We not only get a close-up of the serio-comic adventures of a cheap theatrical troupe, but we get a view of the inside of a picture studio. Then if this were not enough, we are taken into the home of the heroine and there is revealed before us the romance, the shattered illusions of a happy domestic life.

It is a vivid picture of life as it is lived in Hollywood. Mrs. Glyn drawing. The picture is directed by Colin Campbell who has several screen successes to his credit. He has given the production several novel highlights and has guided the players in a manner which shows he has a firm grasp upon dramatic values. Dorothy Phillips, long considered one of our best emotional actresses, gives to the screen a further demonstration of her gifted talent. As the heroine who is lifted from a cheap theatrical troupe and made a screen star over night, only to have her happiness shattered by a bigger drama in the home, Miss Phillips contributes a study which is marked for its depth and understanding, poise and charm. Kenneth Harlan as the husband who shatters her fine illusions, offers able assistance. The cast is further enhanced by the very human study rendered by Bruce McRae who, as the trusting friend, commands the greatest respect and sympathy.

AT THE CAPITOL

CAPITOL SHOW IS BIG FROM START TO FINISH MONDAY.

One of the best and biggest programmes ever offered by any local theatre awaits patrons at the Capitol theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, when Thomas Meighan, in his latest feature, a big double comedy bill, and real big-time vaudeville act and a 20-minute sketch by the Peterboro' Little Theatre Club with a cast of well-known Peterboro' people, will be presented. Recalling the success of his previous picture, "The Bachelor Daddy," Thomas Meighan decided to make another comedy in which he was almost surrounded by children. After considering the available authors, Mr. Meighan finally selected Booth Tasrkington as the man to write his story and so comes "Pied Piper Malone," one of the best pictures this popular star has ever appeared in and certainly one of the most delightful stories that Booth Tarkington ever wrote. Along with Thomas Meighan, is Will Rogers in a 2-reel comedy, "Two Waggons—Both Covered," a clever burlesque of "The Covered Waggon." An extra single reel comedy and a Pathe News, complete the film programme.

The O'Brien Girls & Co. present their fast-moving music and dancing act. This is a big-time act that has been secured by the Paramount circuit for only a few weeks' booking. A special added attraction that is a real novelty is the appearance of the Peterboro' Little Theatre Club in a one-act comedy by Kathleen L. MacCarthy (Jeannette), in which a cast of popular young Peterboro' society people will be seen, called "Melange," (or Three Women and a Man). In the cast are Mrs. W. McKee Bingham, Miss Claire Mason, Miss Dorothy Engle, Mr. J. Gaiger, Miss Mathilde Masson, Miss Jean Eastwood, and Miss Audrey Huycke. Because of the exceptionally long programme, performances will commence promptly at 2.30 and 8 p.m. Regular Capitol prices will prevail.

BIG DANCE AND MUSIC ACT AT CAPITOL NEXT WEEK

One of vaudeville's snappiest music and dancing acts come to the Capitol next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, when O'Brien Sisters and company will appear. This act is considered one of the best dancing and music acts to come to Peterboro in a long time, and is certain to find favor with Capitol patrons.

PETERBORO LITTLE THEATRE CLUB AT CAPITOL MONDAY IN COMEDY WITH LOCAL CAST

The Peterboro Little Theatre Club, a dramatic organization that has been doing some remarkably good work in making their own productions, using a cast composed of local people, will make their first appearance in a local theatre when they present Kathleen L. MacCarthy's comedy "Melange" (or Three Women and a Man) at the Capitol Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. This is a comedy in one-act, and will be presented in conjuction with the usual Capitol programme of pictures and selected vaudeville. The production was made under the direction of Mrs. W. M'Kee Bingham, with Mrs. E. H. Wood as stage director, and Miss L. Hall as stage manager. In the cast are Mrs. W. M'Kee Bingham, Miss Claire Mason, Miss Dorothy Engel, Mr. J. Gaiger, Miss Mathilde Masson, Miss Jean Eastwood, and Miss Audrey Huycke. The comedy tells an interesting little story of a Fifth Avenue modiste, and her attempts to blackmail a popular stage star. A fashion revue, with costumes supplied by The Richard Hall Company, will be of great interest to Capitol patrons of both sexes, is one of the most attractive scense in the sketch.

CANADIAN LOST OUT.

SYRACUSE, April 5 — Jack Reddick of Toronto, lumberjack middleweight, was decisively defeated by Ted Moore of England, in a six round bout here last night. Moore claims the middleweight championship of England, and received the decision after he had given Reddick a terific beating. The Canadian lumberjack was low and cumbersome and was no match for the clever Briton.

SMALL MARKET THIS MORNING

Buyers Devoted Their Attention to the Maple Syrup--The Prices.

Pigeons were visitors to the farmers' market this morning. From neighboring roofs, they flew down and picked their way daintily over the soft earth.

Vendors were scarcer than usual, but there was a large crowd of buyers, centred chiefly about the syrup tins. Prices of the maple product were 75 and 70 cents a quart, with one man retailing his supply at 60 cents.

Potatoes in one section were selling at $1.75 a bag, but went up to $1.90 around the corner. Little pigs were $7 and $8 and $10 a pair, pork quarters and sides 14 and 16 cents, and veal 13 and 16. The apple and fish dealers had the usual custom.

In a big crate, a lonesome black collie pup grieved in a corner. The last of a family of five, he waited a buyer at $2. A couple of small boys exhibited a reticent-looking black Leghorn, priced at $1.50.

Upstairs, supplies of butter and eggs were plentiful, with fowl not so much in evidence. Butter was 38 and 40 cents a pound, eggs 22 and 23 cents a dozen. Chickens were 35 cents a pound.

POLICE SEARCHING FOR ROBERT SCOTT

Brother of Russell Scott Who is Held on Hold-up Charge.

CHICAGO, April 5. — (Canadian Press).—Russel Scott, former Toronto promoter, who, according to the police, first confessed and then denied the holdup in which a drug clerk was killed, has repudiated the story and declared no holdup occurred, it was disclosed to-day. Although Scott has been identified by numerous victims of holdup men, in presence of those who were in the store at the time, he declared he and his brother and one of the witnesses went to the drug store to buy drinks and that the shooting occurred in an altercation over the price of drinks. The police insist that the fear of the gallows has led him to tell his latest version. A search for Robert Scott, brother of the prisoner, is being made in many cities.

MONTREAL BANDITS STILL BEING HELD

Fourteen Men Have Been Rounded Up Since Hold-up.

MONTREAL, April 5.—(Canadian Press).—Brand new leather gun case carried in the hands of Detective ODonnell, who held on to the new evidence which the detective department secured yesterday, when they made the arrest of three men internationally known, is destined to play an important part in the bank messenger hold-up of last Tuesday. This innocent looking case has been given closest attention by Bertillon expert. Every effort has been made to secure good impression of finger prints of man who handled the case. This man is believed to be among men detained yesterday, and who was four times mysteriously marched along the corridors to the prisoners department and back to a cell at the detective guard room. During several walks a citizen whose identity was not revealed carefully scrutinized three suspects. He was studying the men for a peculiarity in walk which it is now known that one of hold-up gang affected.

Since robbery of $142,000 of bank funds and murder of chauffeur and killing of one of the gang of highway men, fourteen men have been rounded up. Of this number detectives are holding eight men and also two women who were found in house.

MOTOR SHOW WILL BE HELD IN APRIL

Work of Health Association Reaches Into Many Needy Homes of City.

The annual Motor Show, to be held this year in the Armouries on April 23rd, 24th and 25th., in the interests of the Peterboro Health Association, promises to be as interesting as ever. Arrangements are going ahead with the usual efficiency to make this year's Show "bigger, better and brighter" than ever.

The work of the Peterboro Health Association, although carried on in the most unobtrusive manner, reaches, in its many ramifications, a large percentage of the homes of the city. Wherever the dreaded White Plague flaunts its red signal, the workers of the Association are on guard. Day and night, in the homes of the consumptive, they are ready to help in alleviating the suffering of the victim and the expense which sickness always brings in its wake. Thousands of gallons of milk and thousands of dozens of eggs are supplied yearly by this organization as well as attendance daily, advice as to hygienic and sanitary methods in preventing the spread of infection, and relief for weary family watchers.

Another angle of the work that receives a good deal of notice is the popular Summer Camp at Jackson Park, where hundreds of kiddies, since its inception, have been helped to health and vigor by kindly ministrations.

FINANCE MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT

A letter from Dr. M. Guest, physician at the Mercer Reformatory, regarding the sending of a girl from the reformatory to the Toronto General Hospital, was read.

It was moved and carried that the demand of the Nicholls Hospital for $7,200.00 and of the Public Library Board of $9,000.00 be paid in monthly installments. Appropriations for the Protestant Home of $3,822.00, the House of Providence $672.43 and of the Central Charity Board of $8,650.00 are to be paid in equal monthly installments to the Central Charity Board and also that $150.00 appropriated for the use of a car by the Plumbing Inspector be paid to him monthly.

A letter from the Peterborough City Trust saying that debentures for $27,000.00 would fall due on June 30th was read and it was decided that the matter be left for the chairman and the city treasurer to take up with the City Trust.

RECITAL AT THE CONSERVATORY

Mademoiselle Mathilde Masson achieved a real triumph in her vocal recital at the Conservatory of Music Hall last evening. A large number of her friends attended for a very enjoyable evening of music, rendered by the youthful singer, who was assisted by Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland, in a series of readings.

Mademoiselle Masson gave a very artistic programme of songs, the majority of which were rendered in French, with two or three English selections. Her appearance was charming in the extreme. Wearing a gown of pale blue crepe, with silver bodice and flowing shoulder knot of pink rose buds, Miss Masson was showered with floral tributes during the course of the evening. A handsome bouquet was presented also to Mrs. McClelland.

The programme opened with the ringing "Marseillaise," followed by two of Chaminade's graceful pretty songs, in the lovely "Summer (L'Ete)", and a Love Song. Mimi's solo from "La Boheme" was a beautiful selection, and Miss Masson was compelled to respond to enthusiastic encores for an aria from "La Tosca," "Vissi d'Arte, Vissi d'Amore," ("Love and Music, these have I lived for,") in which the delicate and vibrant high tones of the sweet singer were very apparent. Her fresh, spontaneous vocalism, and the decorative quality of her soprano voice, which gives an impression at times of coloratur timbre, were noticeable in the trilly periods of "Nymphs and Fauns," followed by a charming number in "Vainka's Song," and the "Lakme" of Leo Delibes.

Another popular song was Massenet's "Cendrillon (Conte de fees)", which brought another dainty encore. This selection is a descriptive, delightful bit, portraying the pathos of the lovely Cinderella.

The programme of songs closed with Massenet's "Le Verger," rendered with the expressive sweetness that characterizes Miss Masson's singing.

The accompaniments for Miss Masson's songs were sympathetically rendered by Mrs. P. Porter.

The contributions in elocutionary work by Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland made a very enjoyable interlude in the vocal programme. Mrs. McClelland was excellent as usual last evening, giving several of her inimitable "kiddie" numbers, a selection named "Bill," and "Mrs. Swartz visits the Theatre for the First Time." Mrs. McClelland was compelled to respond to several encores.

At the conclusion of the recital, friends of Madame and Mademoiselle Masson were entertained in the studio of the Conservatory.

THREE SOFTBALL GAMES RUN OFF LAST EVENING.

Three fast games in the Garrison Softball League were played last night in the Armouries before a fair spread too much to make the games were good, and the scores were not spread too much to make the games one-sided. The first game of the evening, played between the Rangers C. and D. and the Rangers A. and B., was undoubtedly the closest contested game of the night. At the end of the fifth inning the score was 7 to 3 in favor of the C. and D. boys, but the A. and B.'s came back strong in the sixth and batted the old pill for two runs that threw a scare into the C. and D.'s, who one inning earlier in the game thought they had it cinched. The Rangers and the Cadets also put on a good game of baseball that was mingled with some snappy plays. Although the Rangers defeated the Cadets by the score of 9 runs to 5, the Cadets have a strong team, and would have made a better showing if they had got any of the breaks. The Gunners H. G., supported with strong pitching, downed the Veterans 9 runs to 6, after six innings of play.

PROGRESSIVES WILL BE FOOLED ON TARIFF REDUCTION IN NEW BUDGET ORACULAR PREDICTION OF MEIGHEN

Concessions to Farmers In Duties on Implements Would Be Lost in a Thimble, the Conservative Leader Declared At Windsor In Denunciation of Liberal Government—Tariff Question Should Be Definitively Settled and Adjustments of Western and Maritime Complaints Could Be Made.

TWO THOUSAND AT MEETING

WINDSOR, Ont., April 7.—(Canadian Press).—Prediction that the coming Budget at Ottawa would contain no announcement of further reductions in the tariff of agricultural implements, was made by Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, speaking here on Saturday afternoon.

"The Budget is to be down next week," the Conservative Leader. "I stand here and assume, perhaps for the first time, the role of prophet in this Dominion and venture to say, having watched the whitening gills of the Government for the last three weeks, that when the Budget is delivered all the reduction you will see on farm implements you can place in the left-hand corner of a thimble. The Progressives will be fooled just the way they have been fooled every session since the Government came into power."

Mr. Meighen carried out a promise to condemn here in Essex, as he has in the House of Commons, the vote for the wharf at Belle River, at a first cost of $35,000, and declared the item to be fulfillment of a bribe offered by supporters of Mr. Healy, present Liberal member, in the by-election campaign last year.

Guest at Banquet.

The conservative leader was guest of honor at a large banquet in the Prince Edward Hotel last evening when addresses were also delivered by Hon. Rodolphe Monty, Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, M.P. and Hon. Hugh Guthrie, M.P., former members of his cabinet; also P. S. Wilson, M.L.A. Windsor, and E. R. Dennis, London, president of Western Ontario Conservative Association. Essex County Conservative Club arranged the banquet, as well as an afternoon meeting in the Armories, which was attended by nearly 2,000. Its president, S. E. Dinsmore, was chairman of the evening, and Dr. R. D. Morend, presided at the Armories, where Mayor F. J. Mitchell, of Windsor, welcomed the visitors and Adolphus Armstrong, M.L.A., was an additional speaker.

The tariff was chief topic of all, except Mr. Monty, who dealt with Unity of Interest between Quebec and Ontario, and referred to Mr. Meighen's recent visit as a triumphant tour. Mr. Meighen spoke at some length in the French language, at the Armouries, and Hon. Mr. Monty at both gatherings.

The Opposition's leaders presentation of the fiscal situation included statements that the Western Provinces do not wish to purchase unity at the price of depletion of the population of the Dominion, and that he favored making trade treaties with Britain only upon the same basis as other countries."

"Far Off Things."

Hon. Mr. Monty said that some people had gone back to 1755 to find a grievance that would bring votes to Mr. King, when they should talk reconstruction, tariff, industry and relief for the taxpayers.

"If we must talk conscription," he added, "let me tell those who may find it interesting that no worse conscription ever existed than the conscription of a cruel necessity which breaks Canadian homes and leads their inhabitants by thousands into a foreign land.

"Not that we should be sorry for the non-fulfillment of the Liberal platform of 1919. I believe it was very happy, indeed, for Canada that Mr. MackKenzie has kept all the little planks of his platform securely hidden in his hip pocket. But there is such a thing as political boot-legging (if I dare mention the name being so far from Quebec and so near to Detroit) and all bootleggers look alike to me."

Mr. Monty said the days of MacDonald and Cartier developed between Quebec and Ontario a friendship that would live again on the day that the Pacific elements of the population agree to settle their differences "even if, to do so, they have to go farther than the letter of the law."

Pledges Not Kept.

Hon. Dr. Manion spoke of the government's legislation regarding the wheat board and lake freight rates.

"Everything the government does seems to be just a little worse than the last thing they did," he said. "I know of no piece of legislation brought in by the present government that has been a success. MacKenzie King either does not take himself seriously, or if he does he is deceiving himself as he deceived the people of this country. As far as I know he has carried out none of his promises and none of the planks of his platform."

Rt. Hon. Mr. Meighen, introduced by Colonel Robinson, opened with a tribute to his colleagues for loyalty through trying times. In connection with the $1,300,000 Union Club purchase in London, for "a new home for Mr. Larkin," the opposition leader recalled that Mr. King had pointed to an announcement in the house last June as implying authority of Parliament for the deal, while it turned out later the purchase had actually been consummated in May.

"I am told," he said, "in criticising the administration I lack constructive ability. My colleagues are assailed in this language, too. My first corner-stone, is a strong, sound, stable fiscal policy. There are other constructive things that must be done. There have been other things constructive the past has called forth, but these things we will have virility enough to do if we first set ourselves right on tariff matters.

Power By Compromise.

"To-day the King Government," he said, "sought to hold power by one frittering compromise after another with the progressive leader.

"Is it not time," asked the speaker, "to do away with double dealing and pretended appeals for unity and let all parts of the country know what our tariff policy must be. I dont' know how we are going to make any progress until we do. Nobody wants an oppressively high tariff in this country, but only one that will enable our industries to go on, and to employ hands, and keep our people here; and until we have men of courage and political honesty to declare this in all parts of the Dominion we may as well abandon all hope of national unity in this cuntry.

"Here we stand, a country of nine millions,, buying from 110 millions over there $1.55 of agricultural products for every dollar's worth the whole 110 millions buy from us. That is the situation farmers of Ontario and Quebec are laboring under to-day.

"I would make reciprocal treaties if I could and open every market I could without yielding the whole position, I would make a treaty with Britain on just the same basis as others. I do not believe in showing loyalty by giving industrial concessions unless you get something in return. I believe this country should first of all and all the time look after its own interests.

"We stand on our feet industrially and they on theirs, but on the common defence of the empire let us stand by them, and having achieved all the industrial strength we can, let us contribute our share toward the defence in which we are just as much interested as they." (Applause).

Would Make Adjustments.

With reference to instability, the leader said: "This thing will continue until the people rise in their might in a straight issue and declare what the tariff policy of this country is going to be. If Western Canada does not receive the same results from the tariff policy as other parts of this Dominion, or if the Martimes claim to labor under special disabilities, then this country with its strength renewed by a stable policy is ready to make adjustments to Western Canada or Eastern Canada, because out of the common strength we will be able to do all this. Make it easier for eastern provinces to get to central markets, and for west to reach the great industrial markets to the east. The first essential is to declare in tones that no one can mistake what course we propose to take, and having declared it, pursue it as we did for almost 50 years. Only when concessions have been made to agitation, and dishonest promises have been made, and unfeasible party commitments made, have we been plunged into the condition in which we find ourselves to-day. The people of Canada will soon find a way out when given a chance, and I predict that when the next election is through and the result comes—as I believe even the government, believing and trembling knows it will come—that will be the last time, in any very vital sense, that the tariff policy of this country will need to be tested. In the United States they admit the protective principle; the battle is over, and when the next test in this country comes I believe the battle will be over, too." (Applause).

Ayers confessed bank border bank bandit waived preliminary hearing when he was arraigned here Saturday before Judge Jackson in district court and pleaded guilty to the charge of robbing the Union Bank at Foremost of $10,000 in cash and $124,000 in bonds on August 29, 1922.

CANDIDATE OF BOERS ELECTED

Strongest Available Representative of the South African Government Defeated in By-Election — Blow to Government.

CAPETOWN. South Africa, April 7.—(Canadian Press Cable via Reuters). — A general election in the South African Union has been brought nearer as a result of the by-election at Wakkerstroom, Transvaal where the nationalist candidate. Naude, defeated Robertson the government candidate, by a substantial majority. The seat was formerly held by a ministerialist who died.

The Wakkerstroom by-election is regarded as pivotal as regards the feeling in the country districts where the nationalists on the whole easily predominate, and it is an undoubted blow to the government. Robertson recently resigned from the administratorship of the Transvaal with a view to retaining the Wakkerstroom seat for the South African party. He was the most popular and strongest candidate available.

One of Naude's chief recommendations to the Dutch electorate, which is mainly racial in feeling, lay in the fact that he was wounded when fighting on the Boer side in the last South African war. Well informed political circles in Capetown now think a general election cannot be postponed beyond next September.

INFLUENCE TITLED U.S. WOMAN INTERVENED IN CANADIAN JUSTICE

Determined Mission of the Duchess de Richelieu a Factor in Winning a Reprieve For Walter Muir Just Twenty Hours Before Time Set For Hanging at Valleyfield, P.Q.

Convicted of Murder.

MONTREAL, April 7.—Back in Bordeaux jail after his harrowing trip to Valleyfield where he came under the shadow of the scaffold, Walter Muir, the 20-year-old New Yorker, who murdered a Valleyfield man, in a drunken quarrel over a dog, is breathing freely once again.

Though his reprieve till July 11th means only that he is entitled to a new trial, he is confident that this time he will not be convicted of murder, and while the probabilities point to a charge of manslaughter being laid, should he be freed from the capital charge he has hopes that it will not be long before he is safe back again in "Little Old New York." The basis of his optimism is the unusual influence brought to bear on his behalf.

Although his lawyer denied it and none of the Montreal newspapers were able to confirm the story, there is no doubt that the news wired from New York that the Duchess de Richelieu, a New York social worker of American birth, paid a personal visit to Montreal and Ottawa, and was successful in securing a lot of influential help from Americans and others whom she interested in the case.

Interviewed Minister.

The Duchess arrived in Montreal last Tuesday, along with Mrs. Muir, mother of the condemned man, and another New York lady. They visited young Muir in his death cell at Bordeaux, interviewed the lawyer, the American consul, and several Montreal Americans, and in Ottawa had an interview with the Minister of Justice, which they had great hopes would result in a reprieve. To make assurance doubly sure however they instructed Muir's lawyer, D. McAvoy, K.C., to lodge an appeal, which would automatically prevent the execution taking place as fixed at Valleyfield Thursday.

This was done and on Thursday noon the news was communicated to Muir, who overcome with emotion, warmly expressed his gratitude to his mother, to the Duchess de Richelieu, his lawyers and the others who had worked for a reprieve. The Duchess de Richelieu returned to New York on Thursday night, after receiving definite news that a reprieve had been granted till July 11.

In Shadow of Gallows.

Muir was within twenty hours of the hangman's rope at the time and could hear the carpenters at work erecting the gallows outside his cell door of the Valleyfield jail.

Had he arrived at the jail last Monday and been allowed to walk wherever he chose, he could have seen the rope intended for him supporting a 1000 pound load. Hangman Ellis was stretching the rope to take out the twist.

The scaffold of red cedar has been used so often that the steps leading to the trap are beginning to show wear and tear Originally built in 1847 it has undergone little change in the intervening years. The posts, steps and trap wich are of red cedar, and have survived the years, have been used in every township in the province The scaffold is a portable one and can be transferred to any place and put in position in a very short space of time.

Arthur Ellis, who was at Valleyfield for the execution, will not be out of work long in his particular line. He stated last Monday while in Montreal that he had twelve hangings on the waiting list up to May 24.

"After that, I am going to take a rest," he said.

Porcupine "Bob" Husband's Idea

KANSAS CITY, April 7.—A young and comely matron entered the office of the free legal aid bureau of the Public Welfare Board, and on the verge of tears, took off her hat. Her hair was cropped as close as a porcupine pompadour.

"My husband did it," she explained as she started weeping. "I had it bobbed and he said, 'I'll give you a convict bob' and cut it off with a pair of shears."

PRINCE OF WALES HEARD SERIOUS TALK FROM KING

LONDON, April 7 (United Press). — The News of the World says that as a result of a "serious talk" with his father, King George, the Prince of Wales has promised to give up dangerous steeplechasing in the future and confine his riding to less dangerous events.

The newspaper adds that the Prince lost three front teeth when kicked in the face in his latest accident, in addition to other injuries.

TWO KILLED IN KU KLUX CLASH SCORE INJURED

Fire Hose Turned On the Celebrating Klansmen at Lilly, Pennsylvania, on Saturday Night Precipitated Riot Between the Townspeople and Hooded Visitors From Neighboring Town.

THIRD MAY DIE.

LILLY, Pa., April 7.—(Canadian Press).—Two men were killed, another believed fatally woundel and a score of others were more or less seriously hurt in rioting Saturday night between townspeople and members of the Ku Klux Plan, a close check-up by State police and deputy sheriffs disclosed yesterday. Four residents of Lilly were being held by State police upon charges of rioting while at Johnstown.

The rioting occurred when the stream from a fire hose was turned upon the Klansmen as they were boarding a special train for Johnstown, 19 miles west of here, after having paraded in the darkness through the town from an adjoining hill where a ceremony attended by some 600 Klansmen had been held. Firing began immediately and when the special train pulled out thirty minutes later, several wounded men had been taken aboard while Philip T. Conrad and Floyd Paul, both of Lilly lay dead on the street. Eleven of the injured, all declared to be residents of Lilly, were takes to the Altoona Hospital, the most seriously hurt being Frank Miasco, whose recovery physicians declared was doubtful. Three of the injured taken to the Johnston Hospital were said to be Klansmen.

Sheriff Kellar with a force of deputy sheriffs and a detachment of state police patrolled the town Sunday. Sheriff Kellar returned to Johnstown late in the day declaring the situation was quiet and that he feared no further disorders. Members of the state police remained, however to conduct an investigation into the riot.

About 45 pistols were taken from the special train after its arrival at Johnstown, according to Sheriff Kellar who declared that some were found upon the men arrested while others were in the cars.

Many of the Klansmen left the train at stops between Lilly and Johnstown.

NORTH BAY TRAPPER HAS NEW WOLF STORY

Deep Snow and Lack of Food Said to Have Prompted Attack.

NORTH BAY, April 7. — Canadian Press.—On his annual pilgrimage to civilization Larry McCann, a veteran trapper and forest ranger, arrived here on Saturday to dispose of his catch, and stated that for the first time in his long experience his life had been menaced by wolves.

On Monday, March 3rd, the veteran woodsman, accompanied by his foxhound "Patch," was attacked by a large pack of hungry wolves.

The trapper was victorious in the engagement but the wolves were not driven back, however until four of their number had been killed, and the dog so badly mauled that it died the next day.

Mr. McCann stated that this was the first time he had been close enough to get a short at wolves in all his ten years' traping experience.

He attributed the deep snow and a lack of food, as the cause of the unusual boldness and ferocity of the "wild dogs."

Tours Continent Without Engine

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 7.—Half way across the continent from Fort Scott, Kansas, to Los Angeles, in an automobile, without an engine, is the unique record of Alex Packard.

Packard wanted to come west the worst way. He had a small 1907 model automobile, but the motor was missing. He bought a stout tow rope and shoved his flivver out into the road.

A passing motorist kindly offered to tow him to the first garage. Reaching a repair shop, Packard thanked his benefactor, unhooked the rope—and shoved the car down the road a ways, past the garage. Another tourist came along, towed him to the next stop, and so on, to St. Louis.

"Wonderful scenery, fine trip not a bit of engine trouble," Packard reported.

SPECULATION LESS IN GRAIN

Than In Any Other Business In Canada, Testified James Stewart, Prominent Exchange Operator, At Winnipeg Enquiry.

WINNIPEG, April 7 (Canadian Press). — "There is less speculation in the grain trade than in any other business in the Dominion of Canada," declared James Stewart, who was the chairman of the Canada Wheat Board during the war, and one of the biggest operators on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, giving evidence on Saturday before the Royal Grain Commission.

Mr. Stewart was examined particularly as to the suggested speculation on the Grain Exchange and what, if any, suggestions he could offer to eliminate this.

Witness gave it as his opinion that the grain trade was much freer of speculation than any other business, and stated that he had no suggestions to offer.

CHURCH UNION BILL UP THIS AFTERNOON

TORONTO, April 7.—(Canadian Press.) — Meeting of counsel and leaders in church union movement this afternoon will decide if the church union bill is to be withdrawn in the Legislature. C.R. McKeown, who sponsored the bill in committee, said this morning that if the amendment stood as it was proposed that he would like to withdraw the bill until after Ottawa had taken action. He said that the amendment killed the purpose of the bill entirely and that it was no use going ahead. The general feeling is that the meeting this afternoon will take the same view as Mr. McKeown and that the bill will be withdrawn. In such event it will not come back until next year and the union question will be wide open in Ontario.

THE WEATHER.

Saturday had a temperature of 66 degrees in the shade. This is the highest since the middle of last October. On Sunday we had our first "April shower," that the poets speak about, and is doubtless preliminary to the "May flowers." The total was .40 of an inch. While the robins have been numerous lately but few of the other spring birds are here yet.—W.P.

TOWNSHIP SUED SCHOOL TEACHER FOR INCOME TAX

Miss Vera Squires of Peterboro Contested Claim of Seymour Municipality For Tax of $7.20--Argued That Her Residence Was in Peterboro.

JUDGMENT RESERVED

CAMPBELLFORD, April 7.—Seymour Township sued Miss Vera Squires for her income tax, at present a teacher in S. S. No. 1, Manvers, and the case was heard by Judge Huycke of Peterborough at a session of the Division Court held on Saturday afternoon. The amount involved was only $7.20, but the interesting legal point, on that concerns probably a majority of the unmarried teachers in Ontario, was the question as to what constitutes a legal residence. Miss Squires resisted payment of the tax as a matter of principle and not from any desire to escape payment of a just debt. G. A. Payne, solicitor for Seymour, appeared for the township and Joseph Wearing of Peterborough for the defendant. Judge Huycke reserved his decision to give Mr. Wearing an opportunity to submit the decision in a somewhat similar case brought by the city of Ottawa against the wife of Senator Hardy of Brockville. The Judge stated that he had a good idea what his ruling would be.

The Evidence.

Only two witnesses were heard, the defendant and her father, T. H. Squires of Peterborough. Miss Squires swore that in June, 1922, she began her career as a teacher in S. S. No. 3, Seymour, at a salary of $1,000 a year. She secured board at the home of Robert McCullough, paying $1 for every day she was there. About every two weeks she spent the week-end at the home of her parents in Peterborough, where she also resided during her vacations. All she took with her to the McCullough home was the necessary clothing. She gave up her position in 1923 at the end of the teaching year and went to the school in Manvers, where she is now engaged.

The amount which she earned in Seymour in 1922, the year for which the township levied the income tax, was $400, the balance, $600, being paid her for the six months of the following year. She has never paid any income tax, although she has filled out the returns in Peterborough for last year.

Was Not Notified.

Miss Squires admitted in cross-examination by Mr. Payne that she had cast her first vote in the Provincial election last year, in 1923. She did not appeal to the Court of Revision against the assessment be-

CHARGE SAYS HE GOT TWO MEN TO COMMIT PERJURY

James Newell Released on $10,000 Bail--Both Men Plead Guilty to Perjury Charges -- Case Arose Out of Seduction Charge Last Year.

James Newell was this morning charged before Magistrate O. A. Langley with subornation of perjury and was allowed out on bail of $10,000 to appear on Friday, April 11. On request of Wilfrid Huycke, appearing for the prisoner in place of G. N. Gordon, K.C., his solicitor the accused was relieved from electing summary or regular trial and from pleading. Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K.C. conducted the prosecution.

Newell was indicated by a grand jury sitting at the General Sessions of the Peace before His Honor Judge Ward on December 11, 1923, on a charge of seduction under promise of marriage. The offence was alleged to have taken place against Clarice McColl at Norwood on October 2, 1922. In the trial which followed, closed to the public by order of the judge, the jury disagreed and Newell was held over for trial by a judge without a jury on January 15, when he was discharged. At the jury trial two men, Sebert G. Hinds and William A. Miller gave sworn testimony to the effect that they had had illegal and immoral dealings with the complainant. Miss McColl denied all knowledge of the men; one of whom at least she said she had never seen. She spiritedly denied having associated with men of the class to which she declared they belongd.

The charges now laid as a result of investigations carried on by the police allege that James Newell procured and counselled William Miller and Sebert Hinds on or about December 7, last to commit perjury by swearing they had carnal knowledge with Clarice McColl, contrary to the truth.

Hinds and Miller pleaded guilty to charges of perjury and are awaiting sentence which will be pronounced on Friday. Hinds was apprehended in Niagara on Thursday by the Niagara police and handed over to the local force that night. He had been working on a farm in Stamford for some weeks.

I.O.D.E. CHAPTER HAD MEETING ON SATURDAY

The Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E. held a meeting in the green room of the Y.W.C.A. on Saturday afternoon, with a good attendance, the regent, Mrs. F. C. Webber, presiding. A good deal of business was transacted at this meeting. It was decided to hold a tea dance in the Peterboro Club rooms on Easter Monday, April 21st., with music by Ken Blood's orchestra from Port Hope. Mrs. N. Geale and Mrs. Northedge Birks will be convenors of the committee in charge of arrangements, assisted by Mrs. Jack Gillespie, Mrs. F. C. Webber, Miss Florence Thompson and Dr. Phyllis Young.

The Peter Robinson chapter will take charge of the dance at the Motor Show, with Ken Blood's orchestra in attendance. Miss Gladys Patterson will be convenor of the committee in charge.

Delegates to the Hamilton Conference at the end of April were appointed in Mrs. F. Hooper and Mrs. F. C. Webber.

Mrs. Webbe, reported on the presentation War Memorial pictures made to the public schools of the city on Friday. Members of the Chapter who assisted in the presentation were Mrs. Webber, at the Queen Alexandra school, Mrs. N. Birks at the Queen Mary school, and Miss Mary Harstone at the King George school.

Mrs. Webber also reported on arrangements made for holding a tag day for the blind by the combined I.O.D.E. chapters of the city on Saturday next.

At the conclusion of the business session, tea was served. Mrs. L. McLaren poured tea, and Miss Ethel Nichol had charge of arrangements, assisted by the Misses C. Littlefield and D. Engel.

Perhaps the reason the dear ladies refuse to abolish the stymie is that it would leave them with one less thing to argue about.

ROTARIANS TO PROVIDE FUN AT MOTOR SHOW

Will Unite With Kiwanians in Furnishing Entertainment for Visitors to Big Event.

TO-DAY'S LUNCHEON

The Rotarians and Kiwanians will combine their efforts in providing plenty of entertainment for visitors to the annual motor show on behalf of the Health Association this year, according to the report presented by Rotarian J. H. Seels, chairman of the special Rotary committee at the regular weekly luncheon of the Rotary Club at the Empress to-day.

Rotarian Seels reported that his committee had been in conference with a similar committee from the Kiwanis club and it had been decided that one of these organizations would supply the entertainment on the first night of the motor show, and the other on the second night, while for the third night the two clubs would join forces. The members will wear carnival costumes and will lead in community singing, and something in the line of a street fair will be organized.

Rotarian Seels was instructed to prepare a budget of the expenses of the committee.

There were two speakers to-day, Dr. J. J. Middleton discussing "Horticulture" with special emphasis on the work of the local Horticultural Society and Mr. J. Wells Fraser speaking on the work of the Chamber of Commerce.

Dr. Middleton, after referring to the long years of research and work done on behalf of horticulture by Luther Burbank, who for example had spent twelve years in developing a blue poppy, paid a compliment to Mr. J. H. Moore, in the employ of the Ontario government, whom he characterized as one of the leaders in horticulture in this province.

Dr. Middleton, dealing with the local Horticultural Society, explained that the old system of giving plants and bulbs to members of the society had been abandoned and it was felt by the directors that more enthusiasm for the work would be developed if people were not appealed to on the basis of getting premiums for their membership fee.

He appealed to Rotary members who were looking after under-privileged boys not to spoil them by giving them too many presents, for which they gave nothing in return, suggesting in this regard that they interested these boys in horticulture, pointing out that there were many spots in Peterborough that could be beautified by such youngsters if their actiivties were directed.

Rotarian Reg. Turner declaring that a prize offered by the Horticultural Society for the best plot of flowers taken care of by boys or girls had never been claimed, suggested that Rotarians interest their own boys in going after these prizes.

The Chamber of Commerce.

In his interesting address in which he gave some information as to the development of the Chamber of Commerce and read a list of the officers, Mr. J. W. Fraser pointed out that fifty Rotarians were members of the Chamber and that at the last election of officers all but three of those elected were Rotarians and he complimented the Rotary club upon their excellent showing.

Mr. Fraser dwelt upon the activities of the Chamber of Commerce, stressing particularly the mass of information and data collected by the chamber. The staff was ready to furnish information upon almost any subject or to secure data at the shortest notice and Mr. Fraser was sure that although it was difficult financing all this work upon a $15.00 a year basis the local Chamber was as successful in its activities as other similar organizations whose annual membership fee was $25.00.

He urged members to make the best possible use of the machinery of the Chamber of Commerce, and expressed the opinion that a wide gap would be left in social and industrial service work were not this organization in existence in Peterborough. Mr. Fraser paid a warm tribute to former officers, particularly to Mr. J. J. Duffus, who had been president for the past three years.

Justice Wright sentenced the Bryants to six months' imprisonment in the Ontario Reformatory, to be followed by an indetermined sentence of one year. A. E. Bryant was allowed bail because of illness.

HASTINGS RECORDS IN ENDURING GRANITE HER SONS' LOYAL SACRIFICE

Memorial Monument Will Be Unveiled on May 24—Will Be Erected on Government Land Fronting on River — Funds Were Raised By the Ladies of the Hastings Chapters of the I.O.D.E.

CEREMONY PLANNED.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

HASTINGS, April 7— Hanging on the wall of the I.O.D.E. rooms is a large banner on which have been worked by skilful and patient fingers the names of the 73 young men who left the village for service in the World War. Nineteen of these names are wrought in letters of gold, those of the heroes who never returned, but who are now sleeping under the poppies in Flanders. A large, framed photo of these martyrs is among the furnishings of the room.

The gallant dead will not be forgotten. Under the photos appears the inscription: "Their name shall live forever." On Victoria Day, a monument erected to their memory will be unveiled with ceremony befitting the solemnity of the occasion. Hastings made a war record of which every resident is proud, and now the village is setting some larger and wealthier municipalities an example in rendering all possible homage to the young fellows who gave their lives for the Empire.

Work of the I.O.D.E.

In the most strenuous batties of the war, Hastings had an average of 100 young men on duty in the trenches. The I.O.D.E. never permitted them to be forgotten and for months 100 well filled parcels were sent from here to the fighting line. When peace was declared the two chapters of the I.O.D.E. took up the work of raising funds for the erection of a suitable memorial. The members are unanimous in giving the most of the credit to Mrs. P. M. Howard, regent of the senior chapter. She was really the moving spirit in the movement and from the beginning her energy has been untiring.

Only Public Memorial.

The monument, which is being prepared by a Peterborough firm, will be delivered here on May 10th, according to the terms of the agreement and when placed in position will be the only public memorial in the village. It will occupy a prominent place on the banks of the river within view of travellers passing up and down the Trent canal. The site is Government land, for which the I.O.D.E. have been given a 100 year lease at the nominal rental of $1 a year. The names of the dead engraved upon it are as follows:

D. Fowlds, J. Wharrie, R. Richardson, J. Devine, E. Armour, R. Plant, W. Powers, H. Baker, J. Warner, B. Hicks, J. Barrie, A. Dunlap, L. Logan, J. Doherty, T. Parker, A. Peters, E. Stevenson, E. West, F. Scriver.

The memorial service on Saturady, May 24th, will be conducted by Major J. F. B. Belford, M.L.A. for East Northumberland. Other speakers who will be invited are M. E. Maybee, M.P., A. Brethen, M.P., and Judge Huycke, of Peterborough.

The monument will be unveiled by Mrs. Gerald Maryatt, formerly Miss Helen Fowlds, Hastings 'only representative on the nursing staff overseas. The Northumberland Regimental Band of Campbellford will supply the music. Permission for the members of the G.W.V.A. to appear in the parade in uniform has been secured from the military authorities.

Mrs. P. M. Howard is regent and Mrs. Walter M. Fowlds, secretary of the Senior Chapter, I.O.D.E. Of the Dorontal or Junior Chapter, Mrs. Walter Burkholder is regent and Miss Mary Lambert secretary. The members of each chapter pledged themselves to raise 50 per cent. of the amount required and the necessary funds have been secured.

Private Memorials

Among the soldiers who lost their lives overseas were representatives from each of the four churches in the village. The Anglicans, Presbyterians and Catholics have put up memorials to these, the one standing in front of the Catholic church being an especially fine specimen of art, a credit to the taste of Rev. Father Bretherton, who designed it. Standing on a broad base is a large bronze figure of the angel Gabriel, blowing his horn, the signal calling to life the slumbering dead.

The Horticultural Society of which Rev. Father Bretherton is president, beautiful one of the streets in the village by planting memorial trees.

School Matters

Dr. D. W. Karr, organizer of rural school for Ontario, who spoke here recently on the question of a consolidated school for the village and whose address made a favorable impression upon the ratepayers interested, has been invited to come here again. It is proposed to have Dr. Karr address the ratepayers in each of the five sections which will be included in the proposed consolidation of a majority of the taxpayers consent.

Dr. Karr has replied that he will have two days available about the middle of the month and it is thought that he will be able to cover the ground is that time, by holding afternoon and evening meetings. After his address in each section a vote of those present will be taken.

The five rural schools interested in his proposition are the Fife School the Fleming School, the Elgin, Hatch Line and Cobourg Road Schools. At the recent conference, between the Hastings and rural school boards, the country schools represented were Fife, Fleming and Elgin. At least two of these boards were in favor of consolidation, but before definite action can be taken the ratepayers must be given a chance to vote on the question.

Mothers Should Not NEGLECT BRONCHITIS In the Babies

Mrs. E. Langdon, Kingston, Ont., writes:—"My baby had bronchitis when he was two weeks old, he recovered from the attack but took it again, several months later, and on account of the severity I was almost panic-stricken to know what to do for him. My mother advised me to try Dr. Woods' Norway Pine Syrup, as she had used it for several years with splendid results.

I got a bottle, and after I had used it I could see a decided improvement in him; after several bottle he was completely relieved.

My boy is now two years old, and he has never had an attack of bronchitis since.

As a mother, raising a family, I am very grateful to know that I have found a real remedy for bad cold and bronchitis, as it lifts care and anxiety from an anxious mother's shoulders."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is 35c. a bottle; the large family size 60c.; put up onl yby The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WEDNESDAY FIXED AS THE LAST DAY

Reparations Experts Believe That Germany Can Pay More.

(By Webb Miller, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PARIS, April 7.—Irritated by delays in the submission of the experts' reports to the reparations commission of General Charles G. Dawes, chairman of Committee No. 1, to-day fixed Wednesday as the day for the delivery of the reports, barring unforseen mechanical difficulties.

Mr. Dawes presided over a session of the experts this morning and told his associates bluntly that they must finish revamping and translating the reports to-day.

The American chairman plainly was extremely annoyed by the recent delays occasioned by the adjusting of the language of the French and English text and kept the committee sitting long after the usual lunch hour.

From what has become known of the reparations experts 'conclusions, which are expected to be presented to-morrow, it appears that Germany is expected to pay the first year the plan is in operation, one billion gold marks in kind and cash; second year 1,200,000,000; third year 1,500,000,000; fourth year 2,000,000,000 and fifth year 2,500,000,000 gold marks. This latter figure is regarded as a minimum which should be maintained, subject to increases to be fixed by the Reparation Commission, according to the index figures of the German prosperity.

In other words, experts lay down conditions which would justify demanding more of Germany. The British doubt if Germany can pay much more, while the French and Belgian experts believe Germany can be made pay as high as 4,500,000,000 yearly. Americans seem inclined to believe that the French estimate is too optimistic.

TWO MARY BROWNS PASS CENTURY MARK

Older Woman at Ingersoll Died Sunday In 104th Year — Saw Daniel O'Connell in 1829.

INGERSOLL, Ont., April 7.—Ingersoll's oldest resident died Sunday morning in the person of Mrs. Mary Brown, in her 104th year. Deceased was born in Ireland, and quite vividly recalled walking some distance in Limerick with her father to see Daniel O'Connell on his triumphant tour of Ireland in 1829. Deceased came to Dundas, Ont., when thirty years of age. She was married there. Shortly after this she came to Ingersoll, then for a while lived in Cincinnati, Ohio. She came back to live permanently in Ingersoll in 1868. She retained all her faculties until a few weeks ago, although for some time back her memory has been somewhat faulty. She had not been ill in a physical sense, her great age contributing to a state of feebleness which kept her abed for some time past. Her husband died in 1886. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Charles Daniels, John street, Ingersoll.

By a strange coincidence there is another Mary Brown who resides a few miles out of Ingersoll, who is now in her 101st year. The latter is known as "Grandma Brown," of Foldens' Corners.

Washout Nearly Caused a Serious Train Wreck.

OTTAWA, April 7. Canadian Press. — A washout of a section of the roadbed of the Canadian Pacific Gatineau Line, following a landslide, near Tenega, Que., late yesterday afternoon, nearly caused a serious train wreck. Fortunately the engineer of the train saw the landslide in time to stop the train. Over one hundred pasengers were stalled for the night while many others walked a distance of two miles through the rain to the station at Chelsea, where they were picked up by a special relief train from Ottawa.

MAYOR TURNER'S MARBLES PROVE AN ATTRACTION

Pied Piper of Hamelin Outpiped By His Worship on Saturday — Market Square Was Crowded With Girls and Boys.

NEARLY 2,000 THERE.

If Mayor Turner had to depend on the children's vote to be re-elected times without number, he probably would be the city's Mayor in perpetuity. Instead of the magic flute of the Pied Piper of Hamelin, he wielded a more potent spell on Saturday afternoon when he broadcasted the magic words: Jacks and marbles to the children of Peterborough.

From two o'clock until long after three, the Market Square was flooded with the boys and girls of the city, under twelve years of age, who attended the Mayor's informal reception, with these simple instruments of play served out as the main item on the programme.

Forming a line which would undoubtedly have stretched for many blocks, they came in turn, little and big, from the tiny tots who wept in baby frightened fashion as their hands closed over the toys, to two big "boys" with white hair, who "walked the plank' 'for marbles, to the accompaniment of much cheering from the crowd.

Edwin Riddell was the first lad, leading the way for his hundreds of followers.

In a big wash boiler, the marbles were arrayed in all the colours of the rainbow, and the jacks, in neat little coloured bags of cotton and knitted thread, reposed in a big cardboard box.

One of the boys doing a Marathon for his second handful of marbles.

Over a plank the children came, in all sorts of attire, to plunge little hands in the big receptacles. The element of selfishness in human nature was apparent in many, thrusting both hands up to the elbow into the marbles, but the majority of the children meekly accepted gift and went on their way with a murmured "thank you."

In pockets that leaked and spilled the marbles over the ground, in the handkerchiefs and grimy little cupped hands, in the black gymnasium shoes that some of the girls carried under their arms, in purses and in stocking caps, held upside down, and in round hats, they carried away th spoil. One little lady went off, wearing her marbles literally on her head, under the round black hat that had been tilted carefully upside down after its freight had been placed inside.

Some of the boys preferred jacks,

Sadie Swift scampering after the jacks on Saturday.

and some of the girls wanted marbles, and some got both.

There were "repeaters" in the line, youngsters who came back for a second gift, and several enthusiastic kiddies did a thriving business in salvaging the remnants that spilled over from little hands.

Mayor Turner started out with a handshake for each child, but it was impossible to keep this up. The crowd lengthened and grew to such proportions that it kept the Mayor's helpers busy, with perspiring faces, keeping the youngsters in order.

Little girls with limps and small boys with sickly faces, tiny tots with broken shoes and clothing, and others in well-kept attire were in the line. And along with them were their parents, cheering as the children went by, and watching with interest the little things' enthusiasm.

The jacks gave out under the great patronage afforded the small bags, but the marbles stood the strain nobly.

A fresh supply was sent for at half-past three o'clock, making a total of about 30,000 in all.

A total of 1,619 children, under twelve years of age, took part in the big line-up on Saturday, with 874 boys and 745 girls.

After the jollification was over, Mr. J. Abraham, school attendance officer, who assisted, found a new belt and a rubber belonging to some of the children. These await an owner at The Examiner Office.

Repairs to the Sunday School of Methodist Church -- Boy Hurt--Personals.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 7.—A special meeting of the official board of the Methodist Church was called on Friday night in the Board-room. Rev. W. Elliott in the Chair. Fifteen members were present. A deputation of ladies from the Ladies' Aid waited on the Board for the purpose of consulting with them about repairing and re-arranging the Sunday School. After a lot of discussion and suggestions, a special committee was appointed to look after the matter and get an estimate of the cost and plans for the work, and bring a report to the Board later. The committee appointed were the property committee, composed of G. A. Payne, S. J. Abernethy and William Runnels, with the names of Dr. H. O. Richardson, J. L. Hoover, W. H. Ashton, and George Oliver added.

Merwin Malcolm, young son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Malcolm, Sebastapool Street, was hurt on Monday while playing at school, and the doctor, when examining him, found his neck to be out of joint and his spine to be affected. This, the doctor says, was caused by a previous fall at some time, and Merwin has to remain in bed for some time while undergoing treatment.

Soldiers Bonus Petition Read in Church Yesterday--A Band Concert

CAMPBELLFORD, April 7.—At the services in St. Andrew's Church yesterday Rev. C. F. McIntosh read a communication signed by A. Sutcliffe, Dominion Secretary treasurer of the Amputations' Association of the Great War asking for the co-operation of the churches to have the bonus now paid disabled or partially disabled veterans and war widows made a permanent part of their pensions. A schedule of the pensions and bonuses now paid for the different classes of disability was given in the circular.

Secretary Sutcliffe stated that a number of ministers had promised to call this matter to the attention of their congregations yesterday, the Sunday which is the nearest to the anniversary of the battle of Vimy Ridge, which was fought on April 7th, 1917.

The tablet in St. Andrew's Church which contains the names of the men of the congregation who lost their lives overseas, was decorated with a large wreath of poppies.

Sunday Night Concert

Another successful concert was given by the Northumberland Regimental Band in the Regent Theatre last night, the programme rendered being the same as that published last week. All the numbers with two exceptions, were new pieces of the highest standard, which the Band has purchased out of the proceeds of former concerts. As usual on such occasions the theatre was filled to capacity and the entertainment was thoroughly enjoyed. Major J. M. Bygott, commander of the local company of the regiment presided and thanked the audience for their attendance and Capt. Hyland for his generosity in making these concerts possible by giving the Band the use of the building free of charge.

There were two special features on the programme. Leslie Clegg, one of the youngest members of the Band both as to years and membership, who plays the saxaphone, appeared for the first time as a soloist and his performance was heartily encored. Competent musical critics predict a bright musical future for the young bandsman.

By special request Herb. Leonard rendered two vocal solos, one of them "Kathleen Mavourneen," the song by Thomas Moore and which has held its place as a first favorite since its first publication. Mr. Leonard's other selection was 'Ashore."

A. J. Wood, a former member of the Band but who for nearly a year has been residing at Young's Point, spent Sunday in town visiting friends and appeared among his old time musical comrades, as one of the bass.

AT THE REGENT.

Capt. Hyland has provided a real treat for the patrons of the Regent Theatre in securing one of the famous productions of the day, "Robin Hood," which will be shown Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, with a matinee Tuesday at 3 o'clock. Douglas Fairbanks will be seen in the role of the bandit chief.

Eight centuries have been brushed aside by the camera lens, and there will be shown Robin Hood and his merry crew who took from the rich to aid the poor; his love for sweet Maid Marian; Sherwood Forest and Nottingham Town; Friar Tuck and Little John with their staffs and cudgels—all etched out of the dim past and made to live again.

Towering battlements with turrets seeming to cut the sky; great castles of giant kings with their moats and draw bridges — drawn across the span of 800 years and set before eyes of to-day! The great Fairbanks as bandit chief—yet supreme in the role of romantic lover!

This production has been shown in all the large cities at 75 cents to $1.50 admission, but the theatregoers of Campbellford will be given a chance to see it at the usual rates. The Regent is the only theatre in Canada showing these high-class productions at regular prices.

The bill for the last three nights of the week with Saturday matinee, is "Loyal Livss," a story of heroism in the mail service, especially timely now in view of the dispute between the postal employees and the Department.

C. N. R. Engineer Killed, Engine Jumped Rails.

ARMSTRONG, Ont., April 7. — (Canadian Press).—Engineer James Hand was killed and Fireman Johnson was slightly shaken up Saturday forenoon when a Canadian National locomotive pulling an extra freight train left the tracks near here and overturned. The engine crew was from Hornepayne, the divisional point for this district. It is believed that the accident was caused by a broken rail. Mr. Hand died almost instantly. First aid was rendered Johnson by the train crew and a doctor was sent down from Nakina. There was no delay caused to passenger trains.

THE C.G.E. BYLAW.

The Executive of the Chamber of Commerce, composed of representative business men, has unhesitatingly approved of the bylaw to extend the present fixed assessment of the C.G.E. for three more years, in view of the fact that the manufacturing facilities of the local plant are to be enlarged by the erection of a new building providing 50,000 square feet of floor space.

"We . . . desire to be placed on record as heartily supporting the above-mentioned bylaw and strongly recommend the approval of this bylaw by the electorate in a decisive manner on April 23rd," reads the resolution, which goes on to pledge the active support of the organization in securing "an overwhelming majority of votes in favour of the bylaw.

Similar endorsation of the measure has been given by the Executive of the Great War Veterans' Association, and there is no doubt that the resolutions of these organizations represent public opinion accurately.

At the same time too much should not be taken for granted, and it will give satisfaction therefore to know that the Chamber of Commerce and other organizations are preparing to get the vote out.

The measure should be carried by a majority that will leave no doubt of the kindly feeling of the people towards an industry that has played so important a part in building up this city.

WHERE THE SHOE PINCHES.

Figures as to the importations of worsteds and serges into Canada during the month of February furnish a sufficient reason for the fact that Canadian manufacturers of these goods are operating their plants with reduced staffs, many of them working only part time.

The Canadian Woollen Manufacturers' Association declares that the import figures for that month show the largest importations of worsteds and serges from abroad in four years, and quotes the following statistics in yards:

1921—From all countries, 382,445; from Great Britain only, 298,638; from France only, 10,449.

1922—From all countries, 593,999; from Great Britain only, 525,455; from France only, 34,126.

1923—From all countries, 730,039; from Great Britain only, 699,737; from France only, 16,715.

1924—From all countries, 891,770; from Great Britain only, 794,525; from France only, 80,188.

The growth in these importations is striking, and the jump in the volume of French worsteds and serges brought into Canada is particularly noticeable as it shows the effect of the French treaty which came into force last September.

With importations nearly two and a half times as large as they were four years ago, it is no wonder Canadian woollen manufacturers are feeling the pressure to a degree that is rapidly adding to the unemployment in the country—it being unnecessary to go out of Peterborough to verify that statement.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

The fact that the Chamber of Commerce has been forced at last to charge a small fee for the use of its quarters for meeting purposes by organizations other than those engaged in purely charitable work should occasion no surprise.

The only wonder is that it has been able to supply this accommodation without charge for the past five years, in view of the expense involved in heating and lighting the rooms and in the necessary cleaning up after these gatherings.

Over 300 meetings were held in the Chamber of Commerce last year, and although several organizations made a voluntary contribution to the chamber's funds as a mark of appreciation of the service rendered, the majority of those using the rooms last year paid nothing for the accommodation.

Few organizations will object to paying a nominal fee, sufficient to cover the expenses of keeping the quarters open at night.

The rooms are central and offer admirable accommodation for the average meeting, and it is too much to expect that the Chamber of Commerce, anxious as it is to be of community service, should continue indefinitely to carry the whole expense of furnishing a gathering point for other organizations.

The majority of societies and clubs will doubtless take that view of the matter and be glad to contribute their share toward meeting the overhead.

SIR GEORGE FOSTER'S VISIT.

The citizens of Peterborough are to have an opportunity on Wednesday of hearing the aims and objects of the League of Nations explained by a speaker who is one of the few people on this side of the Atlantic to delve into the innermost workings of the organization or to understand the European situation thoroughly.

The fact that he is also one of the most eloquent of Canadians makes the visit of Sir George E. Foster to Peterborough one of great interest.

The veteran statesman, who could not bore an audience if he tried, no matter what subject he chose to discuss, is always worth listening to, and on this occasion he will talk about something on which all Canadian people as a whole need enlightenment.

To most Peterborough people the League of Nations is but a name, just a collection of words handed down from the war.

They have but a hazy idea of the composition of the league, of its ideals and of how some of those ideals have been transformed into actualities.

Sir George Foster is in a position to tell them these things—no one in Canada could do it better—and with his eloquence and logic he should make his address on the League of Nations on Wednesday a most fascinating exposition of a subject about which there is far from sufficient general knowledge.

A capacity audience should greet the venerable Senator and statesman.

THE AUSTRALIAN VIEW.

When Mr. Hughes of Australia speaks, he generally says something the world finds interesting, says the Montreal Star. He is a quick thinker, and he has no illusions left. Moreover, he is an ardent champion of patriotism, which he holds to be the highest loyalty. But Mr. Hughes has fought too many strenuous political battles to waste time on intangible ideals. He sees with a single eye his country's needs, and he has come to a definite decision as to the methods by which those needs may best be met. In his address delivered in New York yesterday the ex-Premier of Australia came out flat-footed in favor of an Anglo-American entente in preference to the League of Nations as a guarantee of world-peace. The latter body does not intrigue him as a power capable of swaying the world in time of great emergency. He has seen the League's policy of world racial equality defeated, and he feels that the League, with the United States outside, is largely a body of impracticable idealists.

There is more than the old vision of Anglo-Saxon unity behind Mr. Hughes' preference, however. His country occupies a unique position in that, although it is an integral portion of the British Empire, it is surrounded on two sides by alien races, with the waters of the Pacific stretching away to the Pole on the South and the western seaboard of the United States as its nearest link with white men. If there were an Anglo-American entente, the safety of Australia from any form of alien aggression would be automatically assured, and the menace that has loomed large in the eyes of all Australian statesmen for a century would be reduced to a mere political principle to be watched but no longer feared. It is his realization, undoubtedly, that prompts Mr. Hughes to declare himself so fervently in favor of "a declaration of intentions" between Britain and the States.

IT IS TIME TO ACT.

That Canadians from coast to coast are gradually awaking to a realization that public health measures are primarily a national concern and that money invested in them represents, not a liability but an asset, is evidenced by the nation-wide agitation now going on because of the proposal to cut Federal public health grants to the Province.

The current issue of the Public Health Journal says editorially:

"It has been rumored for some time that the Dominion Government contemplates the curtailment or elimination of the grant given to the Provinces by the Dominion Government annually for control of venereal diseases. As the Journal goes to press word comes that $50,000 of the total amount of $200,000 has been cut from the grant this year.

"Venereal diseases constitute the most serious of all public health problems, and the co-operative scheme initiated by the Dominion Government has proved an admirable demonstration of the fact that the Provinces can work together towards the solution of public health problems. By virtue of this grant and the grants made by the Provinces for the same purpose a joint campaign has developed which has meant that thousands of cases of gonorrhoea and syphilis in all parts of Canada have been brought under treatment, and that a definite step has been made towards a full recognition of health as a national problem.

"At this time, probably more interest has been aroused than at any time during the period over which the grant has been paid. Hospitals have awakened to the fact that special facilities must be provided for the treatment of these diseases, and in some cases elaborate preparations have been made to carry on efficiently in the future. The people, too, have begun to realize that educational work of a new type is necessary, and on the whole public health workers feel that the Social Hygiene campaign is on the verge of real success.

"Unquestionably to curtail the work now will have serious results. In addition, it is well to remember that the venereal disease grant constitutes a quarter of the entire budget of the Dominion Department of Health. To cut he Dominion health expenditures by twenty-five per cent, now would appear to be a retrograde step. It is to be hoped that the Dominion Government will consider carefully before taking radical action, and that in the meantime every organization and individual interested in the progress of public health in Canada will protest against the letting up of health activities at this time."

The Toronto Daily Star of recent date says: "If economy (at Ottawa) is necessary, well and good. If Government expenditures have been too great, expenses should be cut. But the Government should remember that the day and age demand that human capital be recognized as a function of government. Surely there should be given very serious thought to the subject before the estimates of this junior but tremendously important Department of Health are tampered with."

The St. John Globe, in dealing with the matter of the grant, says: "The Government took action (about health) because the need was so obvious, and because the interests of public health called for national effort. We have got beyond the stage when the names of certain diseases are whispered with bated breath, because we have learned how deadly is their nature and how they reach out to strike even the helpless and innocent. Hospital records and the testimony of physicians show to what an alarming extent they have been sapping the health of the community. The sum of $200,000 is not too much for the Dominion to invest in the great work of eradicating a plague, and the Provinces need the encouragement and co-operation of the Federal department."

La Patrie, the Montreal Gazette and other papers have also expressed themselves editorially as opposed to any curtailment of the now established methods and machinery for dealing with venereal disease control and deplore any cutting of the grants in the interests of national economy.

In addition to much editorial comment of this kind, many protests of a very vigorous kind have been sent to Ottawa from every Provincial Government in Canada receiving the Federal grant for venereal disease control, and many public bodies have registered well-founded objections to the proposed curtailment of Social Hygiene activities throughout the country.

Some of the hospitals and organizations which have already sent strong representations to Ottawa regarding the cut in public health grants are the Ontario Medical Society, Ontario Hospital Association, Fort William and Port Arthur Boards of Health, Montreal, Kingston, Toronto and Hamilton General Hospitals, Montreal and Toronto Local Councils through the National Council of Women, Canadian Red Cross, Victorian Order of Nurses, St. Michael's and Women's College and Western Hospitals, Toronto, all of which only goes to show that large numbers of Canadians are acting on the belief that public health measures are of prime importance and that now is the time to act.

U. F. Y. P. O. Completed Successful Play — Sap Running Freely.

BAILIEBORO, April 7.—The members of the South Monaghan U. F. Y. P. O. Club who took part in the play which was recently produced by this club, held a banquet and social evening in their club room at Centreville on Wednesday evening last.

A delightful supper was served, to which everyone present did full justice, and at the conclusion several toasts were proposed.

The President, Douglas Deyell, proposed a toast to the King. Rev. A. H. McConnachie mae a very appropriate reply. Then followed a toast to the organization, and Harold Bebee made a suitable reply. Mr. Willard Waterman then proposed a toast to the President of the organization, and Harry Campbell replied, stating in his reply that the members of this club could give the credit of their President for the wonderful success that their club has proved to be. A toast, proposed to the ladies who so kindly helped along with training the characters for the play and helping out in general, was replied to in a suitable manner by Harold Dawson. Miss Charlotte Barnard and Dawson Rutherford also spoke briefly with regard to the play.

The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing, and everyone enjoyed the excellent music. Those who assisted in providing the music were Mrs. Jas. Hutchison, Misses C. Barnard and K. Isbister and Wilfred Johnston.

Sap Again Flowing Freely.

NO "TAG DAYS" FOR COLLEGES.

When They Need Money They Usually Call Lustily For Contributions From the Outsiders.

When colleges need money, they usually call lustily for contributions from outsiders. A remarkable genius must have charge of Antioch College at Yellow Springs, Ohio. This school has the purpose of making itself self-supporting—paying its own way.

Antioch's latest addition to its co-operative system, of providing work for the needy students, will be a shoe factory on the campus. This factory will enable students to work their way through college.

Also the factory will be a practical university of business. Student-workers will learn production, management, salesmanship.

The ultimate ambition of the average institution of higher learning seems to be to have as many monumental buildings as students. Much outside aid naturally is required.

It might be better to spend the money on the students' education and do the teaching in barracks like the army training camps. After all, a college is a knowledge factory. As in all other production systems, the thing that counts most is the product rather than the place where it is made.

The Athenians developed "pure intellectualism" to a higher degree than ever before or since Socrates and his satellites and brother-planets exchanged ideas and educated the young. They did it outdoors in public—didn't think they needed a million-dollar building.

We are not opposed to fine college and university buildings. Decidedly not. But the system is out of balance, when the ambitious poor student cannot afford a college course unless he goes in debt or waits on table or sells books in spare time. The millions that are theoretically contributed to help him reach him only feebly and indirectly.

Colleges, fortunately, are awakening to the need of providing work for students who haven't enough money to pay expenses.

The goal of every college should be sufficient fine buildings for instruction and a comprehensive system of factories of farms for helping the worthy student earn enough to pay his way. That's all those students want—the opportunity to help themselves.

LABOR HEADS AT ADELAIDE

South Australian State Elections Saturday Indicate Small Majority Over Liberals and Country Party — Color Question An Issue.

ADELAIDE, Australia, April 6. —(Canadian Press Cable via Reuters.)—Returns of the South Australian State elections held on Saturday, are still incomplete, but the results of the count to date shows that the Labor party has obtained 26 seats in an assembly of 46, while the Liberals have secured 18 seats and the country party 2 seats. The counting of the country vote however is expected to alter this standing.

When interviewed Saturday Premier H. H. Barwell said it was possible that the Labor party would have a majority of one or two over the other parties combined.

The chief plank in the Labor platform was a "white Australia," a matter in which they took direct issue with the Liberal premier, Sir Henry Barwell, who favored the introduction of colored labor in the northern section of the state. Although this is a federal matter Barwell was outspoken in his contention that the tropical belt of the state could not be developed except by colored labor and he thus made the color question an issue in the state. Other Labor policies were the abolition of the Upper House and the reduction of the membership of the lower chamber from 46 to 35. The party also advocated a graduated tax on unimproved lands, proportional representation, cessation of the alienation of Crown lands, and motherhood endowment. Labor also supported the demand of the temperance party for a referendum while the government opposed this as a threat to the wine industry. Labor was expected to benefit in this election also by a split in the Liberal ranks.

TOWNSHIP SUED

cause no notice had been given her and she knew nothing about it.

Mr. Squires, father of the defendant, testified that the latter had never moved her residence from the parental home.

The Arguments.

Mr. Payne cited a number of authorities to show that a person's residence was where his or her duties are. He claimed that the Seymour Assessor had no alternative but to put Miss Squires on the roll, as she had a contract for a year at $1,000, and under the Act was liable to a tax on $200 of this amount. The fact that she voted in Seymour, he argued, established her residence in that township.

Mr. Wearing maintained that the action was based on two wrong grounds. The township had no right to assess Miss Squires at all as she had not earned an assessible amount—a sum in excess of $800—in 1922, the year the tax was levied. Her residence, he added, was in Peterborough, not Seymour. He cited a number of authorities which Judge Huycke took into consideration.

There are hundreds of teachers in Ontario in the same position as that of Miss Squires, and for that reason the decision to be given by Judge Huycke is of wide interest.

NO HOPE HELD FOR CLOSE OF SESSION.

Thirty-Two Private Bills Still to Be Dealt With — Important Investigations Under Way.

TORONTO, April 7. — Canadian Press. — With thirty-two private bills still to be dealt with, the public accounts committee in the midst of tremendously important investigations, and several Government bills on the order paper for the second reading, all hope has been abandoned at the parliament buildings for prorogation the coming week-end There is no assurance that the legislature will rise even the following week.

During the present week the committees wil continue to outweigh the Legisalture itself in the matter of importance and interest.

Church union is still before the private bills committee, and some morning during the week the committeemen will resume discussion upon it. Public accounts of course will continue its inquiry and Provincial Treasurer Price stated last night that he hoped to be able to hold three sittings commencing on Monday night.

Rarely, if ever, has an Ontario Provincial Treasurer been called to such labors as have been imposed upon Hon. Mr. Price this session.

Public accounts hopes to dispose of the Home Bank end of their investigations in one or two meetings this week, and then return to the bond transactions. And maybe after that is all over the government investigators will have found other matters arising out of the general audit that it is proceeding to bring before the committee.

FORT WILLIAM'S GRAIN

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., April 7. —Increase in stocks in store at the head of the lakes was less last week than for some weeks past, less than half a million bushels being added to the stocks of all grains, with shipments of over half a million, oats being the predominating grain the movements both ways. A good deal more barley was taken into store than was shipped out and rye again showed least movement, none having gone out this week.

EXPERTS RUSH SUNDAY WORK

Are Unanimous on Report But May Not Be Delivered to Reparations Commission Until Thursday.

PARIS, April 7. — Sunday was just another "working day" for the members of the committee of experts headed by Brigadier General Charles G. Dawes, the report of which on Germany's economic and financial situation is on the eve of being made public.

The date of the release of the report to the public still is problematical. In optimistic official circles, Tuesday morning was given as the probable time for the submission of the report to the reparations commission for which it was formulated. One of the members of the Dawes Committee however when asked regarding the report said: "If I were a gambling man I would bet on Thursday as the time for its release."

The postponements in the delivery of the report to the reparation commission during the past week proved a source of much speculation. It was openly stated that insurmountable differences had arisen between the British and the United States experts. The Associated Press, however, was authorized last night to say:

The Dawes committee report is complete, and has been agreed upon in principle between all the experts."

The spokesman added, seemingly with a touch of melanacholy, "We must be greater experts on finances than linguists."

The drafting sub-committee began a session at 9 o'clock last evening and decided to sit until this morning if necessary in order to be ready for the plenary session of the Dawes Committee at 10 o'clock this morning.

It was officialy announced by the Reparation Commission last night that "if the work was not completed Monday during the forenoon official delivery of the report to the commission may be postponed until Wednesday."

NEWS FROM CAVAN

CAVAN, April 7.—Mrs. Harry Tinney entertained the Ladies Aid of Cavan Methodist Church on Thursday afternoon. There were sixteen member and three visitors present. The President, Mrs. R. Matchett conducted the meeting. Mrs. T. A. Squires read the Scripture lesson. Mrs. R. T. Richards gave a humorous reading.

After the usual business routine, it being the annual meeting, the meeting was declared open for the election of officers.

It was moved by Mrs. F. M. Staples and seconded by Miss F. Hunter, that this be dispensed with and the old officers be re-appointed for another year. There was no amendment and the motion carried.

The following are the officers:

President—Mrs. R. Matchett.

1st Vice-President—Mrs. F. M. Staples.

2nd Vice-President — Mrs. J. Swain.

Secretary—Mrs. A. Kennedy.

Assistant Secretary—Mrs. A. Byers.

Treasurer—Mrs. Jas. Douglas.

Organist—Miss A. Tinney.

There were three new members' names added for the coming year.

It was decided to devote fifty dollars from the funds of the Aid to the Church Trustee Board to assist in defraying the expenses of the new lighting system.

A delightful lunch was served by Mrs. Tinney and a social time enjoyed.

Mrs. A. Kennedy was able to be present at the meeting, although her hand is still quite painful and not yet healed.

The members were pleased to welcome Mrs. Brown to the meeting, and also as a member of the Aid. Mrs. Brown, with her husband, Mr. Brown, the new C. P. R. station agent, have very recently become residents of Cavan.

There will be no meeting of the Aid during the month of May. Mrs. A. Elliott has extended an invitation for the June meeting to be held at her home.

RUM-RUNNERS ARE INFESTING LONDON

Limehouse Slums Foster Bootleggers.

LONDON, April 5. — Limehouse, the famous underworld center of England, is now infested with gangs of bootleggers whose business is to keep supplies of liquor passing through the city on their way to the United States and other nations given over to prohibition.

This waterfront section seems to have become the center of bootlegging over night, and the headquarters of the gangs once established in the Bahamas, as well as others which worked out of Scotland and from vantage points along the coasts of Norway and Finland.

Every week, it is said, thousands of gallons of liquor are handled by these men, and their ships are busy passing up and down the Thames. They work with a certain amount of stealth and cunning which keeps them within the law. Their methods do not appear to arouse unusual interest, and they are left more or less to themselves.

One of the newcomers to "Rum-runners' Row," says a leading London newspaper, who has shifted from the Bahamas, is a mysterious "Captain Candid," formerly a ship-broker. He is said to have an extensive organization, to own several ships, and to have established his headquarters in one of the public-houses of Limehouse.

It is related that American prohibition agents have attempted to invade his headquarters, but never been able to get beyond the outer bar

It is almost impossible to keep an accurate record of the liquor shipped in and out of London every week. An estimate places the amount at about 600,000 gallons. However, most of the liquor which is said to find its way into the bootleggers' hands is handled originally by the confederate firms.

The reason for the selection of London as headquarters by these bootleggers is said to be that the new liquor treaty between the United States and England makes the Bahamas rather dangerous. Soon after their appearance here the bootleggers were hounded by a small army of prohibition sleuths, but so far their work seems to be ineffective. Their difficulties are great, for there are about 7,000 firms in England interested in liquor shipments and wholesale selling.

MACDONALD AND WHEATLEY MEET

Discuss Amendments to Eviction Bill Designed to Secure Liberal Support—May Produce Another Crisis.

LONDON, April 7. —(Canadian Press Cable).—John Wheatley, minister of health was unexpectedly recalled from Glasgow to confer with Premier MacDonald and other ministers last night on the subject of today's amendment to the evictions bill, which the government found it necessary to alter in order to get liberal support and avoid defeat. The amendment now proposed, it is reported may produce another critical situation for the ministry.

Mr. Wheatley's parliamentary secretary, Arthur Greenwood, in a somewhat nave speech in London Sunday confessed that "we have made mistakes and we will likely make many more. We were a body of inexperienced people and we had to learn our work. . . . . My department has been more often in the soup than any other simply because it is a department that is beyond the capacity of any man to understand and control."

William Graham, financial secretary to the treasury, in a speech at Fulham Saturday night remarked that during the next one or two years the government would have to submit to defeat and humiliation of different kinds but they would put up with that proudly if they could carry urgent measures of social redress.

LARGE HOUSES ARE OFFERED FOR SALE

But Marmora Residents Find Difficulty in Obtaining Small Homes.

MARMORA, April 5. — There is a tendency apparently among the owners of the larger houses in the village to sell their property. The market for large houses is very poor, and on the other hand there is a scarcity of small houses for renting. Evidently there will soon be a change of householders, as many are moving this spring. In the country, also, spring activity is shown by the fact that Mr. S. J. Fisher, auctioneer, of Belleville, has had two farm sales in the vicinity last week and another will be held in the near future.

The stores have re-commenced staying open three nights a week, making the town seem much more brighter than before.

Mr. A. T. Neal has had his large touring car, which was badly damaged by fire last fall, repaired, and it is now used as a truck.

Messrs. Gordon McWilliams and Charles Auger visited Campbellford on Thursday.

Mr. Warren Hickey, who recently underwent an operation on his leg, is able to be around again, but will not be able to use his artificial limb for some time.

Messrs. George Forestell and James Meraw were in Toronto on Wednesday.

Mr. Frank Smith, Madoc, was a visitor to town on Wednesday.

Mr. Carman Kennedy has returned home after a visit in Oshawa and Lindsay.

U.S. POPULATION OF 200 MILLION

Estimate of Inhabitants Fifty Years Hence Made By Congressman Advocating Curtailment of Foreign Immigration.

WASHINGTON, April 7. — Declaring that even without immigration the population of the United States will be 200,000,000 in fifty years, Representative Johnson, Washington, chairman of the house immigration committee, Saturday called on the house to pass the new immigration bill which came up for debate to-day, "as much a conservation measure as any dealing with natural resources."

There are 600,000 Russians, 300,000 Italians and 70,000 Poles who have already applied for passports and are endeavoring to reach the United States, he declared.

"It has become necessary that the United States cease to be an asylum," he said.

Johnson told the house that supplementary bills were being prepared to create a border patrol to enforce immigration, a customs, health, liquor, narcotic and other laws which will put an end to surreptitious immigration through Mexico and Canada.

He denied that the Japanese exclusion feature of the bill violated Japan's treaty rights.

"I think that Japan's real trouble is that she sees that she must give up the hope of colonzing her surplus population in the United States," he said.

BANISHED FOR 400 YEARS.

PARIS, April 7 (Canadian Press) —Elizabeth Dubois won't come to France again for a very long time. She has been banished for 400 years. Elizabeth has been convicted many times for theft, attacks on Government agents, and other crimes.

Various tribunals passed sentence on her, and many stipulated banishment for periods of years. She finally made her way back and was arrested here.

She was banished for twenty years more, which, added to the other sentences, totals 400 years.

Elizabeth is now 44 years old.

EVOLUTION OF MODERN MEDICINE

(By DR. T. N. GREER)

In the early spring of each year the Peterboro Medical Society holds one meeting, at which is given, by one of the members, what is known as "The Halliday Memorial Lecture" on some subject of special interest.

At a recent meeting, this lecture for 1923-4 was delivered before a large representation of the Society by Dr. T. N. Greer. The subject was "The Evolution of Modern Medicine," and was presented in a very concise, scholarly and most interesting manner, showing an intimate knowledge of the healing art from the earliest beginning of which any record is obtainable, down to the most recent developments in modern medical and surgical science.

As this is of considerable interest to the layman as well as the practitioner, Dr. Greer's lecture is given as presented to the Medical Society.

EVOLUTION OF MODERN MEDICINE.

A comprehensive survey of the history of medicine from its crude beginnings down to the present time would be quite impossible in the short time at my disposal to-night, but even a mere outline of the devious course of medical thought and practice down through the ages ought to be interesting and even profitable as a reminder of the magnitude of the debt we own to the great men of the past, who, in the face of untold trials and difficulties, kept the torch of science alight, and passed it on from generation to generation, at time but a glimmer in the darkness, but still kept burning till the dawn which ushered in the full light of day.

Medicine arose out of the primal sympathy of man with man—out of the desire to help those in sorrow, need and sickness.

There has been no society so primative, without some evidence of the healing art, which grew with its growth, and became part of the fabric of its organization. There is evidence that trepanning was practiced by primative men. Neolithic skulls, with disks of bone removed, have been found in nearly all parts of the world. The practice is still extant, and the operation was done for epilepsy, infantile convulsions, headache and various cerebral diseases supposed to be caused by confined demons, and the hole was made for these to escape.

From oblivion, man emerges in history in a highly civilized state in Egypt, and it is of interest to us to know that one of the best known of the names of this earliest period was that of a physician, who was guide, philosopher and friend of the king. His name was Imhotep, who left so notable a reputation in priestly wisdom, in magic, wise proverbs, medicine, and architecture, that his name was never forgotten, and 2500 years after his death he had become the "God of Medicine." For centuries the priest and the physician were identified. Medicine and religion went hand in hand. Disease was believed to be due to the influence of a god, or a spirit, or the soul of a dead man that has entered the living person, and the treatment consisted in the discovery of the nature of the spirit, and then by means of a powerful magic, reciting incantations, and using amulets and various charms, etc., driving it out, or even destroying it, and then, by means of drugs and diet, to contend with the disorders produced by the evil spirit. Experience brought much of the wisdom we call empirical, and the records extending over thousands of years, show that the Egyptians employed emetics, purgatives, diuretics, diaphoretics and even bleeding. Their medicines were derived from the animal, vegetable and mineral kingdoms. Hygiene reached a high degree of development; cleanliness of dwellings, of cities and of the person was regulated by law. Of the remedies procured from the animal kingdom, saliva, urine, feces, various parts of the body, dried and powdered worms, insects and snakes, were important ingredients in the pharmacopoea. Their use was prevalent throughout the Middle Ages. "The Royal Pharmacopoea" (London ed., 1687) is full of organotherapy and directions for the preparation of medicines from the the most loathsome excretions. Powdered mummies was considered very efficacious in various maladies. Assyrian and Babylonian medicine reached a higher stage than in Egypt. Here, too, disease was due to evil spirits or demons. These demons were the precursors of the modern germs or microbes, and the incantations recited by the priests are the early equivalents of the physicians' prescriptions of to-day. There were different incantations for different diseases, and they were as mysterious to the masses as are the mystic formulas of the modern physician to the bewildered yet trusting patient.

The art of divination—the study of the future by the interpretation of certain signs—was practiced much in Babylonia, and spread widely among the neighbouring nations. Our first recorded observations in anatomy are in connection with this art of divination, one division of which sought for signs through the inspection of sacrificial animals. The liver, being the largest organ and richest in blood, was considered the most important organ in the body, and the seat of life, and was for centuries used for divination purposes. The organ of the sheep was studied as early as 3000 B.C. It was believed also that the stars in their courses fought for or against men, and it was the function of the priest, as well as being inspector of the liver, as astrologer, to discover the purpose of the stars. The casting of horoscopes and reading in the stars the fate of the individual continued to take a more or less prominent role until the Renaissance.

As early as 2000 B.C., the medical profession in Babylonia seems to have been in a highly organized state. Practice was regulated in detail; they had a scale of fees, and penalties were exacted for malpractice. In Egypt and Babylonia the physician evolved from the priest. In Greece he had a dual origin, philosophy and religion. From nature philosophers came many of the doctrines which influenced medical thought for centuries. Such as Air being the primary principle. Then the theory of the four elements—fire, air, earth and water—of which all bodies in varying proportions were made up, and health and disease depended on the equilibrium or disturbance of these. These elements had four essential qualities—heat, cold, moisture and dryness; upon this was engrafted the doctrine of the humors, which from the days of Hippocrates almost to our own time, dominated medicine. There were four humors, viz., blood, phlegm, yellow bile (choler) and black bile (melancholy).

The foundations of the Greek medicine is associated with the name of Hippocrates, the father of medicine. A note of humanity eminates from all his writing. His aim was to make men better—to make life a better thing. The high water mark of professional morality is reached in the famous Hippocratic oath. In Greek medicine, they went directly to the heart of the matter. Out of mysticism, superstition and religious ritual, the Greek went directly to nature, and was the first to grasp the connection of medicine as an art, based on accurate observation and an integral part of the science of Man. Empiricism, experience, the collection of facts, the evidence of the senses and the avoidance of philosophical speculations, were the distinguishing characteristics of Hippocratic medicine. Hippocrates died about 375 B.C., and no great progress in medicine was made till 75 years afterwards, when the first medical school of anitquity was established in Alexandria about 300 B.C., with extensive laboratories, libraries and clinics. Here, for the first time, the study of the structure of the human body reached its full development, till then barred everywhere by religious prejudice. The greatest name in Greek medicine, after Hippocrates, is that of Galen, who was born at Pergamos in 130 A.D, in whom was united as never before, and perhaps never since, the treble combination of observer, experimenter and philosopher. Galen studied in the best medical schools, including Alexandria, but the scene of his greatest labors was Rome. His greatest work was in anatomy and physiology. He was within an ace of discovering the circulation of the blood. He showed by experiment that the arteries contain blood and not air, as was formerly believed, and which gave arteries their name. He travelled much, was a voluminous writer, though a busy and high-priced practitioner, passed a long and energetic life, dying about 200 A.D.

For fifteen centuries he dominated medical thought. Not until the Renaissance did daring spirits begin to question the infallibility of this medical Pope; still, if he could visit us to-day, he might teach us many lessons, especially in sanitation. He would smile in scorn at the water supply in some of our towns and cities, thinking of the magnificent aqueducts of Rome and the wonderful system by which that city was kept sweet and clean.

We enter the Middle Ages trembling with a sense of human instability. Following the glory of Greece and the grandeur of Rome, a desolation came upon the civilized world in which the light of learning burned low, flickering almost to extinction, for three causes. First, the barbarians shattered the Roman Empire to its foundations. The land which was a Garden of Eden before became a howling wilderness. Many of the most important centres of learning were destroyed. Another equally important cause was the change wrought by Christianity. The brotherhood of man, the gospel of the practical virtues formed the essence of the teaching. For this attitude of mind, the wisdom of the Greeks was not only foolishness, but a stumbling-block in the path to righteousness, knowledge other than that which made a man "wise unto Salvation," was useless. This simple creed brought consolation to thousands, and illumined the lives of some of the noblest of men. But "in seeking a heavenly home man lost his bearings upon earth."

In this unfavourable medium for its growth, science was simply disregarded, not in any hostile spirit, but as unnecessary. A third contributory cause was the plague of the sixth century, which devastated the whole of the Roman world. Galen died about 200 A.D., and the high watermark of the Reniasance, as far as medicine is concerned, was reached in 1542. After flowing for 1000 years through the broad plain of Greek civilization, the stream of scientific medicine was apparently lost in the morass of the Middle Ages. But three channels may be followed through the weed beds of theological and philosophical speculation. The first was the South Italian School, where antique education never passed away. About thirty miles south of Naples, lay Salernum, which, for centuries, kept alight the lamp of learning and became the centre of medical studies in the Middle Ages.

The second stream, which carried Greek medicine to modern days, runs through the Eastern Empire; and Byzantian physicians, whose inspiration was largely derived from old Greek sources, chiefly Galen and Hippocrates, contributed to ancient medical literature.

The third, and largest, stream reached the West when the Arabs swept through the Eastern Empire, over Egypt, North Africa, and Spain. Greek words, especially those of Galen, were translated into Arabic, and before the end of the ninth century, the Arabs were in possession of all the science of the Greeks.

Then came the rise of the universities. The universities have a special interest at this period in connection with development of, medical studies—Bologna and Montpellier. One point of interest in connection with the study of medicine at Bologna, I may mention, is the fact that the first modern student and teacher of anatomy was Mundinus, professor of anatomy in that institution from 1305 to 1326. Bodies of executed criminals were used for dissection, and sometimes, when short of material, body snatching was resorted to. In 1316 Mundinus issued his work on anatomy which served as a text-book for over 200 years.

The date of the origin of the University of Montpellier is uncertain but there were teachers of medicine there in the twelfth century; of these the most noted were Arnold de Villanova, Henri de Mondeville, and Guy de Chanliac. Arnold de Villanova was a prolific writer, deeply versed in Arabic medicine and a strong advocate of diet and hygiene. Henni de Mondeville was a typical surgeon, and wrote a work on anatomy and another on surgery. A still greater name in the history of this school, is Guy de Chanliac, whose work on surgery was one of the most important text-books.

Another important name of this period is that of Roger Baron, a Francisan monk, born in England in 1214 and died in 1294. He is interesting from a medical point of view from the fact that more than any other man of his time, he gave an impetus to experimental science, and was one of the first to point the way to original research, as opposed to the acceptance of an authority.

The revival of learning in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries awakened in men at first a suspicion, and at last a conviction, that the ancients had left something that could be reached by independent research, and gradually the torpor of the Middle Ages passed away.

The sixteenth and seventeenth centuries did three things in medicine—shattered authority, laid the foundations of an accurate knowledge of the structure of the human body, and demonstrated how its functions should be studied intelligently, and with these advances may be associated especially the names of Paracelsus, Vesalius, and Harvey. Paracelsus roused men against the dogmatism of the schools, and greatly stimulated the practice and study of chemistry. At a period when authority was paramount and men blindly followed old leaders, he stood out boldly for independent study and the right of private judgment.

Andreas Vesalius, the great anatomist, was born in Brussels in 1514, educated at Louvain and Paris, but owing to French restriction, he went to Italy, where he had greater freedom in his studies and golden opportunities for research in anatomy. The task he set himself was to give an accurate description of all the parts of the human body with proper illustrations. This he did, and after five years of incessant labor his MS. was ready, and in 1543 was printed, with the title "De Humani Corporis Fabrica," which may justly be judged one of the great books of the world.

He was a teacher of anatomy for five years at Padua, and with him disappeared the old didactic method of teaching anatomy. He did his own dissections and made his own preparations, and when human subjects were scarce he employed cats, pigs, dogs, and even monkeys.

The closing years of the life of this brilliant man were tragic. He gave up teaching, became Court physician to Charles V. and Philip II., was accused of heresy and condemned to death by the Inquisition, but was saved by the intervention of the King and sent on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land. In carrying this out he was wrecked in the Island of Zante in 1564, dying of fever or exhaustion at the age of fifty. Vesalius was not an experimental physiologist, he simply accepted the theories of the old leaders.

It remained for an Englishman—William Harvey—to revolutionize physiology by the discovery of the circulation of the blood. He studied anatomy in Padua, under Fabricius, a successor to Vesalius, and no doubt the discovery of valves in the veins, gave birth to the idea that the blood moved in a circle, which he finally, by experimental method, demonstrated most conclusively.

The middle of the seventeenth century saw the profession thus far on its way. Certain objective features of disease were known, the art of careful observation had been cultivated; many empirical remedies had been discovered; the courser structure of man's body had been worked out, and a good beginning had been made in the knowledge of how the machinery worked—nothing more. What disease really was, where it was, how it was caused, had not even begun to be discussed intelligently. An empirical discovery of the first importance marks the middle of the century. Cinchona was the first great specific in disease to be discovered, so named after the Spanish Countess of Chinchon, who was cured of an intermittent fever in Lima Peru by the bark of a certain tree, given in powder form. Those of us who have had any experience with malaria will appreciate the value of that discovery. Time will not permit the mention of the vast number of brainy men who contributed to the development of modern medicine, but I must refer to a few of the outstanding figures who paved the way towards the present high position of the science.

To know accurately the anatomical changes that take place in disease is of importance, both for diagnosis and treatment, and the man who taught the necessity for thinking anatomically was Morgagni, a professor of medicine at Padua, whose great work, immortalized his name, was published in his 80th year, and contained the clinical and anatomical observations of this able physician during a long and active life. He laid the solid foundation on which the morbid anatomy of modern clinical medicine is built. A model of the same sort arose in England in the middle of the seventeenth centruy. Thomas Sydenham (1624 to 1689), who took men back to Hippocrates, just as Harvey took them back to Galen. Sydenham broke with authority and went to nature. He laid down the fundamental proposition, and acted on it, that "all diseases could be described as natural history."

The man who combined the qualities of Vesalius, Harvey and Morgagni was John Hunter, a great naturalist, who re-established a close union between medicine and the natural sciences. He gave a great impetus in Great Britain to the study of morbid anatomy.

Before the eighteenth century closed practical medicine had made great advance. Smallpox, though not one of the great scourges, like plague or cholera, was a prevalent and dreaded disease. Edward Jenner, a pupil to whom John Hunter gave the famous advice, "Don't think—try," had noticed that milk maids who had been infected with cowpox from the udder of the cow, were insusceptible to smallpox. He experimented with the cowpox virus and proved that it gave immunity; this was in 1798, and from this date smallpox has been under control.

It was Rene Theophile Laennec who laid the foundation of modern clinical medicine. He began to combine the accurate study of cases in the wards with anatomical investigations in the dead-house. Auenbrugger's invention of percussion extended the field, but Laennec's discovery of auscultation marked an era in the study of medicine. His description of tuberculosis is perhaps the most masterly chapter in clinical medicine. With the stethoscope begins the day of physical diagnosis. By correlating signs and symptoms of disease with its anatomical appearance, a revolution in scientific medicine was effected.

The investigation of disease by clinical pathological methods widened enormously the diagnostic powers of the physician. By this method Richard Bright discovered the association of various diseases of the kidney with dropsy and albuminous urine. Typhoid and typhus were differentiated. The introduction of the microscope in clinical work widened our powers of diagnosis, and a very strong impetus was given by the researches of Virchow on cellular pathology.

Experimental pathology introduced by John Hunter, and carried on by Magendie, Claude Bernard, Charcot, and others, not only aided in the study of the action of drugs, but threw new light on cardiac pathology and the functions of the brain. Great accuracy in diagnosis of obscure affections of the brain and spinal cord was attained by French neurologists, under Charcot.

Surgical anesthesia was first demonstrated October 16, 1846, in the Massachusetts General Hospital by Morton, and is one of the most memorable occasions in the history of the race.

A new era in medicine starts 1857, from the discovery by Louis Pasteur, of the causes of alcoholic fermentation. At the middle of the last century not much more was known about the causes of the pestilences, fevers and plagues of man than did the Greeks.

With Pasteur's advent comes a light which brightens more and more as the years give us ever fuller knowledge. The facts that fevers were catching, that epidemics spread, that infection could remain attached to clothing, etc., gave support to the view that the actual cause was something living.

It was Robert Koch who, in 1876, discovered the anthrax bacillus as the cause of that disease, and this marks the starting point of a new method of research into the causation of infectious diseases. By means of his new technique of pure cultures, isolated staining, and his study of wound infections, he was able to demonstrate conclusively the association of micro-organisms with disease, so that upon the memorable researches of this country doctor rests the modern science of bacteriology.

The next great advance was the discovery by Pasteur of the protection afforded against an infectious disease by inoculation with the attenuated virus of the same disease. He demonstrated his discovery by vaccinating a flock of sheep with attenuated virus of anthrax and these sheep remained well, while every one of another flock that were not vaccinated caught the disease and died. Out of this has grown the great advance that has marked the research work in the study of immunity. Already smallpox, diphtheria, typhoid and paratyphoid, tetanus, etc., are under control by immunization, and the vaccine treatment of many diseased conditions is meeting with some success. Pasteur's discovery that germs cause fermentation, led Joseph Lister to attribute wound fermentation to infection by germs. From these beginnings, modern surgery took its rise, and the whole subject of wound infection, not only in surgery but in obstetrics, forms one of the most brilliant chapters in the history of preventive medicine. Lister practiced antisepsis, while the surgeon of to-day relies chiefly on thorough asepsis. One of the greatest contributions of the nineteenth century to scientific medicine was the discovery of the internal secretions of certain glandular organs. With the loss of function of these glands by disease, the body was deprived of something formed by them which was essential to its proper working.

The vital importance of proper functioning of the pancreas superenals, thyroid gland, and pituitary body was demonstrated during the last quarter of the century. The cure of myxoedema by the feeding with thyroid extracts, looks almost miraculous. The dead in mind, and the deformed in body, may be restored to normal health by the magic touch of science; and to-day, the discovery by our own Dr. Banting, of insulin, brings assurance of cure to the formerly hopeless diabetic.

Preventive Medicine.

We have traced medicine through a series of upward steps; a primitive stage in which it emerged from magic and religion to an empirical art, as seen amongst Egyptians and Babylonians, a stage in which the natural character of disease was recognized; a stage in which the structures and functions of the human body were worked out; a stage in which the clinical and anatomical features of disease were determined; a stage in which the causes of disorders were profitably studied; and a final stage into which we have just entered, the application of the knowledge for their prevention. Sanitation takes its place among the great modern revolutions—political, social, intellectual. Even before the full demonstration of the germ theory, man had grasped the conception that a battle had to be fought against a living contagion which found in poverty, filth and wretched homes the conditions for its existence. Twenty-five years of hard work practically wiped out typhus fever, which was essentially a disease which thrived on the above conditions. Determination of the cause of a disease often leads to the remedy, which in most cases consists in removal of the cause. It is now known that insects play an important part in the transmission of disease. The flea, the louse, the bed bug, the house fly, the mosquito, the tick have within a few years taken their place as transmitters of disease. The fly population may be taken as the sanitary index of a place.

Humanity owes an incalculable debt of gratitude to the members of the profession who, at great personal sacrifice and risk of life itself, some of whom indeed did pay the penalty, demonstrated that yellow fever and malaria were transmitted by mosquitoes, and the thorough organization of a campaign to banish these pests finally practically eliminated these two diseases, the former appalling death from which exceeded that from any other cuase.

The problem of control of typhoid fever is practically solved. With a pure water supply everywhere, and proper sanitary conditions in relation to dwellings and premises, typhoid fever would disappear.

Before Koch's discovery of the bacillus of tuberculosis, we were helpless and hopeless in our dealings with one of the scourges of the race, and in a spirit of fatalism, with folded hands, accepted a state of affairs which seemed inevitable. But see the contrast to-day. Knowing the cause of the disease and how it is spread, being better able to recognize the disease in its early stages, better able to cure a considerable number of early cases by education, organization and co-operation, an enthusiastic campaign has been put into operation which is sure to lead to victory. In recent years there has been much research work done in connection with focal infections, in the hope of tracing many of our prevalent maladies to an infection in some part of the body, distant from the part affected. Up to date many satisfactory results have followed removal of diseased tonsils, diseased teeth, diseased appendix, and diseased gall bladder—yet many cases have received no benefit whatever from these operations; but further research may find other sources of infection which may account for such failures, and thereby widen the scope of our efforts.

In conclusion, I venture to predict that the greatest achievements of research in the future will be in the field of preventive medicine. In the meantime, it behoves us to make the best use we can of the weapons we now possess, and each and all of us do our honest share in the redemption of our fellowmen from sickness and from death.

ARTIST TOOK WIFE TO SEE HIS DEATH

Because He Was About to Lose His Sight He Chose Death by His Own Hand

CHICAGO, April 7.—Because Edmund D. Sedlack, aged 46, a successful commercial artist, was about to lose his sight, he chose death by his own hand and took his wife with him.

This is the theory generally accepted by the police of Elmhurst, a western suburb of Chicago, to account for the finding this morning of the bodies of Sedlack and his wife, both shot through the temple. Sedlack still grasped in his right hand a pistol, from which two shots had been fired.

Neighbors and relatives say there had never been any trace of domestic trouble. Sedlack had no financial troubles. He owned an eight-thousand-dollar home in Elmhurst, but last week, because of failing sight, he was forced to close his establishment.

Saturday afternoon he visited an oculist, whose identity has not been established, nor is it known what the oculist told him, but it is presumed Sedlack was informed that he was soon to become blind.

March 30th was the eleventh birthday of his daughter, Dorothy. After his visit to the oculist, Sedlack bought a birthday cake and several presents for his daughter, and he and his wife and a fifteen-year-old son put in two hours preparing the tables and making other arrangements for the birthday celebration on that date.

The children slept in upper rooms, and at 7 o'clock that morning they were awakened by two shots in the bedroom occupied by their parents. The neighbours and police were summoned, but Sedlack and his wife were dead.

Mrs. Sedlack evidently had been shot while she slept, as there were no signs of a struggle. It is thought the knowledge that he was on the verge of blindness drove Sedlack to insanity. He was devoted to his wife, and it is believed he decided to take her with him.

Rub on Good Old Musterole

That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once.

Rub good old Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief.

Colds are merely congestion. Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold.

As effective as the messy old mustard plaster, it does the work without the blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief. 40c and 75c, at all druggists.

POLICE RECOVERED $33,000 ALL TOLD

On Thursday $27,000 of the Hochelaga Bank Money Was Found in the Wall of a Boarding House Where Bandits Were Captured.

MONTREAL, April 7.—(Canadian Press).—Identification of a large number of the bills composing sum of $33,000 recovered by detectives who are at work on the holdup of the Bank of Hochelaga collection car last Tuesday, was established Saturday by a number of the employees of the Bank.

Two distinct amounts of money were recovered by the detectives on Tuesday night $6,000 was found secreted on the persons of the four suspects arrested in a boarding house. On Thursday detectives found in the same house, hidden in the wall, the sum of $27,000. On this occasion they also found pieces of cloth similar to that used by the robbers as masks, two of which were found in their abandoned automobile after the hold-up.

In the first amount of 6,000 several bills at the top of packages were found to bear initials of Bank of Hochelaga clerks and on the second sum of $27,000 a very large number of bills were found to bear such initials. Other marks were discovered which render identification certain.

As to the cloth it was found over week end that it was exactly of the same material as that used in the manufacture of masks, and when masks were laid on table with the cloth, each piece fitted together to make a complete piece of cloth.

Other proof stated to the conclusive was also found but police refuse to give details. It is stated that R. L. Calder, K.C. Crown prosecutor considers this proof to be of the best

U. S. MAY SHUT OUT OUR FARM PRODUCTS.

Movement Begun in Congress May Get Support of Democrats.

WASHINGTON, April 7. — A movement for an embargo on agricultural products in connection with the McNary-Haugon agricultural export bill has been begun in the House. The bill already contains a provision under which the President could impose practically prohibitive tariffs on wheat and other agricultural products but the Democrats find it difficult to support high tariffs. Many of them would rather support a complete embargo as an emergency proposition.

Supporters of the embargo say it would settle the controversy which has arisen among House Republicans themselves over the tariff features of the measure. Should an actual embargo be imposed it would strike a blow at all agricultural imports from Canada.

Mrs. A. C. Brown, Oromocto, Ont., writes: "I have been troubled with my liver for a few years back and was so bad I did not feel able to do my work.

I had severe pains in my stomach so bad I could hardly stand them at times; coated tongue; bad taste in the mouth, especially in the morning, and had a yellow and sallow complexion.

I had read a great deal about Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and decided I would try a vial, and after taking two or three I found I was greatly improved, and can truthfully say that I felt more like living and can now do my own work without any trouble."

CONVERSATION

We talk sometimes of a great talent for conversation as if it were a permanent property in some individuals—conversation is an evanescent relation,—no more. A man is reputed to have thought and eloquence; he cannot, for all that, say a word to his cousin or his uncle; they accuse his silence with as much reason as they would blame the insignificance of the sun-dial in the shade; in the sun it will mark the hour; among those who enjoy his thought he will regain his tongue.

The Brilliant Novelist of Modern Society

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Prudence Page—a pretty country girl, is slowly recovering from her infatuation with

Bert Traymore—a fascinating, unscrupulous philanderer. Prudence is mystified to discover him digging at the foot of an elm tree in a secluded spot, where he has evidently concealed something, but she speaks of the incident to no one.

Janet Mercer—Prudence's friend, an older woman, plain but clever, is relieved to find the girl becoming indifferent to Traymore, whom she dislikes. Janet is in love with Will Ogilvie, whom she intends to marry some day. In the meantime she is masseuse to the delicate child of Mrs. Vansittart—a pleasure-loving, woman-of-the-world, owner of Winston Towers.

Virginia Dale—her ward, is a calculating beauty, who counts Traymore among her many swains. She is genuinely interested in

Peter Armstrong—a brilliant young inventor, clever and ambitious, who has evinced considerable liking for Prudence. Virginia, aware that Prudence is a dangerous rival, plans to do the girl harm in some way.

Janet warns Prudence of Virginia's determination to "win" Peter.

Prudence is invited to 'fill in' at a dinner party at Winston Towers.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Mother's Worry.

"I don't half like it, Prudence; I don't, indeed!"

In the peaceful little parlor of Green Gables, Mrs. Page regarded her pretty young daughter with worried, anxious eyes.

"I couldn't get out of it, mother. Mrs. Vansittart was so—so determined." Prudence fidgetted with a paper-cutter that lay upon some books.

"Then you ought to have shown an equal strength of character."

A pause. Perfume of lilac came through the windows. Some swallows darted by with arrow speed, skimming over the field gates, flying low. With a sort of envy, Prudence noted the sureness of their dash, the fineness of their judgment, and wished that she herself had power to fly away from all the things that worried. Trammels of home were weighing on her now. Oh! for independence!

"As for this idea of borrowing a frock, it goes against the grain terribly," went on her mother, the furrow deepening in her forehead. "I can't think where your pride has gone to, dear."

Prudence's soft lips set in a stubborn line. Up till now, she hadn't wanted in the least to visit Winston Towers. The place hadn't very happy memories.

But her mother's opposition seemed unreasonable.

Did they want her to have no pleasure at all, these elder, wiser folk?

They thought that youth ought to to kept down, didn't they?

That puzzling gulf between the generations! Queer; inexplicable! Why, it almost seemed as though her mother grudged her any pleasure!

Across the parlor table, mother and daughter regarded each other with misunderstanding eyes.

"I have my pride," said Prudence, stiffly, resentfully. "But, just the same, I can't see where it would be a crime to oblige Mrs. Vansittart this once."

"No good will come of it," was her mother's pessimistic comment. The gusty sigh that accompanied the remark irritated her listener further.

"Oh! anything to get out somewhere for an evening!"

Pain, mingled with the worry on her mother's face, and Prudence's heart gave a little stab of remorse, although she fought against it.

"You find it so dull here, do you?" came the wistful query.

The girl nodded stubbornly.

"Nothing ever doing. One day just like the next."

Queer how she hated to hurt her mother, whom she dearly loved—and yet she must speak out! Must her life always be in leading-strings?

"You're not hankering after going up to the city, and a—a career?" With difficulty her mother got the hated word out. "You're not wanting to do what Jennie Pearson did?"

Jennie Pearson was a farmer's daughter who, flouting the wishes of her stern old father, had run away to town to 'go upon the stage.' Jennie's 'career' had been a trifle chequered in more ways than one. Its manifold ups-and-downs had included a brief marriage with a ne'er-do-well, which later on had been annulled.

And Jennie—outwardly the same pert damsel, and apparently in no wise chastened by her experiences of city life—had returned to the bosom of the country for a period of resting —'between shows'—whatever that might mean.

The wayward Jennie had never been one of Prudence's friends.

It annoyed Prudence to have her held up now as an Awful Warning.

"I can't see that Jennie Pearson did anything so very terrible. Her father worked her awfully hard on the farm, and never gave her a cent to buy pretty clothes with nor a dollar to go off on a holiday. Jennie had a right to choose her own life."

Quick anxiety sprang up in the eyes of Mrs. Page. Was her daughter going to do the same thing? Rebellion and unrest were in the air.

Prudence read her thought, and gave a short, rather mirthless laugh.

"You can't see me as a toe-dancer? I'd have to seek other fields of endeavor. But, just the same, I have a sort of sympathy with Jennie. I'd rather wear out than rust out."

Her mother said, with some acerbity: "You will wear out soon enough, if you keep flying between here and the Towers, striving to keep up with people out of your sphere."

A spark of anger glinted in the pretty eyes of Prudence. The entry of her father made an interruption. Immediately the mother laid the tale before him.

To the older woman's surprise and chagrin, he did not back her up.

"Let the child have her enjoyment. She's been moping of late. What matter if she does borrow a gown for the occasion? Mrs. Vansittart is the one under the obligation, and not Prudence. Our girl'll do her credit."

So away went Prudence in the handsome limousine at seven o'clock of a spring evening, with a restless cuckoo calling in the woods, and the sedge-warblers trilling in the reed-beds by the river, and a belated lark rising from the meadow-land, up, up to the illimitable blue.

Money! Power! Luxury! And Beauty! As the big car purred along the winding roads, the girl's heart dwelt upon these things with a queer pleasurable excitation.

And Love.?

Ah, no! She was definitely 'through' with that!

Odd, just the same, how her thoughts would turn to Peter Armstrong and their very recent interview! Such a man he was! So virile, and so dominating! Queer, how the thought of Bertram Traymore dwindled into almost nothing in comparison with the upstanding young inventor!

Was it because Virginia Dale had sought him out?

Or was it a certain forcefulness of personality? Magnetism? Or the utter sincerity of the man?

Mrs. Vansittart was already dressed when the limousine arrived, and immediately led Prudence to her own suite, which consisted of a large, handsome bedroom, a pretty boudoir, decorated in the Second Empire style with true lovers' knots and flying cupids painted on the walls . . . and a white-tiled, nickel-fitted bathroom, full of luxurious ontrivances for one's comfort.

"This is the frock." She indicated a gleaming mass of satin spread upon a 'chaise longue' in the bedroom. 'White is your best bet, child, with that fair skin of yours. It ought to suit you."

Indeed it did, as Prudence saw her reflection in the long pier-glass, nearly an hour later. Simple in construction, yet cut by a master-hand, it gleamed incomparably under the brilliant lights and outlined her slender figure in soft, shining folds of white. Down the left side, masses of white acacia blossoms fell in a cascade from the shoulder to the floor, outlining the low, softly-draped girdle at the waist-line.

"I have never looked like this in all my life before," said Prudence, softly, the excitation at her heart again.

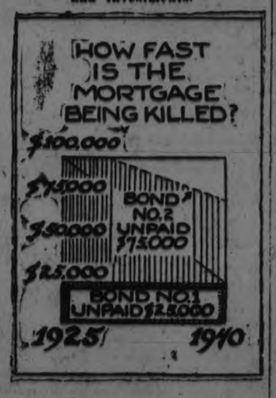
MAKING MAKE MONEY MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.



In buying real estate mortgage bonds there are several things to look at beside the rate of interest. One of these is, how quickly is the bond issue being amortized or "killed off"?

In the case of many buildings which real estate mortgage bonds are financing at the present moment no provision has been made for reducing the principal of the mortgage for the next five years—and these next five years will be critical ones. A mortgage bond issue which provides for killing off the mortgage at 5 per cent. per year, starting the year after the building is completed, may generally be regarded as sound because this will only leave 25 per cent. of the original mortgage standing at the end of 16 years.

Beware of those issues which do not start to kill off the mortgage until 5 years after the building is completed and then at the rate of only 2 or 2½ per cent. When you see a very high interest rate offered on these real estate mortgage bonds, find out where the trick lies—there must be some large amount of hidden risk or a lower rate would be offered.

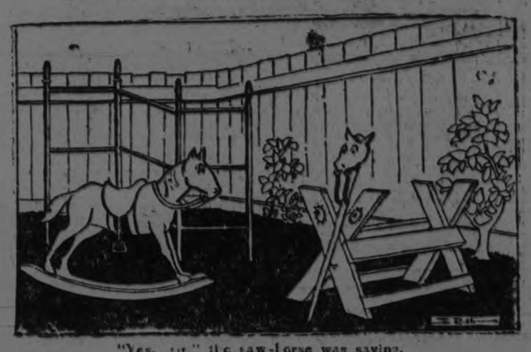
FOUR DOOFUNNY HORSES



"Yes, sir," the saw-horse was saying.

Nancy and Nick and Mister Fuzz Wuzz were walking along through Doofunny Land when they heard voices.

"Listen!" said Mister Fuzz Wuzz, softly. "It's those horses! They are always arguing about who is the most important. Come, let's hear what they have to say about themselves this time. But keep as still as you can, or you'll spoil it all."

"Yes, sir," the saw-horse was saying "there isn't anybody here quite as important as I. I am not only the largest of all the animals, but I am the smartest."

"I don't see how you get that!" retorted the hobby-horse, with a snort. "You certainly don't know much about grammar or you'd know enough to call yourself a see-horse. Whoever heard of a saw-horse? But I know that there are see-horses. They live in the sea."

"No, spoke up the clothes-horse, "he isn't either a see-horse or a saw-horse. He's a see-saw horse, because they put boards over him to make a see-saw."

"You are all very ignorant!" snorted the saw-horse. "Don't you know that I am called a saw-horse because they put boards over me to saw into pieces? It shows what a strong back I have and how useful I am in the world. Why, look at you, Hobby, you can't even stand up alone! You haven't a foot. Much use you are—a wooden head stuck on a broomstick! Why you are called a hobby I can't say.

"Well, I may not have feet, but no one can say I can't get around. Look at the rocking-horse."

"I will say that he doesn't cover much ground!" acknowledged the saw-horse, thoughtfully.

"Well, I declare!" whinned the rocking-horse. "Why, I'm the only real horse in the crowd. Look at me, a real mane and a real tail, and a saddle and stirrups and everything."

"Words! Words!" spoke a deep voice. "Handsome is as handsome does! I'm the only real worker in the lot. I have nine backs. And each of my backs carries a heavy burden. On ironing day I am trusted with the entire family washing."

"Pooh!" neighed the hobby-horse. "A willing horse can do all the work. Didn't you ever hear that?"

Mister Fuzz Wuzz stepped out at that. "Gentlemen," said he, "I have decided to let you have a race to see which of you is the greatest. That is always a good way to tell a good horse."

"Well—a—if you don't mind, I'm a bit lame to-day, declared the saw-horse, "so please excuse me."

"And—a—you'll please excuse me, too," whinned the hobby-horse. "I'm a trifle short winded. I can't run."

"And I never race—it's against my principles!" declared the clothes-horse.

"And—and I— well, I can't race alone, can I?" said the rocking-horse.

"My, my, my!" laughed Mister Fuzz Wuzz. "What do you think of these proud boasters, children?"

(To Be Continued.)

YOUR GARDEN

MORE FLOWER FACTS.

Many flowers grown as annuals can, with proper protection, be turned into semi-perennials by carrying them over the winter in a coldframe.

Pansies, dianthus and chrysanthemums are numbered among the plants adapted to this sort of treatment, which, of necessity is restricted to the hardiest varieties.

Half-hardy plants may be placed in the open a week or two before the coming of the last frost.

Seeds of such plants may be sown about the time leaves start showing on trees which put out their foliage earliest.

Most tender plants must be started under glass in order to have a sufficiently long season to develop.

They should not be taken from coldframes or hotbeds until danger from all frost is past.

This time is usually when white-oak leaves are about the size of squirrels' ears.

When growing annuals in masses, be careful to avoid bad color combinations.

Different colors, however, in the different varieties of a single species usually do not clash.

The gladiolus should be given a prominent place in your garden where an elaborate assortment of flowers is sought.

Gladioli seem to thrive in most any soil, but earth containing some sand seems best. Spade the ground to the depth of about a foot. Where bulbs are used do not use fresh manure.

When sowing seeds in the open it is the general practice to cover them to a depth equal to about five times their diameter.

When covering them indoors in seed box, hotbed or coldframe they should be planted to the depth of their greatest diameter.

Seeds about the size of a grain of wheat should generally be planted 1 inch deep. Those the size of beans about 2 inches deep.

Small seeds are generally scattered in rows and compacted into the soil by resting a board over the row and walking on it from end to end.

Success in raising annuals is almost in direct proportion to the destruction of the crowding plants as they grow.

Give each separate plant as much room as possible and it will return more flowers, and better ones, than if forced to share its space with half a dozen other puny plants, all trying to grow in the small space where only one plant should be.

The gardener should remember to "cut and come again." It is a good slogan and when put to test will reward the flower fancier a hundredfold.

Sweet peas and scores of other annuals may be kept in bloom for many weeks if you pick the flowers as soon as they open. Especially is this true of pansies.

It should be strictly remembered that the moment any annual begins producing seed it stops flowering.

TOMORROW: Garden culture.

Don't Spoil Your Child's Hair By Washing it

When you wash children's hair, be careful what you use. Do not use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much free alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is inexpensive and beats anything else to pieces.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified is all that is required. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store, and a few ounces will last for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified. Beware of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

(Unless otherwise specified, these recipes are planned for four persons.)

SUBSTANTIAL POTATO DISHES

We seldom think of combining potatoes with other ingredients to provide a substantial one-dish meal.

Just this time of year winter potatoes need a bit of dressing up to make them attractive and during the Lenten season they can be used with eggs and fish to advantage.

This old-fashioned Dutch potato soup is a nourishing and fattening luncheon dish. A simple salad and fresh fruit should finish the menu.

Dutch Potato Soup

Two medium-sized potatoes, 1 small onion, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 blades celery, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 3 cups milk, 2 eggs, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper.

Pare potatoes and slice about half an inch thick. Melt butter in kettle and add onion peeled, sliced very thin. Cook over a slow fire for five minutes. Add potatoes, celery cut in fine pieces, and water to well cover potatoes.

Cover kettle and cook slowly until potatoes are tender. Add salt, pepper and parsley and mash slightly, with wooden potato masher. Add milk and bring to the boiling point but do not let boil. Break eggs in a cup and mix white and yolk but do not beat. Stir into hot soup and reheat but do not let boil.

Serve with toasted bread sticks which have had a bit of cheese grated over them.

Potato Surprise (Individual)

One large potato, suitable for baking, 2 eggs, 4 tablespoons cream, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon grated cheese, ½ teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons flaked crabmeat, paprika.

Scrub potato and bake until done. Cut a slice off one side and scoop out inside. Mash potato with butter and cream, beating until light. Keep hot. Slide eggs carefully into potato shell, being careful not to break yolks. Cover lightly with flaked crab meat. Pile mashed potato over crab meat, letting the potato sort of overflow the shell.

Sprinkle with grated cheese and place in a moderate oven for eight or ten minutes to cook the eggs and melt the cheese. Sprinkle with paprika and serve at once. A smaller potato and one egg can be used.

YOUR HEALTH

DR. CLIFFORD ROBINSON

EFFECT OF DREAMS.

There is no doubt that at times some forms of bodily disease, which are a real menace to health, are disclosed by dreams.

What are classed by the psychologists as recurrent dreams are sometimes, in certain types of persons, a real indication of a trouble or disease.

Recurrent dreams are those which apparently are able to focus the dream world or thought, which is our real world while we sleep, on the existent trouble.

In one case, the dream came to the sleeper every few nights for a period of two weeks. He felt a gnawing sensation in the abdominal region. The dream would aways cause him to awake and at times, he admitted he even felt pain, where the gnawing sensation occurred.

The attending physician decided to try the X-ray and an ulcer was discovered and a successful operation performed.

There is no doubt that dreams are frequently caused by some glandular trouble.

Where such dreams occur and are recurrent, a glandular diagnosis should be made, if the one afflicted is at all in doubt as to some trouble that effects the physical health.

Mr. Mann of Anytown took his baths by the calendar and not by necessity. To him Saturday night was significant because it was bath night.

Had he been of an enquiring turn of mind, he would have learned that, for centuries, the bath was a luxuriant pastime among the Egyptians, Romans and Greeks.

In fact great works of art were created about the baths, and such a state of luxuriance did it achieve that Seneca, the Roman philosopher, once wrote, "To such a pitch of luxury have we come that we are dissatisfied unless we tred on gems in our baths."

Mr. Mann might go more frequently to the tub and with greater keenness did he know he was indulging in a sport of kings.

But, on the more scientific side: Skin becomes enveloped in a varying layer of perspiration, dust, dirt and grime; becomes clogged and cries for air and an opening of the pores; is swathed in tight clothes and compressed. By bathing we may awaken the skin to activity.

Baths have varying effects upon individuals, depending chiefly on duration of time in the tub and heat of water. They may be either tonic or suffocating.

A bath of about 102 to 105 degrees can be continued for two or three minutes, filling surface blood vessels, stimulating functions of the brain, heart and nervous system. A short bath may be taken daily, particularly at night before retiring.

Bathe oftener and give your skin a chance.

FABLES ON HEALTH

One evening, shortly after a talk with his doctor, Mr. Mann, of Anytown, suprised Mrs. Mann at the dinner table by remarking:

"Think I'll run over to the gymnasium tonight."

"What's this?" gasped the Mrs. "A new excuse for getting out to a poker game? Or is there a burlesque show in town?"

Now, Mrs. Mann was not without feminine shrewdness and intuition. A second after she had questioned her husband's intentions she regretted it.

There was something almost wistful in the expression upon his face. She realized she should have sensed his sincerity, and encouraged him.

And, being a wise woman, she did not back up her own mistakes with stubbornness, but invariably backed down.

"Papa," she said, "you trot right along. But if, within a couple of weeks, you can't run the daily dozen up to 24, I'll be suspicious.

"What's more, I want you to learn enough about exercise to pass it on to the youngsters. We'll turn the bedtime story into a healthtime story."

The moral of all of which is this:

A wife can be a vital influence in getting her husband in the exercise habit. Encourage your husband, wives, and then get the habit yourself.

DIED AT MELBOURNE

MELBOURNE, Australia, April 7.—(Canadian Press Cable via Reuters).—The death is announced of Sir John MacKey, speaker of the Victoria legislative assembly.

Do not rub the nap away—

BLANKETS are given a nap to make them soft and fluffy, and to give them warmth. They should therefore never be rubbed as this will remove some of the nap, and it will also felt and shrink them.

To thoroughly cleanse your blankets without rubbing them try this method.

Lux is sold only in sealed packets —dustproof!

Washing Directions

A rich live suds is essential throughout the entire process of washing blankets. To obtain this, use two tablespoonfuls of Lux to every gallon of water in the washing.

Dissolve the Lux thoroughly in very hot water, whisking it into a thick suds. Add cold water until lukewarm. Put the blanket into the rich suds, souse it up and down, and squeeze the suds through the entire blanket. If the suds die down, add more Lux, taking care that it dissolves before you put the blanket in again. Take care to press the suds through the very soiled spots, but never rub the blanket.

Rinse in three or more lukewarm waters, of the same temperature as the suds. Fold evenly, and run through a loose wringer, and hang dripping. Never wring them. Stretch and pull into shape at intervals when drying.

Blankets washed the Lux way will retain their soft, fluffy appearance even after innumerable launderings.

ST. JAMES HAD LARGE CROWDS

Fifteenth Anniversary of the Church Observed Yesterday--Special Sermons.

Celebrating yesterday the fifteenth anniversary of its institution and the seventh anniversary of the erection of the present edifice, St. James' Methodist Church was filled for both morning and evening services with members of the congregation and visitors from the sister congregations of Methodist churches of the city. The anniversary services were in keeping with the occasion. Special music had been prepared by the choir, which was augmented in the evening by members of the choir of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. The handsome interior of the church was brightened by the wealth of flowers which hid the pulpit. Quantities of ferns, pink roses and white carnations made a lovely decoration. The pastor, Rev. J. D. Richardson, M.A., preached at both services, and was assisted by Rev. H. M. Manning, who conducted the initial services at St. James' Church and by Rev. B. Greatrix, during whose pastorate the church was opened and dedicated.

After the pronouncement of a very reverent and devout prayer by Rev. Mr. Manning at the morning service, Rev. B. Greatrix made the announcements, and spoke of the offering. Mr. Greatrix referred to the splendid progress made by the church since its inception, and the generous response of the members which had cleared away the debt from the building. Yesterday, the trustees asked for the sum of $400. A total larger than this amount was realized, to be augmented by further contributions.

At the morning service, Rev. Mr. Richardson, speaking on "The Palace Beautiful, took his text from Isaiah lx., 18: "Thou shalt call her walls salvation and her gates praise." Referring to the Palace Beautiful that John Bunyan spoke of in the "Pilgrim's Progress," where the pilgrim rested on his way to the Delectable Mountains beyond, the pastor said that this beautiful allegory symbolized the Christian Church, where men were equipped for the journey of life and for their future home.

"These are a few things which the Church especially stands for, and these are spirituality, worship and service."

"The Church stands primarily for spirituality, because it is the expression in outward and visible form of the Divine life working in the souls of men. All life manifests itself outwardly, just as the robust health of youth manifests itself in physical endeavor, and our schools and colleges are the expression of mental life and vigor. So the Church is the visible and corporate expression of spiritual life in men. Jesus desired that His church should date from His death. It is true that He did not definitely establish the church, with its present forms, but no candid person can doubt that it was His desire that such a church should follow Him as an expression of the truths of His life and teaching. Whether perfect or imperfect, it is the organized confession of faith, the place of peace and joy and blessedness, and we confess our faith by union with the church."

"The church also stands for worship. It suggests the means by which the divine life may be nourished and increased and intensified, it supplies an opportunity for the worship of God and the acknowledgment of Him as the Giver of the good things of life. Worship is an essential thing in religion." The speaker here referred to the utterance of "the great Jesuit, the late Father Vaughan," made some years ago at the Eucharistic Conference in Montreal, when he said that Protestantism had no soul, because it had no Mass, and the Mass was the soul of religion. "The soul of religion is not the Mass, but the soul of religion is worship, and Protestantism must ever put that as essential. The church has many lesser activities, but if it fails in that great central thing of worship, then it fails lamentably in achieving its mission. Worship is just as necessary a part of our lives as is the air or the sunshine. Without it, our religious life would languish and die. If the church was closed to the worshipper, there would be a decline in religion and a waning consciousness of God. The man who says that he can read better sermons at home than he can hear at church forgets the quickening of the soul that comes with fellowship, the answer of the heart to prayer, and the uplift of the soul in song and praise. "My Father's house is a house of prayer." We go to the church, not only to hear the sermon, but pre-eminently to worship God. The man who says that he enjoys sermons by radio is perhaps animated by the feeling that prompted the Scotchman who said he liked radio sermons because when they began to take up the thankoffering, he could hang up the receiver."

"There are plenty of men to-day who would rather listen to the honk of the auto horn, summoning them to a joy ride on the Sabbath, than to the sweet music of the church bells, summoning them to church. But the average man will find that he needs the uplift and the help and the inspiration of worship in the house of God to take him along the road of life.

"The church also stands for organized service. In the Sermon on the Mount, Jesus left several admonitions to the church which should come after Him. It was to give light, bearing witness to the truths which He had preached; it was to purify and sweeten the lives of men, and it was to change and transform them, acting as leaven in their daily lives.

"In the parlance of the street, the church has 'all the others beaten,' when it comes to accomplishments in the way of moral uplift and social betterment, for which there are so many different agencies. They all receive their inspiration from the church, of Jesus Christ, and without it they would dwindle away and die. In any of these agencies for social service, you will find the best workers are members of the church. It is the mother of them all.

"In the church, this Palace Beautiful, the Christian traveller finds refreshment and strength and equipment for the battle of life. Well may it enlist your love and devotion and sympathy."

In the evening, when the church was completely filled, with one of the largest congregations ever present in the edifice, the pastor spoke on "The Challenge to the Church," taking his text from Exodus 14 and 15, in the words of the Lord to Moses: "Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward."

The Israelites, said Rev. Mr. Richardson, faced a great crisis and they were called on to go forward. We too are living in a crucial period that may be called epoch-making. The world has been passing through the throes of a new birth and the churches feel the impact of new forces. They realize the tremendous task that confronts them.

The challenge comes from problems of social re-construction. Any re-construction can only rest securely on a Christian basis. Then there is the challenge which comes from a desire to abolish war, as expressed in the League of Nations, which can only be made real and effective if based on the Christian conception of the Brotherhood of Man.

There is also a challenge which comes from a materialistic conception of life, which threatens to destroy or engulf the spiritual. The church can only meet the challenge as there is a re-birth of faith in God, and a recognition of the church as a Divine agency for saving the world, and emphasizing the Christian ideal of life as expressed in Christ's call to service and sacrifice.

The music for yesterday's services was particularly good. Led by F. Chenhall, organist and leader, the choir gave several fine anthems, with a male chorus in the morning and Gounod's duett, "O Divine Redeemer," by Miss Mary Wood and Mr. Edwin Rowe. In the evening, a male quartette from St. Paul's Church, composed of Messrs. Alex. Donley, Harold Snelgrove, C. F. Clark and Martin Chenhall, Junior, rendered in excellent voice "Sweet Peace," and Mr. Clark also gave two solos, "He Was Despised," and "Open the Gates of the Temple." The anthems, rendered by the choir in beautiful voice, were Minshall's "Praise the Lord" and Booth's "Soldiers of Christ, Arise." The men's chorus sang Spohr's "Soldiers of the Captain."

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Peterborough, March 21st, 1924.
Mr. Editor:
Re the estate of the late Alexander Brown of Fraserville.

An item appeared in The Examiner of Thursday, March 13, the writer making certain statements and withholding part.

Now, Mr. Editor, this affair was settled on the first day of October, 1923, all parties signing an agreement that they would abide by that decision and reported according to all Court proceedings. Now, after six months' time, after is has passed to some extent from the public mind, we find someone, irrespective of aforesaid agreement, endeavoring to have the public believe what he evidently doesn't believe himself, as he wothholds his name and endeavors to hide himself by substituting "Subscriber." We hear over and over again: Who is this man?

I feel sorry that any man would allow himself to sink so far below the dignity of his high calling as to engage in a work that he himself puts forth a vain effort to disown. I am in possession of the writer's name of said item that appeared in The Examiner of Thursday, March 13, in reference to will and estate of the late Alexander Brown, and in justice I give the name as I received it—R. M. Patterson.

Now, Mr. Editor, I would ask the privilege of putting a copy of the last will of the late Alex. Brown of Fraserville, that they may know that Mrs. Moncrief was not appointed an executor, although the said Mrs. Moncrief persisted in acting in that capacity, notwithstanding the fact that the said Mrs. Moncrief was distinctly told that her services were not required, nor was the property, real or personal, left to her, as will be seen by said will. But the said Mrs. Moncrief appealed to the executors to let her have the place, as she wished to retire in the near future. The said executors made the very best agreement it was possible to make in said Mrs. Mondrief's favor. This agreement was made in the presence of the late W. T. Wickett and Mrs. Wickett. For some reason unknown to the executors, Mrs. Moncrief ignored the agreement, but in all fairness and justice to said Mrs. Moncrief, we, the said executors, do believe that if R. M. Patterson and others attended to their own affairs, we would have been saved a great deal of trouble and Mrs. Moncrief a great deal of expense.

Now, Mr. Editor, we, the executors, were, by the power and virtue of an order made by the Surrogate Court, responsible to the Court for the carrying out of the provisions of said will. Where did those who opposed us get their authority? And we rejoice that we are enabled to carry out the wishes of our friend, silent in his grave, in the face of such great difficulties that has been put forth to rob our friend of his rights.

JOSEPH MADILL,
Executor of the estate of the late Alexander Brown of Fraserville.

'COPY OF WILL.

A suitable verse to be inscribed.

(D) I direct that the sum of twenty-five dollars shall be deposited in bank, the interest and $1 additional is to be paid to James Roddy or Mrs. Richard Moncrief, or their survivors, each and every year, for the care of lot until the amount is expended.

(E) To Emily Elize Wickett, One hundred dollars ($100). In case of her death the amount is to be paid to Rev. W. T. Wickett.

(c) To Annie McBride, daughter of Robert Fanning, Pearson, Man., the sum of fifty dollars ($50).

(D) All the rest and residue of my estate I devise and bequeath to my niece, Annie Moncrief.

I nominate, constitute, and appoint (C) Joseph Madill of North Monaghan, farmer, and James Roddy of Township of Cavan, farmer, as my executors and trustees of this my last will, with full power and authority to sell and dispose of all my estate where necessary, and execute any and all documents requisite to carry out this my will, and should one or more of my said executors or trustees wish to retire I authorize them to appoint a successor instead thereof.

In witness whereof, I have subscribed these presents as printed and written this (D) eighteenth day of August, A.D. 1921.

Signed, published and declared by the said testator as his last will and testament in the presence of us both present at the same time, who in his presence and in the presence of each other have hereunto set and subscribed our names as witness.

AUTOMATA MARVELS

Mechanical Duck Which Swam, Dived, Ate, Drank, Dressed Its Wings and Digested Its Own Food

Man is naturally a restless, ambitious and inventive creature, ever seeking that which is new, never happier than when confronted with or developing himself inventions marvellous in operation, and the principles of which have been extracted from hitherto unexplored realms of Mother Nature or science. 'Twas always so, but the time-worn aphorism, "there is nothing new under the sun," at least in so far as principle is concerned, seems to apply to much that is seemingly new.

Take the term Auto, for instance the popular abbreviation for the modren phrase Automobile. Why, "Auto" is as old as the hills, a derivation in fact from the Greek pronoun self, and signifying a self-acting machine when the word is augmented by the affix maton. Thus the word Automaton is usually applied to machinery constructed to represent human or animal actions.

From the Early Ages.

The construction of Automata, however, has occupied man's attenion from the very early ages, and 400 years before Christ, Archytas of Tarentum, claimed to have constructed a pigeon that could fly. Then, in the beginning of the eighteenth century, Frenchmen devised considerable automata, including a pantomine in five acts, the characters of which moved by machinery. But a mechanical duck, made by M. Vaucanson and exhibited in Paris, proved a marvellously ingenious contrivance, for it swam, dived, ate, drank and dressed its wings, and by a solution in the stomach its food digested. Still another remarkable Automaton which kept all Europe agog was M. Faber's mechanical figure which articulated words and sentences intelligently, although the effect was not pleasant.

Practical Automata.

Now these achievements are all vouched for by Chambers as records for history, and they are only recorded here in exemplification of that natural aspiration of man which has resulted in constructing that equally wonderful but more practical automaton, the Automobile. You'll see them in all their constructive ramifications when you attend the Motor Show here in the Armouries on April 23, 24 and 25, and you'll find cause for wonder at their designers' ingenuity. No trouble is being spared to ensure this show being the best yet with its interest-holding exhibits of automobiles—motor cars if you like the term better—from the cosy coupe to the dignified family limousine, and handsome, invitingly luxurious touring machine.

Mechanical Innovation.

But this is to be a motor show where other contrivances propelled by motor—trucks, boats, deliveries, etc.— each in itself a tropy to man's urge to climb to the highest crest of mechanical innovation, ever inventing contrivances for business or pleasure controlled by agencies drawn from the secret caches of nature.

A Worthy Cause.

And there'll be also entertainment aplenty, furnished by sympathisers with the worthy object of the event—to boost the local Health Association's truly Christian work, of fostering a healthy community and caring for the sick and needy, to say nothing of giving under privileged little folks a summer outing in Jackson Park. To these exemplary purposes will the receipts of the Motor Show be contributed, and unless the general public are generous, the Health Association's endeavors must necessarily be curtailed. A quarter here, a quarter there does not mean much to those individuals who are not under-privileged, but collectively a respectable sum can thus be raised in the name of Him who commended the care of the poorly circumstanced to their more fortunate brethren.

Doing Their Bit.

The exhibitors and others are doing their part in assuming considerable expense to make this show the success expected from a community like Peterborough, and it is hoped that citizens in general will rise to the occasion with their patronage.

MINERS MAY NOT CARRY OUT PACT

Deposed Secretary of Union Held Meeting on Sunday.

HALIFAX, April 7. — Canadian Press. — J. B. McLachlan, the deposed secretary of the United Mineworkers in District 26, recently released on parole from Dorchester Penitentiary, to which he had been sentenced for seditious libel, declared at a labor gathering here last night that Montreal working agreement, effected in that city last February, would never be accepted by the miners of Cape Breton.

Regarding his recent incarceration he said that he had written a letter that had caused his conviction, and added that had he been given full sentence for every offcnse of that nature he had commmitted, he would have been given seven hundred years

Copies of the "Red Flag" were distributed, and the words were sung by several ladies on the platform as the audience left the theatre at the end of the meeting.

LUIS FIRPO PLANTED HAYMAKER ON THE JAW

BUENOS AIRES, April 7.—(Canadian Press).—Louis Firpo, South American heavyweight champion last night added another victory to his record by knocking out Al Reich, United States heavyweight, who came to Buenos Aires with championship aspirations. Firpo's powerful right turned trick in less than two minutes after sound of gong in first round. Firpo landed on Reich's jaw and Reich crashed to floor. Not withstanding desperate efforts he was unable to rise within allotted time and after count of ten was carried to his corner.

MEETINGS AT GEORGE STREET

The New Life Campaign began most auspiciously in George Street Church yesterday. Large congregations greeted Rev. Newton Jones, of London, England, and enjoyed his messages to the full. Inspiring music was rendered by the choir, solos were sung morning and evening by Mrs. Park, and the congregational singing was in itself an unlift to all that attended.

In the morning Mr. Jones preached from the one word "Go," and brought a ringing challenge to larger service and deeper living. In the afternoon the Sunday School was crowded for the open session addressed by Mr. Jones. As in the children's talk in the morning, so also in the afternoon, he held the young people spellbound. He wove a most helpful talk around the word "To-Day," and left a deep impression on the mind of every one who heard him.

In the evening the church was filled for the service. His sermon on "Wake Up, Get Up, Light Up," brought the issues of better living squarely before each life in a most personal and winning way. With insight and power he unfolded the meaning of his text from Ephesians, and was followed with rapt attention by all. At the conclusion of the service about seven hundred stayed for a brief time of special prayer and devotion.

Mr. Jones revealed himself yesterday as a preacher of unusual gifts. With a complete absence of sensationalism, but with an outstanding gift of directness and force in expression, he preached the message of Christian living in an unforgetable way. His faculty of adducing telling illustrations and his extreme simplicity of utterance made his points so clear that no one could mistake his meaning, and his quiet earnestness emphasized his messages most impressively. All agreed that here was a man who has a real message for every life.

The services will be held twice daily until Wednesday, April 16th. To-night Mr. Jones' subject will be "A Consecrated Personality," and to-morrow afternoon he will give a chalk talk to boys and girls on "Joy." All are heartily invited to attend.

FOR THE BLIND

The tag day to be held on Saturday of this week for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, under the auspices of the combined I.O.D.E. Chapters of the city, should enlist the active sympathy and co-operation of every citizen of the city.

Until 1918, when the blinded soldiers began to return from the war, the blind civilians in Canada were sadly neglected. Since then, however, marvellous strides have been made, until at the present time the Institute is able to reach out and help these unfortunate people even in the most remote of districts.

The work of the Institute is divided between service to improve the condition of the blind in Canada, and the prevention of blindness. Before any help is given, each case is thoroughly investigated and registered. This registration involves the notation, tabulation and classification of all the obtainable essential facts regarding the case, such as the cause of blindness, degree of sight (if any), general, mental, nervous and physical condition (other than eyes), training, occupation and experience or fitness for any special employment. From this information the Institute is enabled to either place these people, industrially or otherwise, upon a self-supporting basis by teaching and training them in that occupation for which they seem best adapted or, failing that, to render such assistance and help as is possible to ameliorate their condition.

TAKES 900,000 VOLTS, LIVES.

Electrical Student at Johns Hopkins Saved By Companion.

BALTIMORE, April 7. — Nine hundred thousand volts of electricity coursed through the body of J. V. Alfriend, Jr., a senior in electrical engineering at Johns Hopkins University Friday when a high voltage spark leaped unnoticed across a gap while he was experimenting for the engineering show that will be held at the university.

The current was stepped up from the ordinary 110 volt strength until it threw a spark between fifteen and twenty inches long. Another student, who was working with Alfriend, had the presence of mind to throw out a switch, thereby probably saving Alfriend's life.

The latter had been experimenting for some time with high-voltage current, having designed four coils within the last few weeks to get the desired voltage. At 900,000 volts all insulation is useless and even a piece of rope becomes a conductor.

The voltage was of high frequency, otherwise Alfriend would have been killed instantly.

AMERICA BUYS CANADA BONDS

Total Sales Exceed Billion In Seven Years — Heavy Canadian Financing Is Rumored For Near Future

NEW YORK, April 7 (Canadian Press). — A large amount of Canadian financing will be done in the United States in the near future, according to information obtained by the New York Times on Saturday from a Canadian railroad official and made public yesterday.

The Times says:

The Canadian official now here pointed out that, in spite of the willingness of British investors to turn to Canada, the United States was still considered to a great extent when money is needed in the Dominion. Ontario has authorised a bond issue of $40,000,000, part of which is for refunding purposes and part for new roads and Hydro-Electric development, and it is expected that this country will take much of the loan.

DAIRY PRODUCTS NOW ON DECLINE

Farmers Becoming Alarmed Says Kingston Despatch.

KINGSTON, Ont., April 7.—(Canadian Press).Farmers in this district are alarmed about the big drop in the price of dairy products. Butter has dropped 18 cents inside of three weeks, first class Eastern Ontario Dairy School butter selling at forty cents retail. On Saturday eggs sold at twenty five cents and a large quantity as low as twenty cents, the market is glutted with eggs, as to cheese there is no assurance as to what price will be, but it is believed that it will sell as low as 13 cents, drop in cheese is due to the fact that the storages in Montreal are filled with cheese purchased last fall at a high price and cannot be disposed of. The bringing in of New Zealand butter is said to have caused the butter market to drop.

BLOOMER, FOILS STAR, BROKE NECK IN 1920 CANE RUSH

NEW YORK, April 7.— Despite the fact that he sustained a broken neck in the annual Sophmore-Freshman cane rush at Columbia in the fall of 1920, Harold Bloomer, star fencer on the Blue and White team, to-day holds the 1924 individual intercollegiate foils championship. He comes of a family which long has been interested in the sport of parry and thrust. Three years ago his brother, Millard J. Bloomer, Jr., won the same intercollegiate fencing title. The success of the two brothers is due to the efforts of their father, Millard J. Bloomer, Sr., who taught both of them the rudiments and later the finer points of fencing.

George Weston Died After Busy Career.

TORONTO, April 7.—(Canadian Press).— Following a month's illness, George Weston, one of Toronto's prominent business men, died early yesterday morning at his residence 469 Palmerston Boulevard.

Born in Oswego, N.Y., sixty years ago, George Weston came to Canada with his parents, when a small boy and settled in Toronto. His introduction to business in which he was later to figure so prominently came when, as a lad of 18, he apprenticed himself to a baker. Four years later he bought out his employer and with one horse and waggon began his career. He was baker, delivery man and book-keeper.

WHERE THE BEST TEA GROWS

The tea plant flourishes best on the well drained side of a mountain in a country where there is plenty of moisture and a warm sun. Certain parts of Ceylon, India and Java are ideal for the growing of delicious tea, hence from these countries come the finest varieties. "SALADA" is a blend of the choicest qualities grown in these, the three most famous tea-grwing countries in the world.

RETAINS TITLE.

NEW YORK, April 7 (Canadian Press). — Jay Gould of Philadelphia, perennial holder of the National Court tennis championship, successfully defended his title on Saturday by defeating Hewitt Morgan, of New York, in the challenge match of the tournament 6-1, 6-1, 11-9.

This starts the ball rolling. Watch its progress.

KING DROVE THE STAGE MURPHY TOOK THE FARES

Premier of Canada, Who Summers at Kingsmere, Knows How to Lend a Hand

ON a bright summer's afternoon some fifteen years ago, the late Gatineau train pulled itself out of the old Union Station at Ottawa, with the coaches packed to the doors, mostly with passengers sojourning for the summer in the Laurentian Hills and environments, who were returning to their cottages after their daily grind in the city. Approximately thirty minutes after its departure, it stopped at Chelsea, where a number of people disembarked, many to take the bus for places adjacent to Kingsmere and Meach Lake.

W. L. Mackenzie-King

The wagon for Kingsmere, driven by two prancing horses in charge of Billy Murphy, was unusually crowded, so much so that a young man, who unless looks belied him was well under forty years of age, found room for himself on the driver's seat.

"Give me the reins, Billy," he said, "and you can collect the fares."

"Who is that young man?" asks a stranger, who, from his appearance and the superabundance of baggage had evidently just arrived for the purpose of spending his vacation.

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier's new minister of labor," proudly replied one of the passengers. "He summers at Kingsmere."

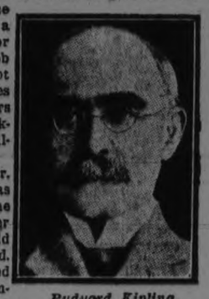
The journey to Kingsmere covered three and one half miles, but over the devious roads the "young man" safely guided the speedy horses until he reached his own cottage, when he returned the reins to the regular driver.

To-day, this "young man" guides the destinies of the Liberal party in the office of prime minister of Canada. Several months ago the Right Honorable William Lyon Mackenzie King celebrated his forty-eighth birthday, and shortly before the last prorogation of the Dominion House of Commons this former son of Harvard University, who still summers at Kingsmere, was honored by his Alma Mater when he was given the degree of Doctor of Law.

Kipling Selects Names For Exhibition Streets

Promoters of British Empire Exhibition Chose Genius to Give Far-Flung Atmosphere to Great Project

RUDYARD KIPLING has been entrusted with the task of selecting names for the streets of the British Empire Exhibition which opens at Wembly this year. Devising names is never quite so easy as it sounds, and the promoters of the exhibition display a very proper—and very British—unwillingness to descend to the American ignominy of numbering the streets. In fact, the only way to have a street properly named is either to give the national spirit a chance to work through a couple of centuries or else to hand the job over to a genius. Not having the centuries to spare, the directors of the exhibition picked out the most available genius.



Rudyard Kipling

The choice of Mr. Kipling, who has spent his life as the doughty pamphleteer of the Empire, could hardly be bettered. He has not confined himself to such common appellations as "road," "street" and "avenue," though all these occur. The visitor to the exhibition will tread the pavements of King's way and will doubtless want to stroll down Drake's way and Dominion way. He will certainly find it interesting to visit Pacific slope, and if he is not allured by the Fairway of the Five Nations there is really no hope for him. He had better stay at home and not visit the exhibition at all.

Query: Does the Poet of Empire get a shilling a word for his street names, or is he better paid, or is it a labor of love?

RISES FROM "SCARECROW" TO NATIONAL OFFICE

A LAD who began his farming career by hiring out as a scarecrow at one shilling a week, when only six years old, has grown up to be, at 74, chairman of the council of agriculture for England. He is George Edwards, member of parliament for the southern division of Norfolk, and the recognized leader of farm labor.

That first job was good for seven days a week, and during his tenure of it he incurred a thrashing and docking of two pence for falling asleep. Mr. Edwards is the son of a farm laborer who supported a wife and seven children on eight shillings a week, and was sent to prison for taking turnips from a field to feed his family. Young Edwards never went to school, his wife taught him to read, and he bought books by forswearing tobacco. He is now a magistrate and a county councillor.

SIR SHERLOCK HOLMES

SOON after he was knighted, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle received a bill from a tradesman made out to Sir Sherlock Holmes.

"I can take a joke as well as anyone," remarked Sir Arthur recently in telling the story, "but as this was going too far, I wrote a sharp letter to the firm upon the subject. In response, a very repentant clerk arrived, saying he was assured it was 'bona-fide.'

"What do you mean by bona-fide?" Sir Arthur asked him.

"Well, my mates in the shop told me that you had been knighted," was the reply, "and that, when a man was knighted, he changed his name, and that you had taken this one."

Is the Prince of Wales Tired of the Job? Paper Hints He Would Be Private Citizen

Determined Bachelor Persists in Risking His Life—Neither Family Nor Ministers Able to Restrain the Prince—Will Marry Some Day—Hasn't Met the Ideal Woman Yet.

IS the Prince of Wales thinking of renouncing the succession to the throne?

The Prince's reckless riding has stirred the empire again. Since his last and most serious fall at Arborfield on March 13, the question has been openly asked.

There are more ways than one of renouncing the throne. It need not be by public declaration. There is the prince's way of wilful self-determination.

To this rumored view one paper has now made direct reference. This is the Labor paper, the Daily Herald, which in the course of a sharp rebuke to the Prince for risking his neck, said:

"There is a widespread impression, based on reported utterances of his own, that he would rather be a private citizen."

While the Prince was still occupying a darkened room, undergoing the usual treatment for concussion, another tidal wave of counsel rolled towards St. James' Palace. In the House of Commons Colonel Moore Brabazon asked the speaker "whether it is the province of the House to represent to the sovereign its great concern at the repeated risks run by the heir to the throne?" Another section of the press demanded that the query be put direct to Premier Ramsay MacDonald where it cannot be sidetracked. It demanded that both the king and Mr. MacDonald should formally offer advice to the royal heir. Thousands of letters from the public in the Prince's mail bags stressed the same point of view.

It would not be the first time the King has talked to the Prince. A lady of high position in the court is authority for the statement that there are often painful quarrels between the King and the Prince of Wales and that the understanding between the Prince and Queen Mary is not much better, on account of his unconventional escapades, his dancing at night clubs, his friends out of his class, and, above all, his repeated and obstinate refusals to marry and give an heir to the throne.

The gravity and humor of the situation is extraordinarily mixed. It is not by any means humorous to the Queen. The persistence of the Prince in remaining a bachelor pains and annoys her. She considers his marriage a question of duty, and, with her, duty is something quite distinct from sentiment. Besides, she is a born matchmaker, and the failure of some of her repeated attempts to make her elusive son a married man have been extremely painful.

The examples are too numerous to mention. After touring around the world, the Prince returns home to find a certain dark-eyed Princess Yolanda, eldest daughter of the King of Italy, quietly awaiting him at Buckingham Palace as a guest. Her religion is a difficulty, of course, but a little thing like that is pleasantly readjusted. But the Princess goes home and marries her army officer. There appears next in England "the Godmother of the Balkans," the beautiful, persuasive and masterful Queen Marie of Rumania, the champion matchmaker among Queens, with her youthful but fascinating daughter, the Princess Ileana. But she meets an equally overwhelming defeat from the fairy Prince.

The Prince stopped all that foreign romance with a general principle. If he ever did marry—there was that delightfully uncertain part of it—it would be a British lady. Lady Joan Mulholland qualified here. She was dashing and keen and very modern, a first rate horsewoman and a good sport. In a race, the Prince won by only a couple of lengths. They flew over London together in an aeroplane. Then when the fair young widow was appointed lady-in-waiting to the Princess Mary, the Prince met her more often than any of his lady friends. Lady Joan may have tired of waiting. At any rate, for her second husband, she married the Earl of Cavan.

The case of Lady Rachel Cavendish, it has been said, was the keenest disappointment suffered by the Queen. About her suitability there was not the slightest doubt. Fourth daughter of the Duke of Devonshire and bridesmaid of the Princess Mary, she was the intimate friend of the royal family. But the Prince was just as definitely obdurate, and Lady Rachel showed her spirit by promptly marrying the Hon. James Stuart, third son of the Earl of Moray, a captain in the Scots Guards and equerry to the Duke of York.

Prophecy next fixed itself on Lady Mary Cambridge, a cousin of the Prince, but Lady Mary is to-day the wife of the Marquis of Worcester. The parents of Olive, a daughter of Lord Blythswood, quickly denied a reported engagement and the rumor about Lady Mary Beatrice Thynne, youngest daughter of the Marquis of Bath, has not materialized.

"What's wrong with the Prince of Wales?" is the widespread question, causing uneasiness and giving rise to the most unfounded and wildest fables. It is whispered that there is something wrong with the Prince; that he will never marry that he is unlikely ever to have children. Sometimes he is a woman hater. At other times, the romantic lover, hopelessly infatuated with another man's wife or with a commoner so far below his station that the royal family would never consent to the match. These are known to be the merest tittle-tattle by every intelligent Englishman.

Why should he marry? "Many wise men don't marry before they are thirty," as a close personal friend of the Prince's sagely remarked to Henry Somerville a few months ago. Many wise men, it might also be added, never marry at all. But they are not usually heirs to a throne. Take Edward VII., for example. At thirty he had not only been married eight years, but all his six children had been born. Thirty years of age this June, the Prince of Wales remains a shy, tired-looking bachelor, recklessly risking his life, persistently maintaining his independence in both the matrimonial and hunting fields.

"Suppose I am killed—I have four brothers," his famous remark as Captain Windsor in France, still seems to be the prince's attitude. There is still the Duke of York, "the good boy," the conventional member of the family, whom the "respectability" party, enchanted with his marriage to the charming Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, some day hope to see king.

But the Prince of Wales, if he wished, has his precedents. If Queen Elizabeth was a virgin Queen, why may he not oe as successful as a bachelor King? That, at least, would be an innovation. As "the best and most popular of bachelors," then, he has lately been toasted by bachelors in the House of Commons, dining at a table decorated with love-in-a-mist and love-lies-bleeding. This staid company was congratulated by so respectable a theologian as Lord Hugh Cecil, who was thankful he had "climbed to the summit of the rock" and was "safe from the cruel devouring foam of aggressive femininity."

Edward, Prince of Wales, is far from trying to end his life on the steeplechase course. The most expert of horsemen, and the Prince is far from one of these, often falls a hundred times in a season riding to hounds and racing point to point. He will even marry some day, well-informed people believe. He is simply hard to please. So far he has not found the woman with whom he would care to spend all his life. The general outline of his preference is no secret. Mere beauty, wit, or charm do not satisfy him. His ideal woman must be more than a mere sportswoman, more than a mere society woman. She must be all of these, and something more.

Meanwhile, life has so many things to offer. Above all, it has freedom. And there are so many years ahead. Why close the doors yet? Why settle everything? Why end romance? Life is very independent at St. James' Palace and on occasion, one can still return through a skylight.

Before the Fall at the Arborfield Point-to-Point Meeting.

LEFT to RIGHT, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York and Prince Henry. Both the Prince of Wales and Prince Henry were thrown twice, the Prince of Wales suffering a concussion of the brain in the second accident.

New York a Nest of Robbers Bok Exposed City to World

Famous Editor Invades City to Prove It a Bombast's Furioso With Clay Legs and a Chicken Heart — Relates His Chargings Against the Broadway Windmill.

WHO among you would suffer yourselves to be escorted with pomp and circumstance through the restaurant of the Waldorf-Astoria in New York and to a table of prominence there to order a bowl of milk and crackers?

You say you wouldn't be afraid to do that. But when you received the bill—60 cents for a bowl of milk and crackers—what would you do, you who dread the mocking eye and the covert sneer? Would you, for example, turn to the lordly servitor and cry, like Edward Bok:

"Sixty cents? Absurd! Change that check to 20 cents and I shall pay it?"

There's no doubt about the fact that Edward Bok, who is paying $100,000 for a peace plan which he might have got for nothing, had he applied his shears to back numbers of the Congressional Record, has courage. Some people may not see virtue in his peace promotion program, but he does. As far as we know now it was his $100,000, and who is there to say that he may not spend his own money as he sees fit?

His "The Americanization of Edward Bok" is still, after two years, one of the most popular non-fiction books in the libraries of the United States and even Canada. To read it is to absorb an incredible story which must be given credence. Yet it does not contain all—being confined to one volume—of Mr. Bok's adventures. Particularly does it omit much of the record of Mr. Bok's effort in 1904 to expose New York city to the world for what he believed to be—a bombast's furioso with clay legs and a chicken heart.

Mr. Bok was then the extremely successful editor of the Ladies' Home Journel, and in his own pages he set down his account of his chargings against the Broadway windmill.

"There is absolutely no use in a man's going to New York nowadays unless he has a pocketful of money and is willing to be systematically robbed at every turn," wrote a friend to Mr. Bok.

Mr. Bok went to New York to see.

"I took a Pennsylvania Railroad hansom to a hotel adjacent to Madison square," testified Mr. Bok.

"How much?" the editor asked the jehu.

"Eighty-five cents," replied the cabby.

Mr. Bok produced an official schedule of cab fares.

"See here," he cried, "it says 25 cents for the fare and 10 cents for a valise carried on top."

Mr. Bok says that he gave the driver 35 cents and walked, triumphantly, into the hotel.

"I ordered," said Mr. Bok, "and ate a light dinner costing $1.40, and gave the waiter fifteen cents as a fee. He looked at the two pieces of money contemptuously and muttered to another waiter standing by, 'That fellow'll get rich quick.'

"I called the manager and said: 'This waiter here has just brought me $1.40 worth of food which did not belong to him and which he is paid to serve me. I gave him 10 per cent. of the bill as a fee. The most I can get for my money is 6 per cent. He not only accepted that fee contemptuously but chose to insult me.'

"I left," concluded Mr. Bok. "So did the waiter."

"I would like an Evening Post," said Mr. Bok—this before Mr. Bok's father-in-law, Mr. Curtis, purchased the Evening Post. "I gave the newsboy a dime.

"Thank you," said the courteous newsboy, giving Mr. Bok the newspaper.

"Any change?" asked Mr. Bok, noting that three cents was the advertised price.

"Ten cents in the hotel," said the boy.

"I called the chief clerk," says Mr. Bok, "and got back seven cents."

"I went into the shop of a Broadway florist," continues Mr. Bok. "I asked him how much he wanted for a bunch of 100 violets.

"Eight dollars," said the salesman, without a blush.

"I told him to fix them up and then I called the proprietor. The proprietor verified the salesman's price. I told him that I knew from whom he got his violets and how much he paid for them—$2 a hundred. I told him that I'd allow him $1 for his profit and $1 for his rent. Four dollars, I said, would mean a profit to him of 150 per cent."

"Take them," said the florist. "You're in the business, I guess."

"I paid him $4," said Mr. Bok.

Mr. Bok went to the theatre. Not a seat to be had—unless, according to the young fellow behind the wicket—Mr. Bok cared to traffic with the speculators who might be found festooning the curb without.

"I called the manager," said Mr. Bok. Mr. Bok's story of New York resounded with cries for managers.

"Within three minutes," wrote Mr. Bok, "I had two seats directly on the centre aisle eight rows from the stage—the choicest seats in the auditorium."

After that conquest, Mr. Bok rode home.

"Two dollars and fifty cents," said the cabby.

Mr. Bok called for a policeman. He paid the driver one dollar. He slept well, and, on the following morning, went to a dealer in antiques. In Mr. Bok's story he applies an interrogation mark to the rear of the word antiques. Being Dutch, Mr. Bok priced a sample of Dutch plate.

"Seventy-five dollars," smiled the young woman.

"And this Delft shoe?"

"Ten dollars."

"Real Delft, I presume?"

"Certainly, sir."

"From Delft, Holland?"

"Yes, sir. Imported direct."

Mr. Bok called for the proprietor. He showed the proprietor that the shoe had never touched Delft, but had been made in Germany.

"The seventy-five dollar plate," wrote Mr. Bok, "was offered to me for three dollars."

Triumphs? Well, rather. But here and there a reverse. Observe.

"How much to the Twenty-third street ferry?" he asked a cab driver.

"Two dollars and fifty cents; and I'll get you there in fifteen minutes."

Mr. Bok called loudly for the manager.

"One dollar and twenty-five cents," decreed that worthy.

But did Mr. Bok get to the ferry in fifteen minutes? He did not. Did he miss his train. He did.

And then Mr. Bok stepped out of the cab. A grey liveried porter took his grips and carried them to the train shed. Mr. Bok gave him ten cents.

"Thank you very much, sir," said the grey cap, lifting said cap politely.

"Just let me have that dime," said Mr. Bok.

"Certainly, sir," said Chesterfield.

"Here, my man," said Mr. Bok, "is a quarter instead."

"It was worth it," said Mr. Bok. "It was worth it to find one man in New York who would accept a small fee and thank you for it politely."

CURATE TELLS OF JONAH'S TRIP WITH THE WHALE

MISS HELEN MAR, in a book of reminiscences, recalls an experience of a very young and nervous curate who had to discourse one morning upon the vicissitudes of Jonah and the whale. "And for three days and three nights," he began, "Jonah was in——" He blushed, stammered, stopped, and then started again. "For three days and three nights, Jonah was in——" Once more he stopped and mopped his face, from which the perspiration was literally pouring, with his handkerchief. Then he gathered his courage in both hands, and with a mighty effort he finished triumphantly: "And for three days and three nights Jonah was in the society of the whale."

IF there is a glorious thing in England which must never die it is a breakfast of bacon and eggs.—Mr. G. K. Chesterton.

KISSING BY PROXY

THE majority of the women candidates in the recent British elections showed themselves quite capable of paying back interrupters and would-be funny men in their own coin. Especially the Duchess of Atholl.

A certain rather too free and independent elector, recalling how another duchess, one of the "Gay Gordons," paid for a vote with a kiss, told her that his price was a similar salute.

"Certainly!" was the reply; "I'll give the kiss to your wife and she can pass it on."

CUES AND GIRLS

ONE thing puzzles Miss Ruby Roberts, champion woman billiards player of Australia, who is in London. She cannot understand why more women do not play billiards.

"It is splendid for health," she said, "and it is the very game for a woman with a graceful figure."

Perhaps few get such good instructors as Miss Roberts had. Charles Memmott, the Australian champion, was her uncle, and John Roberts brought her to England.

U.S. NAVAL SECRETARY DRIVES SIX-YEAR FORD

"Magic" Wilbur, Nickname of Schooldays Still Sticks—Writes Children's Stories for Hobby

JUDGE Curtis D. Wilbur, the new secretary of the United States navy, is an interesting character.

His close friends call him "Magic" Wilbur, a nickname he has had from his schooldays, when he was a shark in mathematics.

He drives a Ford car which is six years old. He is known as an author, but not of solemn law books, but children's stories. Last year he published a new volume of them.

D. Wilbur Curtis

For years he has taught a Sunday school class in the Congregational church.

Mrs. Wilbur, whose family consists of four children, boasts that she never kept a maid in her life, nor had a nurse for any of the children. She does her own work.

And Mr. Wilbur doesn't even touch wood when he boasts, in his turn, that there is no more lucky number than 13, at least for him. It is becoming uncanny now. He was married on the 13th. He tok his bride to live at 1313 Winnifred street, Los Angeles. He was admitted to the practise of law on the 13th. He became chief justice of the state supreme court on January 13. It was on March 13 that he received the brief telegram from President Coolidge notifying him that he was the man for secretary of the navy. There is no jinx in thirteen, not for Curtis D. Wilbur.

PASSENGERS ALL AMAZED AT OLD MAN'S PROWESS

Sir Frederick Haultain Once Thrown Like Sack of Meal Over Old Man's Shoulders on Train

ONCE when Sir Frederick Haultain, now chief justice of Saskatchewan, was a youth he and two other scamps looking from an upper window saw below them a certain Rev. Mr. McKillop. This gentleman was a missionary in what is now southern Alberta, and famous for his feats of strength. At the present moment he was walking along almost sedately beneath a beautiful new stove-pipe hat.

From their window the three lads roared in unison, "Where did you get that hat"

The missionary turned and surveyed them mildly, and entering the door climbed to their room. After carefully depositing the precious hat on the table, he made a rush and caught the three in his arms and bundled them downstairs into the street. There he left them while he went for his topper.

"Now then," he inquired looking them one after the other in the eye, "did you have some question to ask regarding the hat?"

"No, sir," replied one. "We have lost interest in that hat."

Years after, when Haultain had risen to be governor of the northwest territories, he happened to meet McKillop on a train. As they were laughing together over the prank, Haultain said to the old man, "You would hardly care to attempt anything so strenuous now, I suppose."

"I don't know about that," replied the venerable gentleman, seizing Haultain about the waist. In a moment the passengers were electrified to see an old man parade the length of the car with the governor of the northwest territories thrown like a sack of meal over his shoulder.

PLAYS GAME OF CHESS WHILE TAKING WALK

SIR WALTER PARRATT, master of the King's music and organist of St. George's Chapel, Windsor, who recently celebrated his eighty-third birthday, was an organist prodigy — at seven he took services at Huddersfield—whose talent has not on every occasion received the recognition it merits.

After being organist at Armitage Bridge, Great Whitley, Wigan and Magdalen College, Oxford, he was promoted to St. George's, Windsor. He was once invited to "open" the new organ in a village church. He played some pieces of classical music—but the villagers said they "would sooner have their own organist," the village shoemaker!

Sir Walter's friend, Dr. Buck, of Harrow, and he would often play a game of chess in their heads while walking in the country. The veteran organist has even been known to play a Bach fugue on the piano and a game of chess at the same time.

THEIR FIRE-PROOF SAFES

AMONGST many amusing stories told by Lord Aberdeen is one concerning an Englishman and an American who were discussing the merits of their respective fireproof safes. The Englishman said he locked up a little dog in his safe and put under it a quantity of coal and tar, which he lighted. After the fire had burned out and the safe cooled down, the door was opened, and the dog was found to be all right.

The American said he put a young rooster into his safe and surrounded the safe with wood, petroleum, coal and coke, which, when lighted, brought the safe up to a white heat.

"I suppose," said the Englishman, "you are going to say that when you opened the safe the cock came out and crowed?"

"No, sir," said the American; "it was frozen stiff."

MUST HAVE BEEN A MAN

MRS. WHARTON, the American novelist, tells this war story:

"The American wounded were being brought in from the second Marne battle, and a fussy-looking woman in a khaki uniform and Sam Browne belt knelt over the stretcher and said: 'Is this an officer or only a man?' The brawny corporal who stood beside the stretcher gave her a grim laugh and said: 'Well, lady, he ain't no officer, but he's been hit twice in the innards, both legs busted, he's got two bullets in both arms, and we dropped him three times without his lettin' out a squeak, so I guess ye can call him a man.'"

PRO COACHES ALLOWED IN AMATEUR BASEBALL

Peterboro's Success In Provincial Baseball Last Season Featured in Mark Dulmage's Annual Secretarial Report at O.B.A.A. Meeting — Cash Balance Increases.

DULMAGE RETIRES.

TORONTO, April 7.—That the fifth year of the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association was the best in its history was shown at the sixth annual meeting of the association, held at the Carls-Rite Hotel Saturday. Treasurer A. J. Walsh's report showed a balance on hand of $3,591.63, which is an increase of $724.78 over the previous year. The total receipts for the year, including balance from 1922, was $7,806.06, and the disbursements $4,214.38. The biggest asset to the treasury was the final game for the senior championship between R.C.B.C. (Toronto) and Galt, which was played at Guelph and netted $869.90. The paid attendance at the game was 7,000, which is the largest crowd that ever attended a game in Western Ontario.

Dulmage Retires.

Secretary M. B. Dulmage dropped a bomb into the executive when he announced his retirement this year from the position of secretary, after serving the office for three years. Dulmage's shoes will be hard to fill, and no doubt the election of secretary will take up a long time at the election.

Secretary's Report.

Secretary Dulmage's final report covered in every detail the activities of the association from the 1923 annual meeting to this one. In the senior and intermediate series the same teams carried off the championships for the second year in succession. In the former Galt A.A., winners of the Inter-County League, won the championship, and in the latter Canadian General Electric of Peterboro also annexed the junior championship.

The Two-in-One team, of Hamilton, carried off the juvenile championship, while the Peterboro midgets and bantams were successful in their series, so that Peterboro won four of the six championships, a record which that city has every reason to be proud of, and they showed their pride when the City Council tendered a banquet to all four teams, and made suitable presentations to each.

Raise Traveling Expenses

The first motion that 10 cents a mile will be paid teams when a third game is necessary to decided a winner and played on neutral grounds was set aside, and on an amendment, which was carried, it was raised to 15 cents per mile.

When a game is postponed on account of rain, and the team remains in town or city over night they will be payed actual hotel expenses by the home team.

After a lengthy discussion, the amendment that playing certificates be passed by the association was thrown out.

Now Control All Series.

4. "That clause 2 of the by-laws be amended as follows:—(b) Leagues in this association shall be classed in six sections for the purpose of deciding which series they are entitled to play for the Ontario championship, viz:—Senior, intermediate, junior, juvenile, midget and bantam. The executive shall have the power to make the classification." Carried.

5. "(c) The age limit in the junior series is under 20 years on May 1st, juvenile under 18 years on May 1st, midget under 17 years on May 1st." Carried.

6. "That the clause in the O.B.A.A. constitution regarding professional coaches be rescinded."—Carried.

7. "That section IV. of the by-laws (clause governing midget series) be changed to read as follows: That in these series, senior ball be used." Carried.

The vote on professional coaching was unanimous, the leagues having experienced that such coaching was decidedly needful to amateur ball.

That where a player's class is governed by an age limit and there is no team of his class in the place where he resides he may play with the nearest team of his own class." Carried.

"That By-Law No. 3, Section C be amended by adding the word "Senior" after the word 'games' in the first line, and adding the following clause—Intermediate home clubs be allowed ten cents a mile for expenses and visiting clubs legitimate traveling expenses."—Carried.

10. The following clause be added to the by-laws: "All associations, leagues or clubs affiliated to notify the secretary of the association not later than August 10th of the grounds in their district with dates available, giving rental and all expenses of said grounds, including stands, showing seating capacity and facilities for approaching grounds."

Defeated This One

11. That the following clause be added to the constitution: "No player who has been professionalized, whether by this or any other recognized association, or who has become a professional under the conditions of the amateur definition, shall be eligible for re-instatement into this association upon any ground whatsoever, and the executive shall have no power to entertain any application for the re-instatement of any such player. Any applications for re-instatement of a player expelled for any other cause must be considered at the annual meeting, and must be forwarded to the secretary of the association not later than two weeks before the date of the annual meeting."—Defeated. It produced a diversity of opinion.

12. "Every player in senior and intermediate series must secure an amateur card from the Ontario branch of the A.A.U. of C., such to be attached to his playing certificate and forwarded to the association's secretary for registration. No certificates will be issued to intermediate or senior players until such amateur cards has been presented. Players holding cards for other branches of sport need not obtain additional cards, but those already in their possession must be forwarded to the secretary.—Defeated.

Ineligible Players.

13. "Any team found guilty of playing a man over the age limit permitted in the series in which he is participating shall be automatically suspended for the balance of the season. If this occurs during the playing of the original schedule, all games won by the team with the ineligible player on its line-up shall count as wins to the teams formerly credited with defeats. If, however, a player is not to be found to be over the age limit until the semi-final or final games is reached then only the game or games in which he participates in such semi-finals shall be awarded to the opposing teams."—Defeated.

An amendment to the above that the O.B.U.A. executive have power to deal with players violating the age limit, carried without dissent.

14. "All players or clubs intending to take part in exhibition games must secure the consent of the executive of the league to which such club or player belongs before playing such games. A violation of this clause will render such club or player liable to suspension."—Carried.

15. "Any club or player who shall play under an assumed name, or who shall play on Sunday, shall be suspended from the association. The executive shall have no power to reinstate such club or player."—Carried.

Honorariums Granted.

The secretary and treasurer were voted a substantial honorarium for their year's work.

The following officers and councillors were elected: President, D. P. MacFarlane, Harriston; first vice-president, Wm. J. Snyder, Hamilton; second vice-president, J. J. Solomon, Peterboro; treasurer, A. J. Walsh, Toronto; A.R.U. of C. governor, P. M. Kennedy, Toronto. Executive committee, C. R. Penfold, Guelph; Geo. S. Martin, London; Hugh Maguire, St. Catharines; W. H. Farrell, Sudbury.

The office of secretary was left over for the incoming executive to appoint a man. In the meantime Treasurer A. J. Walsh will act as secretary.

Owing to President MacFarlane having to catch a train for home, his two appointments to council will be made within the next week.

Jones Erratic Lost to Havers

ATLANTA, Ga., April 7. — (Canadian Press).—Great Britain triumphed over the United States in an unofficial golf match for the world's championship here yesterday, when Arthur Havers, British open champion, defeated Bobby Jones, youthful United States open champion, two up and one to play on the links of the East Lake Country Club.

Jones, playing on his home course, fought valiantly for the match, but in the final holes of the game was unable to overcome the commanding lead which Havers piled up, due to Bobby's erratic start. Playing consistent golf throughout, although slightly out-driven by his opponent, Havers never once was headed after he had taken the lead.

JUNIOR LEAGUE MINUS LINDSAY

Northerners Not Displaying Much Interest in J. J. Solomon's Proposed Minor C.O.B.L. Series.

Lindsay is apparently not eager or not prepared to line up in the projected Central Ontario junior league according to the following comment in the "Post":

Considerable has been heard of a junior league in connection with the Central Ontario Baseball League with teams in Peterboro Port Hope, Cobourg, Bowmanville and Oshawa in line.

Lindsay has received no invitation to enter such a League, but it is fully expected that Lindsay will have a good junior baseball league and that the winners will be entered in the O.B.A.A., the same as in the two past seasons. This is the best way to develop good ball players. Several of last year's team are enthusiastic regarding this year's league. It is understood that 'Tubby' Williamson, Norman Mark, Harry Baker and others will manage teams in this league.

TILDEN SCORED GREAT VICTORY

Won Tournament At Augusta, Ga., Then, Lone - Handed, Two Players in Sunday Morning Thriller.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 7.—Using every variety of service and return known in the tennis world, William T. Tilden international tennis champion defeated Cedric Maor and Allen Behr single-handed on the country club courts here Sunday morning 6-3, 1-6, 6-3, in an exhibition match which came as a grand finale to the south Atlantic state tennis tournament just ended.

Tilden also proved his prowess Saturday before the largest gallery that has ever witnessed a championship tennis tournament in Augusta. With a marvellous display of court generalship, he defeated Lawrence Rice of Boston 6-1, 6-3 ,6-4 in the finals of the men's singles of the South Atlantic States tennis tournament.

Never from the beginning was the match ever in doubt. Rice fought valiantly to withstand the bewildering onslaught of the champion but without success. Showing a variety of service and return that kept the packed gallery applauding at nearly every stroke, Tilden gained point after point.

He lost in the mixed doubles final match, but paired with Mrs. Chapin he gave in to Miss Cassell and Rice only after a terrific struggle Miss Cassell and Rice won, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4. In the men's doubles finals Rice was again victorious. He and Roy Coffin defeated Major and Behr 6-4, 6-2, 6-4.

PETERBORO TEAMS WIN

Two Peterboro Ten Pin teams visited Toronto on Saturday and both came through with wins.

A team composed of Messrs. J. C. Green, Dawson, Curvin, Solomon and McDonald defeated the Harris Dairy team of Toronto by over 50 pins on the three games.

Another Peterboro team composed of Messrs. Cairns, Smithson, Dedman, Byers and Barrette defeated the Canada Ink team of Toronto by a good wide margin.

Both Peterboro teams were in great form and some good scores were set up. The games were all played at Karry's Alleys.

After the games the Peterboro bowlers were banqueted in royal style by the Toronto bowlers at the Prince George Hotel. The Toronto bowlers proved themselves real enjoyable hosts and a great time is reported by the boys.

TEACHERS WIN SECOND ROUND

The play-off of the tie in the second round in the Y.M.C.A. League resulted in a win for the Teachers, George Street(last year's champions) were the other contenders, and they looked like winners after the first game, which they took with a lead of 72 pins. The Teachers came back strong in the second game, and finished in the lead with nearly 100 pins to the good. The last and deciding game was keenly contested with the Teachers leading most of the way. They weakened, however, in the ninth and tenth frames, and only the great finish of their captain(H. H. Graham) saved them from defeat. Norman Routley was the best for George Street and Graham for the Teachers.

PITTSBURGH WIN AMERICAN TITLE.

Won Their Fourth Game From Boston Last Night By Score of 6 Goals to 1.

PITTSBURG, April 7. — (Canadian Press).—The Pittsburg puck chasers won the amateur championship of United States by defeating the Boston A. A. team, winners of the eastern section of the U.S.A.H.A. by a decisive score of 6 to 1. This was the fourth victory out of five starts against the Bostonians. After the first few minutes of play it was only a question of how decisively the riot was going to be. In justice to the visitors it must be said that they presented a weakened front owing to the absence of Geran, their ace, and Cronin, star wing man, but the yellow jackets had the better team.

Conacher put up a brilliant exhibition of hockey, both on the offensive and defence. The Pittsburg team was made up entirely of players imported from Canada.

KINGSTON SPORT WRITERS HAVE ALREADY DECIDED THE WINNERS OF CENTRAL BASEBALL LEAGUE

Kingston is Depending on Men Who Might Turn Out to Be Useless and They Are Counting Their Chickens Before They Are Hatched.

The Kingston Standard says: Grand stand managers around the C.O.B.L. circuit who have been picking Oshawa as odds on favorites to come home in front in the coming season, are due for a mighty surprise when the Kingston team steps out against the Motor City ball-tossers in the first game of the season here, May 21st, for Kingston will have a very strong team in the field, and the visitors will have to travel on all cases to cop the initial verdict.

While the local wise guys have been picking the local team, they have been placing men on the team whom Manager Daley hasn't even thought of, and incidentally they are counting baseball chickens before they are hatched. Speaking to the writer, Manager Daley stated that he would have the best infield in the circuit this year, and will trot out an infielder who should prove the best man in the league this summer. Just who he is, Manager Daley declined to disclose, but he did say that he was a dandy, and would just about "make" the local team. Together with Purvis Smith, Batstone, Compeau and Evans, the newcomer will give Kingston the best inner-works they have ever had. A solid hitter, a streak on the bases, and a nifty fielder, he is sure to prove of great strength to the team this year. Cherry will likely be a fixture in the outfield, while Nicholson will probably be on deck again, and several others will be tried out. Manager Daley made it clear that no position has been cinched, and only the men who show they have the baseball in them and can play it on the field will be seen regularly in the line-up. The team is after real strength on the field, not on paper, and with this end in view Manager Daley is rounding out the best team it is possible to get. The players have to deliver the goods to be seen on the team after a game.

Up Oshawa way it is stated that Charles Shultz will again pilot the C.O.B.L. team. His successful attempt at winning the pennant in 1923 will not doubt inspire him to put forth greater efforts this season. It was also announced that the exhibition game, carded for the first part of May, with the Strollers of Toronto, has been called off, owing to the fact that the Toronto Senior League is opening its schedule at an earlier date than expected.

OLD COUNTRY FOOTBALL RESULTS AND STANDING

Sunderland Tighten Hold On Top Position In First Division, While In the Second Leeds United Have Three Points Lead Over Bury — Review of Saturday's Games.

LONDON, April 7 (Canadian Press Cable). — As a result of Saturday's game with Middlesboro', which team they defeated 3 to 2.

Sunderland have further entrenched themselves at the head of the First League table. Bolton, who drew in a goalless game with Preston, occupy second place on goal average above Huddersfield, who defeated the Villa 1 to 0. Cardiff City ,who drew with Everton at 0 all round, are now fourth, while Sheffield United, who beat Notts County 2 to 0 away from home, rise to the fifth position above Blackburn Rovers, who drew at 1 to 1 with Nottingham Forest.

Aston Villa are seventh, and they are followed by Everton, Newcastle, Notts County, West Ham, Birmingham, Liverpool, Manchester City, Tottenham, and Burnley. The remaining six are unchanged, though as Preston drew and Chelsea lost Manchester City by 1 to 0, only a miracle can save the Pensioners from relegation.

Second Division.

In the Second Division Leeds United, who drew with Blackpool at 1 all, now lead the table by 3 points over Bury, who lost to the Crystal Palace team by 1 to 0. They are followed by Derby, who beat Port Vale 2 to 0, Blackpool and Stoke, who won 3 to 0 from Manchester United. These three teams are level in points, and take their respective positions on goal average.

Oldham, who were beaten by Coventry City 5 to 2, drop to sixth place, while Southampton, in virtue of their 5 to 0 victory over Clapton, jump to seventeenth position. They are followed by Shields, Stockport, Leicester, Wednesday, Barnsley, Clapton Orient, Manchester United, and Crystal Palace. Hull, who lost to Barnsley 2 to 1, fall to sixteenth place, below Coventry and Bradford.

Third Division.

Portsmouth and Millwall, both of which teams drew with their opponents Swansea 0 to 0, and Plymouth 1 to 1, lead the Southern Section of the Third Division with Portsmouth on top by reason of goal average. The next four are unaltered in position. Swindon and Luton, who also drew against Bristol Rovers 0 to 0, and Charlton 1 to 1, change positions. They are followed by Bristol and Newport. Charlton drop to thirteenth place below Gillingham and Norwich with Aberdare, rising to fourteenth, followed by Merthyr, Exeter, Brentford, South-End, Reading, Bournemouth and Watford.

Queen's Park Rangers are at the tail end of the table. The six leading teams of the Northern Section are unchanged, although Wolverhampton, who could only draw 2 to 2 at Barrow, are leading on goal average alone. Southport rises to seventh place through its 3 to 0 win over Grimsby Town, and is followed by Ashington Wigan. Doncaster rises to tenth position on its defeat of Hartlepool by 3 to 1 above Accrington and Halifax, who are followed by Walsall, Wrexham, Grimsby, Tranmere, Durham and New Brighton. The remainder are without change.

Some Teams Stale.

Some of the teams on Saturday revealed end of the season staleness, but others were too much engrossed with their hopes of championship or fear of relegation to afford themselves any relaxation. Attendances showed, a falling off, aggregating half a million people for 43 matches.

The largest gate of the attendance was 35,000 at Everton-Cardiff City game, but on the other hand the attendance and receipts at the amateur football cup final game both constituted records. Middlesboro surprised 30,000 spectators by an unusually fine display in the first half when they led by 1 to 0. They were another goal ahead at the opening of the second half, after which Sunderland rallied and scored three times in succession. One of these was due to Freeman, who put the ball through his own goal. The Villa were below strength owing to injuries, and Huddersfield won on a penalty. The Everton-Cardiff game was a brilliant exposition of football in which the Lancastrians enjoyed a shade by a bigger margin of attack. Burnley's left back, Evans, dislocated his elbow early in the games with Arsenal, thus facilitating the latter's 2 to 0 victory. The Spurs failed to win by reason of their chronically faulty shooting, although Grimsdell equalised against Liverpool just as the whistle went, leaving the result 1 to 1. The success of Southampton was due to McDonald and Henderson on the extreme wings, and the Orient could not hold them. Four of Southampton's five goals were directly traceable to the wing forwards and centre.

Crowd at Fulham.

Fulham's finances received a welcome addition owing to crowds strolling in to see the match with Leicester after the boat race, but 20,000 spectators did not get much for their money in the 1 to 0 London victory. Brighton's half-back, Thompson, was carried off in the first half of the game with Norwich City, which the latter won 1 to 0, but they were much aided by Jenkins' skilful one-back tactics, which repeatedly foiled the Canaries' attack.

Watford, who lost 1 to 0 to Brentford, missed several goals from centres owing to the fumbling of their inside forwards.

Johnson of McGill University, Now a Rhodes Scholar, Looked Like Champion Material to Famous English Runner

ST. JOHN, N.B., April 7.—Alfie Shrubb, former world's champion middle distance runner, predicts that Canada has a coming champion in Johnson, the McGill Rhodes scholar to Oxford, was statement made Saturday by P. J. Mulqueen, chairman of the Canadian Olympic team, on his arrival here to-day on the C. P. Steamship Montrose, from Liverpool.

Shrubb saw Johnson win the quarter mile event in the recent big track meet between Oxford and Cambridge and was greatly impressed by his style and speed. Mr. Mulqueen will seek the approval of the members of the Olympic committee to permit Johnson to remain in England and write the University examination and be ready for the Canadian team without having to return to Canada to compete in the trial events.

On his arrival Mr. Mulqueen held a conference wih A. W. Covey, president of the Maritime branch of the A.A.U. of C. and suggested that steps be taken to interest the Maritime Governments to make a grant towards financing Canadian Athletics.

With reference to Hilton Belyea, former Canadian champion single sculler who is now training in England for the diamond sculls event and the Olympics, Mr. Mulqueen said he is confident that the training will put him in condition to make a strong bid for world honors.

Stamford Bridge Race Won By H. Britton, Derby

LONDON, April 7.—(Canadian Press).—The Stamford Bridge Athletic championship ten-mile running race was won by H. Britton of the Derby and County Harriers' club in 52 minutes and 48 4-5 seconds. E. Harper of the Hallamshire Harriers and holder of the championship came second in 52 minutes, 50 seconds while C. Clibbon of the Surrey Athletic club was third, his time being 53 minutes and 24 4-5.

GENERALS MAY ENTER C.O.B.L.

A Meeting is Being Held This Afternoon in Cobourg to Try and Form an Intermediate Central League.

A meeting was held in Cobourg this afternoon in an effort to form a Central Ontario Intermediate series, consisting of Cobourg, Trenton, Canadian General Electrics and Raybestos. All these four teams are in favour of this league and a four-team loop will likely be formed.

If this league is formed it will put the kibosh on an Intermediate City League in Peterborough, but this C.O.B. League will be much better, as there are not enough teams in the class with the C.G.E. in this city to have a successful league.

The C.G.E. team expect to have as good a team as ever, while the Raybestos Company will have a much strengthened line-up, and expect to give the C.G.E. a harder battle this year than last.

Cobourg will have a number of players to pick from, and should trot out a team of senior calibre, while for Trenton there is no doubt but what they will line up a team that will make them all take their dust, and should figure in the finals.

If this league is formed with these four teams in it, there should be plenty of good baseball in this district, as a number of players on each team will be those who have taken part in games with senior teams in the past few years.

Since the C.O.B. senior league has advanced so far, and has got so much faster than in former years, the smaller towns who can not keep up with the pace have dropped out, and if baseball is to be kept moving in Ontario, leagues such as this and the Junior Central Ontario League should be formed, so as to bring along the players who would not have a chance to show all their old form if there was not any of these leagues.

Increasing Sales in "One-day towns"

"Use the Bell to Sell"

J. M. McHardy
Manager

TRAVELLERS now cover "one-day towns" in less time and more economically by Long Distance. One of them says:—

"I visit the larger centres. From a centrally located town (to keep down the cost of telephoning) I call customers in the smaller places.

"The 3rd week of the month, I call all the customers I visited the 1st week. Those visited the 2nd week are called the 4th week. They know I will call them, and they are ready to give me their orders.

"I have arranged with them that if they wish to place orders in a hurry between my visits or my phone calls, they are to call Head Office by Long Distance and the cost of the message will be deducted from our invoice.

"Any customer called upon, who is out, I call by Long Distance the next day.

"My Chief readily agreed to this plan. It works fine. Head Office has an expert telephone salesman to handle customers who telephone in."

Would this method increase YOUR sales?

AT THE REGENT

What Makes a Motion Picture Successful? Here's One Reason.

Just what is it that makes a motion picture successful? The most obvious answer seems to be public approval, for without that the picture is not a success. So the producer must put into his offering those elements which will satisfy the popular pleasure. The story is the first consideration, and when it contains a love theme the chance for success is increased. The cast must portray convincingly the various characters which the story describes. The director must make each character fit into the general scheme. The director has to watch each detail so that it corresponds with the other parts of the production. The lighting requires much planning, in order that the photography will please the eye.

The leading female characters should possess beauty as well as acting ability. The male leads should be attractive and have quality as actors.

To return to the story, it should be smooth and swift moving, without any drag in the action. Nothing that might offend can be allowed to mar it. While the end does not have to be the close-up of a pair of fond lovers, there should be a pleasant finish. The sad ending tends to take the edge off the entertainment value of a screen story. One well-known successful producer of stage plays has said, "Send them away with ae smile."

It may look as if every picture calculated by the producer to make money must be reduced to a formula. But closer examination shows this is not so. For the variety of production depends on the diversity of story material. The producer can choose from fiction and stage plays. By obtaining a story which has proved successful in either field, the maker of the picture has gone a long way on the road to successful film production, particularly when the title of the book or play has a special appeal.

When Director David Solomon was handed the scenario of "Love Letters," the William Fox production starring Shirley Mason, he felt he had a good story. He wanted to make the picture score way up near the top of the success column, so he worked out all the details that successful pictures demand. How well he has done the task can be judged by the people of Peterboro when "Love Letters" begins a three days' run at the Regent to-night.

LOCAL BOXERS GO TO TORONTO

Boxing Committee Get Three Fine Main Bouts For Show Next Week.

Several Peterborough boxers will take part in the Ontario boxing championships at Toronto, Thursday and Friday of this week. The selections will be made to-night when all the local boxers are asked to meet at the training quarters.

Early next week another boxing bill will be put on at the G.W.V.A. hall when George Smith 130 pounds, Russell Cates, 118 pounds and Gene Clay 112 pounds will be here to meet local opposition. Smith will likely meet Lorne Combe. Cates will face Ray Millard and Clay will oppose Joe Jordon.

Smith has done so well in his numeroues bouts that he is billed for professional ranks at an early date. He is the big rangy boy who met and got the decision over L. Minnicoila several weeks ago. Cates is willing to tackle Millard again, being confident that he can repeat his performance of two years ago when he slipped one over the local lad in the first round for a trip to dreamland. But Millard is now sturdy and stronger and the Toronto whirlwind will tackle a stiff job.

Gene Clay who always has a foremost part in practically every tournament held in the Queen City, because he is a top notcher in the 112 pound division will make a tidy opponent for Joe Jordon.

These three bouts give next week's show three headliners, which should excel any previous bill. The card will be one of eight bouts.

ELINOR GLYN WRITES HER GREATEST STORY: "THE WORLD'S A STAGE"

Real Studio Life at Hollywood: Royal Now Playing.

At last the screen has been given a real novelty. Those of you who have become surfeited with the ordinary romance will find in "The World's A Stage," a dramatic story of a film actress' life in Hollywood, written by no less an authority of that life than Elinor Glyn. It was Shakespeare who wrote the immortal lines—"all the world's a stage"—and the bard knew of what he was writing. He knew that we were but puppets on a huge chessboard, guided by the Supreme Playwright—that we were enacting our dramas every day.

It has taken the gifted Elinor Glyn author of "Three Weeks," and "One Day," to make drama of this expression. We all know that the players of the make-believe world must continue to entertain us, though they must hide their true feelings. Consequently an actor or actress must play two roles—one for the public, one for his or her own heart.

"The World's A Stage" gives us an insight into a screen actress' character. Here is Jo Bishop for example. The star of a cheap theatrical troupe with a repertoire of Shakespearian plays, she little dreamed that when the company stranded in a little western town that she would eventually find herself on the screen. But a famous director and his friend, a wealthy miner, noticed her performance as Juliet, and realizing that the silent drama needed new faces, the director offered her an engagement. From this point the story builds with intense interest. The drama comes stalking across the life of Jo Bishop. She fell in love at first sight with a young wastrel and married him. And though she continued to register the various emotions before the camera, her illusions were shattered. Her home life was a bigger drama than the one she interpreted on the set of the studio.

It is marvellously true to life—this picture. It carries thought and substances. What occurs is doubtless taking place in the lives of hundreds, yes, thousands of our stage and screen entertainers. "The World's a Stage" is a distinct novelty which throbs with emotion. We look upon three separate dramas—the drama enacted around Juliet's balcony—the drama enacted before the camera by the star, and the real drama of the heart and home. And by the suffering which her wastrel husband caused her before she found real happiness, she was able to embellish her art with true feeling. The picture has been given an inspired performance by the talented Dorothy Phillips who, as the star, contributes one of the most artistic portrayals of her long and varied screen career. Assisting her are Kenneth Harlan, Bruce McRae, Otis Harland and others. All render capable support. Colin Campbell's direction is exceptionally praiseworthy.

DOROTHY PHILLIPS IN HER GREATEST ROLE

There is no doubt that Dorothy Phillips, the star of the Principal Picture, "The World's A Stage," written by Elinor Glyn, has had more screen successes than any other actress. Her talent—her gift of expression needed the finest kind of dramatic stories and characterizations. And she has received them. You who saw her in "Hurricane's Gal," "Hell Morgan's Girl," "Hearts of Humanity," and "Man, Woman, Marriage," will see an actress whose versatility knows no bounds. In her last picture, "Hurricane's Gal," she played the role of a tempestuous, dynamic daughter of a deep-sea skipper—a girl brought up on the briny deep.

In "The World's A Stage," Miss Phillips plays an entirely different role. She brings out all the humanness—the vitality, the sincerity of the role in a manner which stamps her as superb artiste.

AT THE GRAND

ARLIE MARKS TO-NIGHT

Arlie Marks and her popular players open a three days engagement at The Grand Opera House to-night presenting a comedy of Irish life entitled "My Irish Cinderella." This is an entirely new offering and Miss Marks has a role which displays her talents as a comedienne at her best.

The company comprises fifteen carefully selected people and up-to-date vaudeville will be given between the acts.

"BRINGING UP FATHER."

In the course of every-day life one more or less comes across many odd characters. Not so long ago a well-known politician who had just been appointed campaign manager of a Western Senator who was running for Governor made a tour of the State in the interest of his man. The manager thought he would first sound the sentiment of the farmers, and at once made a trip in a locality dominated by the Swedish population. As a rule these people are usually well informed about what is going on in the world, especially as relating to American affairs and politics. They are intelligent, law-abiding and wide-awake, and form an important adjunct in the country's development and progress.

The first man the politician encountered was a lanky Swede who was lazily perched on a log apparently in the throes of deep thought. The Swede greeted the stranger abstractedly, and before long the two were on intimate terms.

By way of opening the manager inquired what the Swede thought of Wilson, Roosevelt, Taft, Hiram Johnson and a number of other well-known men in the public eye, incidentally mentioning the candidate for whom he was electioneering. To all the questioning the rural Swede simply drawled: "Aye don't know."

"Well, look here," insisted the visitor, "you must have some opinion, you and your neighbors must have talked over things among yourselves; who do you think has the best show?"

There was a pause. Evidently the query had been given plenty of consideration. After a half minute of silence the Swede replied:

"Aye think 'Bringing Up Father' got the best show."

Which brings to mind that the latest musical comedy based on the famous cartoons of the same name will play a return engagement at the Grand Opera House next Saturday matinee and night. The new play is in two acts and five scenes, and is entitled "Bringing Up Father on Broadway."

RUTH ST. DENIS WITH TED SHAWN AND THE DENISHAWN DANCERS.

Ruth St. Denis Will Take American Ballet to Europe.

The name and fame of Ruth St. Denis are as great in Europe as in America. London, Paris and Berlin have paid their tribute to the famous dancer who, with Ted Shawn and the Denishawn Dancers, is annouced to appear here at the Grand Opera House on 14th April.

London acclaimed her at the very outset of her career when alone and unaided by any assistance other than music, she danced for many consecutive weeks in a London theatre. Afterward followed two years in Germany when she appeared night after night with never a week of rest. Last spring the famous Coliseum of London, one of the largest theatres there, was not large enough to hold all who wanted to see these dancers when they filled a six weeks' engagement there.

This latest London success has led to a still more ambitious plan, and one which will be put into effect in a season or so, the taking to Europe of an entirely American ballet for a tour of England, France, Spain, Italy, Germany, and the Scandinavian countries. It would be similar to the tours undertaken here by the Pavlowa and Diaghileff ballets and Miss St. Denis' own organisation. It would not only be American in its personnel, but also, in the general make-up of the repertoire.

'I believe that such a ballet would be well received and would be a big step towards adequate expression for American dancing," she said when outlining the plan in a recent interview. "It would gain for our native dancing art a recognition which we now lack over there. They would see that we have interests above the 'Chicago toddle,' the 'shimmy,' and the other jazz dances which represent American dancing in the minds of Europeans. The themes which we would use would be something from the early history of America, perhaps the story of the Aztec Indians, the legends of Hiawatha, and we would want to do one around the Eskimos."

That work on this plan has already been begun is shown in the Toltec dance drama "Xochitl," which will be on the programme here, and the American Indian drama to be produced next season, for which the music is now being composed by Cadman. It will be recalled that Cadman's Indian opera, "Thanewis," was produced not long ago at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, and proved conclusively that the composer was well qualified to treat with our native folklore and music.

AT THE CAPITOL

TARKINGTON'S FIRST A MEIGHEN KNOCKOUT

Booth Tarkington's done it—written an original story for the screen—and for Tom Meighen at that. It's "Pied Piper Malone," which opens at the Capitol Theatre today, a comedy-drama with the star in the role of Jack Malone, third mate of the S. S. Langland, Captain Clarke in command. George Fawcett plays the Captain. Malone is a regular "Pied Piper" to all the kiddies in town. He is "Uncle Jack" to all.

In this case there's not a girl in every port, only in Oldport, Jack's home town, and that's Patty Thomas, the mayor's daughter. Lois Wilson has this part. Charlie Crosby (Cyril Ring), second officer of the Langland, has always claimed Patty as his girl. There is great rivalry between the two men.

Malone is unjustly accused of the responsibility for the loss of the Langland while under the influence of liquor when on duty. Only his parents, Patty and the children, believe in him. He beats up Charlie Crosby, when he finds him urging Captain Clarke to "have another" on him in Oldport's only blind tiger. He brings Clarke back into the good graces of the community, the latter in turn sets Jack aright with the townfolk. Malone gets another vessel for Clarke and sails himself as first officer. Patty is on the dock to see them off. She will be waiting—for Jack when they return.

Alfred Green directed the production which Tom Geraghty adapted. Charles Stevenson, Joe Burke and others are in the cast.

BIGGEST SHOW OF SEASON CAPITOL TODAY, TUES., WED.

The biggest show of the season is at the Capitol Theatre today, Tuesday and Wednesday, when no less than twelve reels of film, one big act of vaudeville and a big local production with popular Peterboro' people in the cast, will be offered. Thomas Meighan, in his latest production, "Pied Piper Malone," is the feature presentation. In this comedy (written by Booth Tarkington) Mr. Meighan is supported by Lois Wilson and George Fawcett, and it is reported to be even a greater success than was Mr. Meighan's earlier picture, "The Bachelor Daddy," which "Pied Piper Malone" closely resembles. Along with feature is Will Rogers in his latest two-reel comedy hit, "Two Waggons — Both Covered," a parody in that great success, "The Covered Wagon," in which Rogers plays all the principal roles. A single reel educational comedy completes the comedy line-up. A Pathe News will also be shown. The vaudeville consists of one of the best acts seen in Peterboro' in many months. The O'Brien Sisters and Co. will present their snappy music and dancing act which has just completed a tour of the big-time circuits. As a special added attraction the Peterboro' Little Theatre Club will offer a comedy in one act, "Melange," or "Three Women and a Man," by Kathleen L. McCarthy (Jeanpette of The Examiner staff), presented by a cast of popular young society people, including Mrs. W. McKee Bingham, Miss Claire Mason, Miss Dorothy Engel, Mr. J. Gaiger, Miss Mathilde Masson, Miss Jean Eastwood, and Miss Audrey Huycke. A novel feature of this production is the introducing of a fashion revue with costumes in the latest spring modes from Richard Hall & Co.

BRAUNDPORT WANTS ELECTRIC SERVICE

Deputation Waited on Utilities Commission This Morning--Waterworks Office Authorized at $13,000.

The Utilities Commission was asked this morning to consider extension of the electric light and power system to Braundport, and has taken the matter under consideration. A report will be received from H. O. Fisk, local manager, before any steps are taken.

A deputation, consisting of Messrs. Braund and Johnston asked for an extension of electric power to Braundport.

Mr. Johnston said a petition was handed in last summer, with all property owners signing, and personally he wanted light for his house and barn.

Mr. Hicks said the Commission would serve anyone outside the city where the revenue would warrant the expenditure. It might be necessary in Braundport to use a master meter, and the meter reading outside the city is an important matter.

Mr. Braund said three stoves will probably be installed.

Mr. Fisk was instructed to make a comprehensive report on the whole question.

New Office.

Ross Dobbin, superintendent of the Waterworks Department, was instructed to proceed with the construction of a waterworks office, workshop, and storehouse on Aylmer Street, near the new sub-station.

The cost will be $13,000, and the work will be done by the Department.

To carry on the work more economically and efficiently, the superintendent was authorised to purchase a small cement mixing machine.

It was decided to charge arrears of water and light on certain properties against them, and have the amounts collected in the taxes.

A report was read from the superintendent on an application for a water main on Wolfe Street, estimating its cost at $412.00 and the revenue at $40.50.

The application was laid over.

The City Trust will be asked to consider the construction of an outside stairway to the new meter room in the city building.

The City Council was asked to construct a sidewalk on the west side of Aylmer Street from Sherbrooke t. Dalhousie Streets. This will run along the Commission's new sub-station.

EMPLOYMENT NOT PICKING UP MUCH

Newcomers From the Old Country Willing to Take a Chance.

The employment situation in this city is about the same as it has been all winter. The factories are still working fairly steady, but very few men are being taken on. Several men left last night for Kingston to obtain work on Great Lakes boats for the summer months, which is much better than lying idle most of the summer. Work seekers from England and Scotland are still coming in, and when one of these immigrants was questioned why he came here and if he knew the conditions of this country before he arrived, he said that he knew that the conditions were not very bright here, but that they were so bad in England that he took a chance of coming here to get a job, to get away from England, where no work at all could be obtained. He said that you had to get a living somewhere, and that it was almost impossible to do so in the old country.

Although the situation here looks dull at present, this man says that this condition is nothing when compared with that of London where the streets are thronged with beggars and such like persons striving for any kind of a living. The situation here is about the same now as for the last couple of months, with about the same number of men being employed as new applicants for work, thus leaving the same number of men out of work. About the only places that men are obtaining work at present is on the farms, while it is expected that some will obtain work on the spring drives in the future.

Last week there were 31 new applicants and 25 placements, adding 6 more to the long waiting list of unemployed.

RAILWAY IMMIGRATION PLANS ARE PRESENTED

LONDON, April 7.—(Canadian Press Cable).—Representatives of Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways who waited on the overseas settlement committee today with regard to the new plan for the emigration of boy settlers for Canada received a rather an unexpected set back.

It was proposed by the railways that boys should be accepted from individual households as distinct from the institutions and that these so selected should proceed to hostels maintained by the railways preparator to taking up farming in Canada.

It is understood that the government is unwilling to sanction breaking up of households and William Lunn, parliamentary secretary to overseas trade department told the railway representatives that the official support could not be extended to their plan.

OBITUARY

MARGARET THORNTON

There passed away in Toronto, on Sunday, April 6th, Margaret Thornton, widow of the late John Kincaid, of Peterboro. The deceased was in her 82nd year, and has been residing with her daughter, Mrs. T. H. Hamilton, 72 Crescent Road, Toronto, where death occurred.

MISS NELLIE FIFE.

(Edmonton Journal).

Friends of Mr. J. A. Fife, inspector of schools, and Mrs. Fife, will be sorry to learn of their recent loss, after a short illness, of their sister, Miss Nellie Fife, of Peterboro, Ontario, who has been visiting her brother for the past six months. In her home she was always a beloved member, ministering to each sick one in turn, and with her bright cheerfulness and never failing interest in all that occurred, added much to the family life. Her's was a life of self-sacrifice and service, and with her friends as with her family she was always willing to go to the one in trouble. She was a devout Christian and her motto might well have been "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ."

The funeral service was held on Tuesday, April 1st, from the First Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. McQueen and the Rev. F. D. Roxburgh officiating.

Interment was made in the Edmonton cemetery, in the family plot. Many friends of the family who had become her friends, attended the service, and the floral tributes were beautiful. The pall-bearers were: Mr. D. N. MacLeod, Mr. Geo. Montgomery, Professor James Adam and Mr. J. T. Ross, Deputy Minister of Education, Mr. W. J. Carter and Rev. J. A. Jaffary.

Financial News and Views

Canadian Stock Exchange and Mines | New York Stock Exchange and Curb Prices

TO-DAY'S QUOTATIONS AND OPINION AND REVIEWS OF THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK, April 7.—The New York Market was listless on the opening with a tendency to sell off at the opening but trading became narrow as the session progressed, and at noon there was no marked change either way. Foreign news is expected to move the market either one way or the other within the next few days.

THE MINING MARKET.

The Mining Market was active this morning with a good demand for the better class of stocks. Hollinger was well bought. Lake Shore was perhaps the feature of the market. A party of financiers from across the line visited this property over the week-end, and came back with very optimistic reports. Hattie, among the lower-priced stocks, showed accumulation on the report that a pool was being formed by American capital. The Toronto market was quiet with no special feature. There is a good demand for Maple Leaf Common, and in the last few days it has advanced four points.

POLICE HAVE NO TRACE OF THIEF

W. C. T. U. Ladies Were Victims of Light Fingered Artist--No Round-up Made Yet.

An afternoon tea at the home of Mrs. M. A. Morrison, 452 Hunter Street, under the auspices of the W. C.T.U., was the scene of an outrage on Thursday when a thief collected sums reported to vary from $5.00 to $50.00 from coats and wraps laid off by the ladies. The tea was a most successful affair, attracting a large number of ladies, who crowded the downstairs part of the house, and it is understood that a large sum of money was obtained.

The happening had been kept quiet by the police in an endeavour to locate the culprit, but inquiries at the Police Station this morning elicited the information that no arrests have been made. Since the hallway was crowded throughout the evening the authorities are puzzled as to how the thief succeeded in making his way to the room where the coats were left.

CLAIMS MAYOR IS NOT WORKING MAN

Election Contest in Montreal Provides a Few Thrills.

MONTREAL, April 7.— (Canadian Press.) — Montreal electors voted to-day to elect Mayor and 21 Aldermen. The Mayoralty candidates are: Mederic Martin, who has held office since 1914, Charles Duquette, who is considered as the present Mayor's most dangerous rival, and T. H. Petit. Out of thirty-five aldermen to be elected, fourteen had been elected by acclamation.

The present Mayor at one meeting held on Sunday, not liking some of the remarks that were thrown at him by a local lawyer, descended from the platform, from which he was speaking, and attempted to chastise his interrupter. His efforts were successful, for he sent the lawyer to the floor with a punch that hit him in the belt.

Mayor Martin has appealed for re-election on his record for economical government and the fact that he belongs to the working classes. Mr. Duquette has argued the Mayor has not been a working man for thirty years. Mr. Duquette has claimed the administration of Monteral has been extravagant and has pointed to the constantly tax rate as proof of his assertion.

The Montreal Gazette to-day says: "A review of the situation indicates quite clearly that only the final push is needed in order that Mayor Martin be defeated."

MAN DROPS DEAD WHEN HE PREPARED FOR WORK

STRATFORD, April 7.—(Canadian Press).—Thomas Wcodall, aged 56, fell dead almost immediately after his arrival for work at the Canadian National Railway shops this morning. After leaving his house Mr. Woodall discovered that he had forgetten his overalls, and hurried back for them. He reached the sheps shortly after the scheduled time, and was walking down the passageway when he collapsed. Death is believed due to heart failure.

MAYOR TURNER IS HIGHLY SATISFIED

Expresses Appreciation of Help Given on Saturday—Wishes to Remain on Speaking Terms With Boys and Girls.

The Mayor says he had a very busy but a very happy afternoon on Saturday when the girls and boys of the city were his guests on the Market Square. The weather was ideal, the crowd large, and the conduct of the company splendid. Of course, there was hurrying to pass the base of supply, which was natural in both adults and children, but the order was splendid and the assistance rendered by the ladies and gentlemen was much appreciated.

The Mayor hopes to have the pleasure of meeting his guests again at some future time.

In the meantime it would be nice if the boys would touch their caps and the girls say how-do-you-do to His Worship when they meet him hurrying about the city.

WEEK END ORATORY REVEAL WEAKNESS

Government Courting Disaster in Attempting New Legislation.

LONDON, April 7. — (Canadian Press).—The week-end speeches of Arthur Greenwood, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Health, and William Graham, Financial Secretary to the Treasury, in which the former admitted inexperience on the part of the Labor Ministers, "who were not drawn from the social strata 'providing rulers,'" and the latter foresaw the defeat and mutilation for the Government in trying to carry urgent measures of social redress seemed to disclose the fact that some of the lesser lights of the Government party realize the truth of the assertions exultingly made by opponents of the Government that its difficulties are increasing.

T. W. Stamford, Labor member for West Leeds, in a speech referring to the recent strike of the transport workers, declared that former Premier Stanley Baldwin, compared with Lloyd George, showed up as a thorough English gentleman in appealing to Conservative M.P.'s not to provoke discussion on the strike during the critical negotiations to end the dispute. Stamford said Lloyd George appeared capable of trying to snatch political advantage from any catastrophe, and chose that particular time to make a bitter and uncalled for attack on Premier MacDonald.

STRIKING SHIPYARD MEN REJECTED AWARD

SOUTHAMPTON, England, April 7.—(Canadian Press).—The striking shipyard workers here have rejected by a large majority the advice of their leaders to resume work. This means, according to a recent decision of the federated employers, that men in all shipyards of the country will be locked out Thursday.

Shipyard unions have declared that the Southampton strike brought to enforce the demand for increased pay, was irregular and unofficial, and the employers decided at a meeting on April 1 that one hundred thousand Shipyard workers would be locked out April 10, unless the Southampton men abandoned their strike before that time.

MAYOR IS OPEN FOR ENGAGEMENT

Offers to Speak at Public Meetings in Support of the C. G. E. By-law to Ensure a Large Vote.

Asked to-day about the Canadian General Electric by-law, His Worship Mayor Turner told The Examiner he is certain it will pass with a large majority, and indications from reports received by him are that the majority will be sufficient to show the company that the extension in Peterboro is appreciated.

In order to further assure a sweeping majority and a big vote, His Worship intimated that he is open to speak for ten to fifteen minutes at public gatherings or elsewhere on behalf of the by-law, when he will explain it in all its phases, if invited to do so. The electors will vote on this expansion on Wednesday, April 23.

IN MEMORIAM.

MUNROE — In memory of my dear father, Daniel Munroe (of Havelock), who passed away April 8th, 1918:

Six years have passed and gone,
Since one I loved so well,
Was taken from our home on earth
With Jesus Christ to dwell,
The flowers I place upon his grave
May wither and decay,
But the love for him who sleeps beneath,
Shall never fade away
Our lips can't tell how we miss him
Our hearts cannot tell what to say,
God alone knows how we miss him,
In our home that is lonesome today.

TO ENFORCE CARRYING OUT TORONTO'S VIADUCT

TORONTO, April 7.—(Canadian Press).—Active measures to enforce the carrying out of the orders of the Dominion Railway Board for construction of viaduct along Toronto's waterfront which will have as an incidental result bringing into use of the "new" union station, has been launched by the Toronto Harbor Commissioners.

In a writ issued at Osgoode Hall to-day the commissioners sue the C.P.R. and C.N.R. and City of Toronto, for judgment enforcing orders of railway board. Unstated damages are asked.

LABOR GOVERNMENT IS SHAKEN BY REVERSES BUT SURVIVES DEFEAT

Division on the Rents Bill Left MacDonald With Minority of Nine Votes, And An Amendment In Committee Showed Even Wider Margin But Without Political Consequences — Only a Few Liberals Supported the Opposition to the Government — Rental Measure Immature and Ill-Considered.

DEBATE WAS DISORDERLY.

LONDON, April 8 (Canadian Press). — By a small majority of only 9 votes, the Labour Government suffered in the House of Commons last night, one of those defeats which Premier MacDonald contemplated when he assumed office, and then declared that it would not involve the resignation of the Ministry because of the peculiar position of his Government, which is in the minority in Parliament.

The Government's defeat came on an amendment offered by Neville Chamberlain, Unionist, to the Rents Bill, opposing the second reading. This Bill had already been the cause of much opposition in the House, and it was hardly expected that the Prime Minister could carry the measure in its present form.

Emergency Measure.

In point of fact, the defeat was not on the question of principle, all the parties being agreed upon the necessity of giving relief to prevent the eviction of tenants who were unemployed, but they disagreed on the method of applying that relief. In the course of yesterday's exciting and rather disorderly debate the Prime Minister frankly admitted the hasty and immature nature of the Government's proposals, but excused the Ministers on the ground that the Bill was really an emergency measure intended to effect within days what ought properly to occupy weeks, and he contended that the method of attaining what all the paries desired was a subject to thresh out in committee, not on the second reading debate.

The tactics of the two Opposition parties were aimed at forcing the Government to withdraw altogethes the clause in the Rents Bill which proposed to give Courts the power to refuse an eviction order in the case of tenants who were out of employment.

Minister Wheatley, in charge of the Bill, had produced an amended version of the clause which was intended to throw the loss thereby sustained by the landlords on public funds, but the method by which this was to be accomplished was characterised by Mr. Asquith, the Liberal leader, as "meaningless, impracticable, and worthless."

Many Interruptions.

Mr. Maconald, in his attempts to explain the Government's position, was subjected to much interruption, which drew reproof from the Speaker of the House. The motives underlying the Opposition attacks seemed to be to discredit the Government. Mr. Asquith's attitude in offering to give the Bill a second reading, of the Government would withdraw the objectionable clause, appeared to be directed at proving that the Government could only accomplish legislation by grace of the Liberal Party.

The Ministers stood to their guns and refused to withdraw the clause, and Mr Wheatly poured oil on the flames by declaring it was unworthy that the representatives of the nation should sit and quibble in the face of such an urgent situation.

To Placate Scots.

Austen Chamberlain declared that the clause was a sham, the only object of which was to compose the differences in the Labour Party—this being a reference to the general belief that the Government is being driven by its Clydeside section.

Division was taken, and the vote stood 221 to 212, the figures being declared amid great excitement and the usual cries of "Resign."

Mr. MacDonald resisted Stanley Baldwin's attempt to adjourn the debate and proceeded to explain that by its vote the House had rejected the whole Bill. He reiterated that the proper course would have been to amend the clause in committee, and he declined to make a new precedent of doing things in a most improper manner He promised a further statement to-day on the Government's intentions, and the House proceeded to routine business.

Defeated in Committee.

The Government suffered another defeat in the Committee on Ways and Means in the House of Commons last night, when an amendment on a minor financial question was carried against it by a vote of 207 to 170. The defeat does not involve political consequences.

An analysis of the voting in the division on the Rents Bill shows that the Liberals were in complete disagreement on whether to oppose the Government or not Although Mr Asquith demanded withdrawal of the clause objected to, neither he nor the other Liberal ex-Ministers ventured to go into the division lobby against the Bill They all abstained from voting.

Only 25 Liberals voted against the Government, the remainder either abstaining or voting with the Government. The explanation suggested is that it would have been bad electioneering tactics for the Liberals to be found voting against the Government on this question.

GIVE PRAIRIES ONE PARLIAMENT

Idea of Winnipeg Business Man Premised On the Opinion That "West Is Governed to Death."

CALGARY, Alta., April 8. — (Canadian Press)—"If I had my way about it, I would eliminate all the legislative assemblies between the western boundary of Ontario and the western boundary of Alberta, dispose of all the members of the legislature and the lieutenant governor in that district, then set up one province with one parliament, say at a central point like Regina, with a man like the late James Ashdown and three or four other good men to run it."

This was the declaration of Alex MacDonald, of Winnipeg, veteran wholesale grocer of Western Canada, who in these words summed up his opinion of his friend for more than fifty years, the late James H. Ashdown, pioneer merchant of the West, whose death occured on Saturady afternoon.

"We are governed to death," stated Mr. MacDonald, but he also explained that despite this he had always had and maintained the greatest faith in Western Canada.

PAPER WILL RECORD

OGDENSBURG, April 7.—The world's record in paper production for a single machine has been broken at the plant of the Algonquin Paper Company here, officials of the company claimed to-day. During a continuous 24 hour run, the machine produced 102.9 tons of paper.

Irish Authorities Expect Arrests Soon.

LONDON, April 7. — The Irish Free State authorities are hot on the trail of the men who on March 1st fired a machine gun into a party of unarmed British soldiers at Queenstown, killing a number of them, it was learned to-day. Two of the men who participated in the attack have been identified, it was declared, and arrests may be expected shortly.

It was asserted in authoritative circles that a speedy trial would follow the arrests and the crime, which all sections of the Irish population hastened to condemn, would be atoned for as far as humanly possible.

Salary Increases Fell Behind Cost of Living.

OTTAWA, April 8. Canadian Press —The pay of civil servants in the Department of Customs increased 47.62 per cent. from February, 1914, to February, 1924, and the increase in the Department of Agriculture was 29.5 per cent.

These figures, which are based on the average monthly salary paid to full time civil servants without cost of living bonus, were given in the House of Commons on Monday afternoon by Hon. A. B. Copp, Secretary of State, Ottawa. A similar answer, which was drawn forth by a question from W. G. Macquarrie (Conservative, New Westminster) stated that the cost of living figures of the Department of Labor, for February, 1924, were 52 per cent. higher than those of February, 1914.

417 Made Widows And Orphans By Coal Mine Blast

CASTLE GATE, Utah, April 8.—Usually a mine disaster is forgotten by all but the folk in the grief-stricken community before the victims are buried.

This is the story of those who cannot forget.

Newspapers carried the story of the explosion in the Utah Fuel Company mine here in which 173 men were killed.

Here's the story of a survey made after the disaster.

The survey showed:

That the blast affected 417 dependents, of whom 25 are expectant mothers and 37 are babies under one year of age.

Boys over 16 and girls over 18 are not listed as dependents.

That 143 of the families which lost their breadwinner had no income or asset other than the wage of the men who were killed. Only one of the 173 victims owned his home.

That only 22 of 173 men carried life insurance totaling $50,000.

That in the Horace Simpson family both father and son were killed, leaving as dependents the widow and nine children. Mrs. Simpson expects to become a mother again in May or June.

TAX REDUCTION IS BUDGET HOPE

Hon. J. A. Robb Is Also Expected to Report No Increase In Net Debt, But the Tariff Changes Appear Doubtful — The Government In Straits.

OTTAWA, April 8. —Canadian Press).—When Hon. J. A. Robb, Acting Minster of Finance, brings down the Budget on Thursday, it is expected that he will announce some reductions in taxation, that a balance between expenditure and revenue was reached in the financial year which closed a week ago and that, for the first time since the war, there was no increase in the net debt. Full figures of expenditure and revenue for the year are not yet available but in customs and excise revenue alone, there was an increase over the previous year of twenty million dollars.

That there will be reductions in the taxation has already been indicated by the Government. In Parliamentary corridors, it is taken for granted that the sales tax will be either reduced or removed altogether from implements of production but considerable doubt exists if, in addition, there will be any considerable reductions in the customs tariff.

Here the attitude of the Progressives will be of especial importance. Progressives have urged not merely a reduced tariff on agricultural implements but reductions in the targenerally. Should any tariff reductions granted be insufficient to meet the Progressive viewpoint, a critical political situation it not unlikely to result. Last year, on the main Budget motion, the Government found itself opposed by Conservatives and the great majority of Progressives, resulting in a narrow Government majority of eight. Since then the Government has lost two by-elections to Conservatives which on a division, would count four against the Government.

The general expectation however is that the Government will secure Progressive support sufficient to carry its financial proposals.

Prince Henry to Lead Athletes of Britain.

LONDON, April 7—Prince Henry third son of King George, will do the honors for Great Britain at the opening of the Olympic games in the Colombes Stadium, near Paris, on August 5, leading the British Athletes in the Grand March past the reviewing stand.

The British have high hopes of making a good showing in the Olympic finals, particularly since the wearers of the Union Jack took third place among the 17 countries competing in the winter sports at Chamonix. The British are spending £30-000 to equip and maintain their Olympic teams of which only £2,600 remains to be raised.

Says American Books Soiled By Sex Lure.

TROY, N.Y., April . — The Rev. George Elliott, of New York, editor of The Methodist Review, made a bitter attack on "best sellers" in an address before the Troy Methodist Conference here.

"Never in the history of American literature has it been so soiled by the stink of sex," he declared.

"People are taking to books, magazines, and newspapers that stress sex like flies to unwholesome objects. Are you men flies? Or are you bees who take to the gardens of literature? Don't read a book simply because it is a best seller."

LIEN ON CARS MOVING BOOZE IS PROTECTED

The Confiscation of Cars Would Re-act Against Notes — Amendment to O.T.A. Safeguards Bona Fide Lien Holder--Rural Municipalities Must Comply With Statute Labor Regulations.

MANY BILLS PASS.

TORONTO, April 8.—(Canadian Press).—The Leigslature finished all the work that was ready for it at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon. The committees are yet behind in their work and some legislation which could have been gone ahead with was not yet printed. The most important measures considered yesterday were the amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act and the Highways act which went through committee of the whole.

The amendments to the highways act provide that townships which abolish statute labor must appoint a road superintendent and the government will pay half his salary. It will also pay 30 per cent of the amount spent on roads by the township. The superintendent does not have to be an engineer bust must be qualified man. The Prime Minister acting Minister of Highways in the absence of Hon. Geo. Henry, said it had been startling in the past the number of townships which had got aid from the province after evading the regulations. They had charged up the value of their statute labor as money being spent on roads and asked the province to give its proportion on the total including this charge. The Premier said that 131 townships out of 330 had done this. "If they are to get public moneys they must comply with the regulations" said the Premier who added there would be no aid to townships continuing statute labor.

O.T.A. Amendments.

The amendments to the O.T.A. were changed little from those outlined by Hon. W. F. Nickle when the bill was given second reading. Mr. Nickle said there had been objection from many about the clause which permitted confiscation of autos caught in the illegal transport of liquor. Most autos had lien notes against them and it was thought that such a thing should be left to the Minister and executive clemency or otherwise there would be abuses. No bona fide lien holder would suffer under the cause, and it passed without amendment. The bill also gives the right to the license commission to withdraw the permit of a druggist who sells illegally and tightened up the reports made on sales. A complementary bill gives the Pharmacy Council greater disciplinary action with its members found breaking the temperance act.

Arrest Without Warrant.

Another of the amendments gives the right to arrest, without a warrant, any one carrying liquor. It is aimed to help police stop large cargoes of liquor without having to get a warrant. The same clause would give the police right to arrest a man with a single bottle without taking out a warrant. Attorney General Nickle said that generally speaking the druggists of the province were making praise-worthy efforts to carry out the act and to assist in its carrying out.

Highway Costs.

The House passed 31 bills through third reading in about twenty minutes. In reply to a question the Premier as Minister of Highways gave the following costs on certain section of provincial roads: Toronto to Clappison's corners on the Dundas highway, 32.6 miles, $3,167,900 or $97,152 per mile; Hamilton to Ancaster 4.3 miles $521,882 or $121,086 per mile; Hamilton to Grimsby, 12.1 miles $839,534, or $69,383 per mile; Whitby to Toronto, 22.9 miles, $1,743,091 or $76,117 per mile. He also informed the house that of the 1842 miles of provincial highway in the province that 355 miles had been surfaced. It was estimated that 700 miles would be laid with permanent surface in the next five years at a cost of $28,000,000 or $35,000 a mile.

Another answer to a question brought out the information that the last provincial election had cost $407,000 and the election in 1919 $851,000. In the 1919 election the cost included expense of registration etc.

The House was told that in 1920 matriculation standing became necessary for those wishing to take the degree courses at the Ontario Agricultural College. In the three years before this new regulation 417 had entered for the course and 315 since. The continuation of matriculation standing for entrance was under consideration said the Premier.

BRITISH PLANE AT CORFU HELD UP FOR ENGINE

Serious Setback in the Schedule Results From Disabled Engine That Will Require Replacement--Narrowly Escaped Colliding With Cliff Near Havre.

PROGRAM ALL UPSET.

LONDON, April . — (Canadian Press Cable.) —The British world flight aviators, with Stuart MacLaren piloting the racers round the world, who expected to be able to leave Corfu on Saturday or Sunday, after a week's delay there following a compulsory landing at Corfu, find the damage to the engine much more serious than at first thought. An expert who rushed to Corfu from England with spare parts for the disabled engine found that the damage was worse than had been anticipated.

A new engine is indispensable for the continuance of the flight and while this is being despatched from England another delay of nine or 10 days will be necessary.

Barely Missed Cliff.

The airmen narrowly escaped colliding with a cliff near Navre in a fog on their first day of flight. Their plane was damaged when they were crossing Italy and the present hold-up follows a forced landing at St. Matthews, Lake Corfu.

It was estimated at the outset that the journey round the world might be completed in four months, including stops for overhaul purposes, but this early hold-up entailing the spending of nearly a month on the first 1,500 miles out of approximately 23,000 miles has seriously upset the calculations of the flyers. There is still a flight of over 4,000 miles before Kare Shi, Persia, is reached, this point marking the goal of the first of five sections into which the flight is diivded.

PEOPLE'S PARTY LOSE AT POLLS

The Extreme Nationalists Show Gains in Bavarian Diet Elections But Are Not Representative of Majority.

BERLIN, April 8. — The final figures in the Bavarian Diet elections held Sunday, will not be known for several days, but it seems assured that some 25 Extreme Nationalists have been elected out of a total Diet Membership of 132. The Extreme Nationalists had no members in the last Diet as the party had not been formed when the elections were held.

It is expected that the Peoples' party, although it has suffered heavy losses, still will be the strongest faction in the new Diet. It is believed, however, that it will be obliged to form a coalition with the Socialists and the Democrats.

The elections seem to have proved that although the supporters of General Ludendorff and Adolph Hitler are very strong in Bavaria, and especially in Munich, they do not comprise a majority of the people.

A referendum held currently with the elections on the question of appointment of a president of Bavaria, and the establishment of a second chamber of Parliament, resulted in the rejection of both proposals by large majorities.

NATIONS FYLE THEIR ACCORDS

Italy and Jugo-Slavia Register Agreement With the League of Nations — Support Each Other In Defence.

GENEVA, April 8.— The texts of the accords signed by Italy and Jugo-Slavia in January were jointly registered by the League of Nations Monday. They show, in the opinion of League officials, that they can be classed under the heading of regional guarantees and defensive alliances, provided for by the pact of the mutual gusrantees elaborated by the last League Assembly. There are nine of the accords, of which the first three are the most important.

The first is called a pact of friendship. In it Italy and Jugo-Slavia engage mutually to support one another for the maintenance of order established by the various treaties of peace. It defines the attitude each signatory shall take in case of unprovoked attack against the other, or in the event the security or interest of one of the parties is menaced in consequence of an aggression or because of international complications.

The second is a protocol under which the signatories promise to communicate to each other any agreement entered into touching upon their policies in Central Europe.

The third accord defines the settlement of the Fiume question,

PAVING PROBLEMS AGAIN ENGAGE CITY FATHERS IN A DISCUSSION THAT ENDS IN MERE COMPROMISE

No Decision Reached on Material to Be Used--Last Year's Bylaw Specified Concrete But Tenders Will Be Asked on Three Substances--Local Labor Urged--Late Return of Tax Roll Considered.

CLAIMS AGAINST CITY

Paving problems occupied the attention of the City Council at its regular meeting last night, and carried it into five minutes of overtime from which emerged a decision to call for tenders for three substances and a decision not to bind the Council to re-surface George Street this year.

The usual spirited controversy was waged between the proponents of the several substances favoured for road making—asphaltic, concrete, and bitulithic pavements being most discussed, with tarvia mentioned in a minor key by Alderman McIntyre.

The correspondence file yielded its tale of claims against the city, three being registered for accidents and one for damage to property by laying a sidewalk.

Evidence of a clean-up of the gasoline stations, which one alderman said encumber the streets, and to which the City Engineer referred as nuisances, was given in the referring of two applications for permission to erect new stations to the Property Committee.

Assurance that the long-awaited new C.N.R. freight sheds will be erected this year, was conveyed in the application of Jopling & Cooney for permission to erect an office and shed, since they are compelled to vacate their present premises to permit of the erection of the new sheds.

Routine matters were handled expeditiously, and despite an exceptionally heavy slate of business the City Council was able to adjourn at 11.5, having convened at 7.30.

All of the members were present and City Solicitor Joseph Wearing and City Engineer Roy H. Parsons were in attendance.

May Lay Asphalt

With reference to the doubt expressed at a Board of Works meeting last week regarding the changing from concrete to asphalt in road construction under a by-law passed last year, city solicitor Joseph Wearing reported that he sees no reason why the by-law should not be amended to allow a choice of material.

On presentation of the Board of Works report by Alderman Morrison, Aldermen Stocker and Meyers moved an amendment to cancel a clause calling for tenders for concrete paving, and to refer it to general business.

Alderman Fife moved to eliminate the stretch of road between Water and George on Smith.

Alderman Stocker said this will defeat the object in paving the road to the hospital.

Alderman Fife said he went through the experience of a trip to the hospital and his roughest ride was over the paved portion of the main streets.

Alderman Fife's motion was carried.

St. Lawrence Scheme Vain Dream Says Buffalo Man

Conceived By Central Western States Farmers Whose Knowledge of Navigation Is Confined to Prairie Schooners—Senator Also Suspects Power Interests Behind It--Montreal Hears American's Criticism of Project.

MONTREAL, April 8 (Canadian Press). — Pointed criticism of the proposals for the St. Lawrence waterway project was made in an address before the Canadian Club here yesterday by Senator Henry W Hill, of Buffalo, N.Y., who objected to it as a project composed of dreams of painted ships on painted waters emanating from people of the Central Western States, whose knowledge of navigation was mainly confined to prairie schooners. These people were, he said, quite prepared to send ships up hill to lakes without channels and to cities without harbours to receive them.

Senator Hill added that the very people in the Western States who were so anxious for Canada to help them bear the cost of a waterway to help swell their own profits were the people who were determined to keep Canadian grain and agricultural products out of the United States.

A Power Scheme.

He criticised the whole scheme as one camouflaged for navigation purposes, to avoid the riparian laws regarding power, but really backed by the power interests, to sell power to distant American cities. He expressed profound distrust of the whole political influences behind the project and considered that if it were undertaken it should be done locally by the Canadian Provinces and New York State.

He pointed out that Canada had spent and would spend up to $200,000,000 on its canals and the St. Lawrence waterway. New York State had spent $190,000,000 on its 12-foot barge canal, and would spend more. They were, he said, not being used to one-third of their capacity, and he added: "We should first utilise our present waterways to full capacity before venturing on such colossal expenditures as are included in the St. Lawrence waterways."

Develop U.S. Cities.

Senator Hill charged that power interests had sold in Pittsburgh, Boston, and Washington and other United States cities already more power than the St. Lawrence project would ever develop, and he asked if Quebec and Ontario were anxious to turn over their rights and waterways to develop these United States cities rather than their own Provinces.

"If the St. Lawrence is to be improved," concluded the Senator, "we would like Canada to do it. But no man who knows the conditions at Washington can or will consent to place the control of such a project in the hands of men living in Arizona—where one of the commissiners actually lives."

CANADIAN SOO COAL RUNS LOW

Steel Plant May Have to Close Unless Supplies Arrive — Navigation Is Blocked By Ice In St. Mary's River.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., April 8.—(Canadian Press.)—While the ice situation in St. Marys' river has not improved there is considerable desire to open navigation as soon as possible. At the Canadian Soo steel plant it is said the works will have to close unless coal soon arrives. There are several steamers loaded at lower lake ports to sail immediately there is any prospects of making a passage. While an ice breaking craft might be able to force the lower river there is no chance of a loaded steamer.

Detour reports from fourteen to eighteen inches and teams still crossing to Drummond Island. The cold nights practically nullify the heat of the sun during the day by hardening up the slush. Above the Soo the ice extends from Soo to Whitefish. Whitefish Bay is solid with the fishermen still handling their nets through the ice. Above the point the wind shifts the big ice fields sometimes in-shore sometimes out.

Saturday the ice pan was off shore with six or eight miles of visible open water, but a change would bring it back in again. So far, however, there has not been very much wind-rowed ice formed. Navigation is not looked for much before the twentieth.

STEAMER WRECKED

CHATHAM, Mass., April 7. — The Spanish schooner Expreso, bound from Havana to St. Pierre, Miquelon, has been wrecked on Handkerchief Shoals, near Monomoy Point, it was learned to-day. All of the crew of ten were reported safe.

POSTPONE PRINCE'S VISIT

LONDON, April 8.—(Canadian Press Cable).—The announcement of the postponement of the Prince of Wales' visit to South Africa which created a sensation in London is explained by government officials on the ground that if his Royal Highness were in South Africa while the general election is proceeding there might be danger of some procession or other function arranged in honor being turned to political account by one or other of the parties in South Africa.

The date of the PETERBOROUGH MOTOR SHOW is WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, AND FRIDAY, April 23rd, 24th, and 25th; and daily for the next two weeks there will be something of interest to the readers of The Examiner in this space.

ORGANIZATIONS HELPING.

The success of the MOTOR SHOW, and this means the carrying on of the work of the Peterborough Health Association to a successful conclusion, has been brought about in past years to a large extent by the helping hand given during Motor Show Week by a number of the organizations of men and women in the City.

Some of these organizations have already publicly announced their intention of again assisting, and it will be very welcome news to the committee in charge to learn that all of them are going to be represented again this year, as well as others who may deem the importance of the cause an incentive to help make it a greater success than ever.

MARMORA METHODIST CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

Rev. S. A. Maine, M.A., B.D., of Albert College, Belleville, Occupied Rev. D. R. Clare's Pulpit — Automobiles Appear As Roads Dry.

MARMORA, April 7.—The anniversary services of the Methodist church were held on Sunday. The Rev. Professor S .F Maine, M.A., B.D., of Albert College, Belleville, was the speaker for the occasion.

In the morning, in speaking on the text John 12:32, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me," he gave a wonderful account of the life of Christ, taking it from the physical, social and spiritual viewpoints..

By drawing illustrations from Christ's life he showed Christ's standards of approving people. As, for example, Christ approved of the Publican rather than the Pharisee, not on account of their present life, but because of the possibilities of growth in their lives.

Also in the case of the Samaritan he approved of the man because of his thought for others and because he was willing to give a helping hand.

In closing the made a strong appeal to the church to stand for something worth while and to do away with all petty prejudices, selfishness and carelessness that the church during the coming year might strive to reach the standards or the highest ideal by imitating the Christ-life.

Mr. F. S. Pearce sang a solo which added very much to the feeling of the service.

In the evening special music in the form of anthems provided for the music.

Rev .Maine took as his text Matthew 16-8, "Thou art Peter and upon this rock I will build my church." He spoke of the different interpretations taken of the verse, but as he understood it the idea underlying the verse was that men who like Peter were strong in character would be the foundations of the church.

He spoke of the old idea of changing a man's name as his character changed. So Jacob's name changed to Israel as he became a strong Christian man. So Peter's name, which had been Simon Barjona or Simon, the son of Jonah, was made Peter-the-Rock, when his character became steady and to be trusted.

Rev. Maine spoke of the temptations of Christ. In everyday language they were (1) aimed after his lower appetites, (2) his vanity, (3) his ideals.

These temptations come to every man and woman of to-day and character is built as we meet this temptation.

Christ formed his own character when he overcome His temptation. So must we form our character day by day in the same way.

He spoke of the words of Christ, "Two women shall be grinding in a mill. The one shall be taken, the other shall be left. It was a case of character which would be chosen because externally they were alike.

His whole plea was that in building our character we should take Christ as our ideal and so build the right kind of character.

MAYOR MARTIN HITS THE MAT

Opponent Swept Into Office by Three Thousand Votes.

MONTREAL, April 8.—(Canadian Press).—Charles E. Duquette, almost unknown to the great mass of the electorate of Montreal up to two weeks ago, met Mayor Mederic Martin in a sensational contest for chief magistrate of this city, yesterday, and defeated him by approximately 3,000 votes. The latter's career which has been a dominating one in Montreal's municipal affairs for 25 years, for ten of which since 1914 he had been mayor, is thus ended. The third candidate, J. H. Pettit, who rushed into the fight at an early stage, was given a thousand odd votes as expected, and will lose his deposit.

From the outset, after the close of the polls, it was clear that Medric Martin was doomed to defeat.

Mederic Martin in the course of a declaration after the result had been announced said; "I am perfectly satisfied with the result, and I wish to thank the press, with one exception for the accounts they have given of my meetings. I have not spent cent with the newspapers, and my election campaign has no cost me one cent."

MISSING CHEQUE TO PETER SMITH

How Andrew Pepall Figured in the Plums of Drury Government.

TORONTO, April 8.— (Canadian Press.)— Further efforts on part of the Public Accounts Committee to trace the missing $15,000 cheque supposed to have been made out to Hon. Peter Smith failed last night when Alexander Ross, former manager of the Home Bank Bond Department, stated that he had no recollection of ever handling the cheque or seeing it. The cheque was a refund on profits from an Ontario Government bond sale and it had been hoped that the former bond department manager would be able to throw some light on the mystery.

Besides the $15,000 cheque, the stub of which has been produced in committee , Provincial Treasurer Price examined R. R. Rogers, formerly general manager of Aemilius Jarvis and Co., in connection with Province of Ontario inscribed stock purchases in England, and upon which, the Department contends, half a million dollars profit was made by the bond concern. Mr. Rogers, however, had severed his connection with the firm before the details were completed, he said and could not go into details for the committee.

He did, however, interest the committee by relating details of an arrangement made by himself with Andrew Pepall, brother of Harry G. Pepall, office man for the company, who had been introduced by Harry Pepall as able to influence provincial bond business in the direction of the Jarvis concern. Mr. Rogers said that he had made arrangement to pay Andrew Pepall one quarter of one per cent. on all bond business that he was able to direct to the Jarvis concern at Jarvis price.

Although the story is old, having been brought out before the Public Accounts committee two years ago, new members showed merriment in a recounting of the circumstances of friendship of Andrew Pepall and Peter Smith. The former treasurer, it was stated, was formerly an agent under Mr. Pepall for farm lighting apparatus and they used to make sales tours together on which occasions Mr. Pepall used to occupy a room in Mr. Smith's home, a fact which prompted Sam Clarke to comment that that was how former treasurer "got light."

Andrew Pepall, who drew at least one commission of $7,500 on the Jarvis bond purchases that Mr. Rogers knew of, is the same Pepall who went to England as representing the Provincial Government on bond purchases and who was paid something like $80 a day for his services which amounted in all to about $4,000.

Debate on Loans

Asked specifically last night about the $42,00 supposed rebate on province of Ontario loan in 1919, Hon. T. W. McGarry provincial treasurer in Hearst government said: "I don't know anything about any money paid on loans, if you look up record with regard to last loan was not finally paid over until I left there. I was$ asked about that. I know nothing at all about commissions and if they go back they will find there were never any commissions paid, and if there were any they were without my knowledge or consent.

Mr. McGarry protested at what he deemed the unfairness of comment upon the 1919 deposits in Home Bank, in view of his explanation before committee that there were $2,000,000 of organiation of resouces committee moneys there at that time.

CAMPBELLFORD COUNCIL MEET

Voted Fifteen Thousand Dollars to Equip the High School—May 23rd Declared Public Holiday

WHAT THE COUNCIL DID.

Voted the Board of Education $15,000 to equip the new High school.

Referred communication from the Amputation Association re the question of bonus to the enquiry committee with Councillor McDonald added.

Approved of C. A. Brethen Dairy Bill now before Parliament.

Decided to ask C. N. R. to install a warning signal at the Centre street crossing and that a night train be put on the Campbellford branch.

Gave the British American Oil Company permission to erect tanks near the depot.

Received petition for sewer on the Oliver road.

Ordered the installation of a number of new electric lights.

Voted the Seymour Agricultural Society a grant of $250.

Authorized Mayor Meyers to declare May 23rd a public holiday.

Referred matter of moving picture signs in the public streets to the Police committee.

Appointed committee with power, to act with engineer in purchasing sewer pipe.

CAMPBELLFROD, April 8.—Another milestone in the New High School problem was passed last night when the Town Council in regular session and with every member in his place, concurred in the request of the Board of Education for a grant of $15,000 with which to equip the building. There was very little discussion, and the only negative votes cast were those of Deputy-Reeve Dorie and Councillor Redden, the former standing by his record to the last.

When Clerk McGregor read the resolution from the Board, Councillor Redden was on his feet in a moment, asking if the Board had not already received sufficient money.

Councillor Kingston stated that the school had already cost $104,-800. The Board had been given $103,800 from the sale of debentures. The $15,000 now asked for was for equipment and to pay the architect's fees. It was expected that a balance would be available for fitting up the grounds. The trustees had voted unanimously for the amount asked for, some members formerly opposed to a new school supporting the resolution. He moved that the sum asked for be granted, and Reeve Davidson seconded the motion.

Deputy-Reeve Dorie moved in amendment that the request be turned down, but got no seconder. Councillor Kingston said that if this course was adopted the matter would have to be referred to the people, and this would occasion further expense and delay.

Dr. Richardson, member of the Board of Education, who was present, explained that the school could not be used without equipment.

Councillor Johnston: "Is not the price of the drain, $3,000, required to carry the water from the gymnasium, included in the $15,000?"

Dr. Richardson replied that it was. Whether the Board or the architect were responsible for the necessity of that drain he was not prepared to say, but if the latter was he should be held responsible.

Trustee Arnold, who was also in the room, said that, in his opinion, the architect was responsible for conditions that made a drain necessary. He also referred to the extra $200 which the architect asks for changing the plans, and to which Trustee Arnold believes he is not entitled. The vote when the roll was called resulted as follows:

For the grant—Reeve Davidson, Councillors Abernethy, Cole, Johnston, Kingston, McDonald and Mayor Meyers.

Opposed to grant—Deputy-Reeve Dorie and Councillor Redden.

The new debentures will run for 30 years and will bear interest at the rate of 5 1-2 per cent.

New Lights Ordered

Councillors Kingston, McDonald and Deputy Reeve Dorie were appointed a committee to confer with the Water and Light Commission with regard to the cost of lighting the Hastings road from the town limits to a point about a quarter of a mile out. The deputy reeve will act as chairman.

Councillors Redden and Cole secured a new light to be erected at the foot of Maple Street, Councillors Kingston and McDonald, sponsored one on Saskatoon avenue at the end of the sidewalk, ad Councillor Cole was successful in securing one for Naseby street. On motion of Councillors Redden and McDonald in electric light will be erected on Rear street in front of the skating rink.

Fair Gets $250

President John Locke, ex-President, Alex. Hume, Secretary J. Nelson Stone and Director T. J. Horkins appeared before the Council ask for the usual annual grant of $250. Mr. Horkins, however, suggested that the council grant $500 and condition that the Society add an equal amount, the $1000 to be used in putting up a building for exhibits by merchants and manufacturers. Every member of the delegation referred to the expansion of the fair and to its value as an advertisement to the town and district.

The $250 grant was voted on motion of Deputy Reeve Dorie and Councillor Redden, the latter suggesting that part of this sum be expended in planting a few shade trees on the grounds.

The Council also concurred in the request of the delegation that May 23rd he declared a public holiday as that is the date upon which the society will hold a celebration.

Mayor Meyers was elected an honorary member of the Fair.

The Soldier Councillor.

The Inquiry Committee will deal with the request of the Amputation Association for co-operation in having the bonus now paid totally or partially disabled veterans and to war widows be made a permanent part of their pensions To this committee Councillor McDonald, the only soldier member of the Council, was temporarily added.

Sewer Pipe Tenders.

Two tenders were received for concrete sewer pipes, one from the J E. Russell Company, Ltd., and the other from the Clay Products, Ltd. The bid of the former was $1.10 for 18-inch, 50 cents for 12-inch, and 40 cents for 9-inch pipe per foot. This firm could furnish 24inch pipe at approximately $2.00 per foot.

The tender of the other company was $1.08 for 18inch, 54 cents for 12-inch, and 36 cents for 9-inch pipe per foot.

Mayor Meyers, Councillors Cole, McDonald, Johnston, and Redden were appointed a committee, with power to act with the engineer in dealing with these tenders This committee is to be continued for the balance of the year.

Other Business.

Permission was given the Salvation Army, on the motion of Councillors Cole and Redden, to hold a tag day on 17th May.

The report of the auditors, Mrs. C. W. Turner and Miss Nellie Hopver, was received on the recommendation of the Finance Committee and the salaries of the auditors paid.

On the motion of Councillors McDonald and Kingston, Chief of Police Duncalfe will be requested to submit to the Council a detailed statement of the fines imposed and collected during 1923.

The Police Committee will deal with the question of moving picture bill boards that are left leaning against the sides of buildings. These boards are often blown down by the high winds, and are regarded as a source of danger by frightening horses.

Woodsworth Will Be Added to Committee.

OTTAWA, April 8 (Canadian Press). — Enlargement of the Parliamentary Committee on Industrial and International Relations to include a member of he Canadian Labour group, probably J. S. Woodsworth, member for Centre Winnipeg, will be made.

When Mr. Woodsworth complained that "this little group" had been ignored in the formation of the committee, Premier W. L. Mackenzie-King yesterday replied that he was surprised to find that Mr. Woodsworth had been left off the committee, and he would arrange to have it enlarged.

There are two Labour members in the Canadian House, Mr Woodsworth and William Irvine, member for East Calgary.

COUNCIL MEET IN WARKWORTH

Controversy Over Bonds Disposed of Yesterday —Sold to Toronto Firm

By a Staff Reporter

WARKWORTH, April 8.—Warkworth's Hydro debentures amounting to $11,000 which were sold by the Percy ownship Council last year but which were held up until the present, will now receive the required official signature and will go to Bird, Harris and Company, the brokers who purchased them at $103. A year old source of friction was removed yesterday when the council instructed Reeve McCubbin and Treasurer Boyce to sign the bonds The session was a long one and a good deal of bitterness was displayed The crowd that was in the lobby of the council chambers did not hesitate to take a hand in the debate as their feelings prompted. It was a memorable field day for the opposing factions and the Hydro advocates and the Hydro scoffs were out in full force.

I. A. Humphries of Campbellford, a native son of Percy Township and its solicitor, threw a bombshell into the crowd when he took the floor and announced that he intended to ascertain who was respossible for the rumors that he had received graft for his part in the issue and that he would, when the proper party was located, start an action for slander. Mr. Humphries made a vigorous denial of these rumors, his words having a ring of sincerity that silenced his detractors. A number of those present admitted that they had heard some such rumors but not a man among them was able to give the source of his information. Councillor Atkinson appeared to voice the sentiments of the council and audience when he stated that Mr. Humphries had certainly cleared him self of all suspicion.

The bonds were not advertised last year's council being of the opinion that no better terms could be secured and that by private sale the cost of publicity would be saved. Sixteen residents of the police village of Warkworth, petitioned the council at the March meeting to have an audit of the Hydro accounts of the village and asking the reeve and treasurer not to sign the bonds until the audit was completed.

There were more than nine people in England when the Tooley street tailors held their lustrous convention and by the same token there were more than 16 substantial residents in Warkworth when the petition was signed. Anyway the prayer of the petitioners was granted and the bonds remained unsigned.

Trustees Take Action

At a meeting of the trustees of the village last week Trustee C. C. Armstrong moved and Trustee A. M. Smale supported a resolution setting up the claim that the sale of the bonds had been regular and legal and asking the council to instruct the reeve and clerk to sign them. This resolution, signed by Chairman W. A. Kelly, was received by the Council yesterday.

Mr. Humphries Explains.

Mr. Humphries, when asked yesterday, said that the Council had the right to sell the bonds and dispose of them without advertising if they deemed that course advisable.

"Were you an agent of the bond company?" asked Reeve McCubbin.

Then the excitement, smouldering before, burst out. Mr. Humphries said he had heard some nasty insinuations about himself . It had been rumoured that he had received graft for his part in the transaction.

"Did you ever hear that report?" he asked Reeve McCubbin.

"I did not," was the answer.

All the other members of the Council declared they had never heard Mr .Humphries' name associated with the graft rumours.

Deputy-Reeve Nelson, in his old seat again after his re-election, added that while there had been wild rumours of graft, no specific charges were made.

Merely a Coincidence.

Mr. Humphries said that on 3rd July last year he happened to be in Warkworth on his way from Cobourg when he had taken a resident of the village on a business trip. While here he was asked to attend the Council meeting held on that date. The agent of the bond company was there, but Mr. Humphries did not know him, had never seen him before. He does not now even know his name. He did not, as had been rumoured, bring the agent with him in his car from Campbellford. When his opinion as township solicitor was asked he had advised the councillors that they had the right to sell the bonds and to dispose of them by private sale if they chose.

When Mr. Humphries left the Council meeting at which the bonds were sold the agent's offer was 103 1-2 After his departure the sale was closed at 105. Mr. Humphries declared that he was not an agent of the company, that he got no commission, and never will.

All these rumours of graft on his part, he declared, were false, and he added that he did not propose to let the matter drop, but would find out who started the slanders and take action against him. The Council had erred in giving the by-law its third reading too soon, but his advice had not been asked on this point, or he would have told them their action was not legal. The Railway and Municipal Board, however, had approved the issue after this year's Council had given the by-law a third reading at the first meeting this year.

Councillor Atkinson: "Well, Mr. Humphries, you have certainly cleared yourself."

Deputy-Reeve Wilson: "Last year's Council sold the bonds by private sale because we got a good price and at the same time."

Discussion Shifts.

Here discussion shifted from council table to lobby when H. L. Walker, Treasurer Boyce, C. H. Bowen, one of the auditors, and others, all members of opposing factions, carried on a heated argument that at times verged on the personal. The point at issue seemed to be whether the village trustees or the council had the right to sell the bonds.

"Have not the bonds been sold already?" asked Mr. Walker.

"That's what we are trying to find out," said the Reeve.

"Then," retorted Mr. Walker, "it's taking you a long time"

It was stated that A. C. Twiddy had taken the bonds to the council, being requested to do so by Chairman Kelly, who was called out of town.

The Auditors' Report.

It was after 4 o'clock when the report of Auditors Smith and Bowen were handed in, the report for which the crowd had waited patiently all the afternoon. It was an elaborate statement, bristling with whereases, and other sonorous legal praseology. When Mr. Smith started to read it, Mr. Bowen took his place at his side as if to afford him the moral support of his presence.

Mr. Smith stood close to the chair of Reeve McCubbin, and began reading in a low voice, the tone of a man making a confidential communication to the members of council. Instantly there was a vigorous protest from the lobby, the crowd being unable to hear the reader.

"I am reading this paper to the council, not to you people," was Mr. Smith's answer.

"But, we came to hear it," observed the lobby.

Mr. Smith appealed to the reeve, and was told to give the people a chance. He changed his position and pitching his voice in a slightly higher key, began again.

The outstanding points in the report were as follows:

The auditors declared that in their opinion the returns from the Hydro service in the village would not be sufficient to meet the payments on the debentures.

They have been unable to find any authority to extend the system beyond the boundaries of the police village.

There is a bill for $25 for the printing of the debentures which should not be paid.

That a bylaw authorizing the sale was given the third reading six months after the sale to Bird, Harris & Co. was made.

That the bonds could be disposed of to better advantage if sold locally.

Deputy-Reeve Nelson pointed out that the auditors were giving opinions instead of stating facts, and challenged the assertion that the system could not be made to pay.

After some discussion at the table and in the lobby Councillor Poole moved and Deputy-Reeve Nelson seconded a motion instructing the reeve and treasurer to sign the bonds Councillor Atkinson expressed his concurrence and Reeve McCubbin declared the motion carried, without callnig for a show of hands.

A farmer in the audience declared that unless the bonds were sold the ratepapers would hold the councillors personally responsible for any costs due to the payment of an excess rate of interest .

CUTTING SENATE COSTS.

Senator Turiff believes that reform of the Senate body should come from within, rather than waiting for outsiders to try their hand, says the London Advertiser.

That all depends on how far the Senators are prepared to go. He mentions retirement at 75 years. Would that mean a pension list? If so, he is wrong, for there is no more cause to pension a Senator than a member of Parliament.

Apart from the plan of Senate abolition, there are too many Senators. The British North America Act in 1863, with every good intent, created 72 seats in the Upper House, 24 each for Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes. The extension of the Dominion since then has given an equal number to the Western Provinces, making 96 in all.

During the Borden administration in 1920 the salaries of Senators were increased from $2,500 to $4,000, and the Speaker from $4,000 to $6,000, making an annual increased levy of $146,000. The salary list of the Senate now stands at $386,000, and represents an outlay for work that could be just as well accomplished by a much smaller number of men.

One-third the number of Senators would serve the purpose, and they should be selected for their knowledge of Canada's needs and problems rather than for their devotion to political parties.

MAKING IT EASIER TO VOTE.

Anything that will make it easier for the electors to exercise their franchise and lead to a larger vote being polled should receive general support, so that the suggestions laid before the City Council last night will doubtless be welcomed as a step in the right direction.

There has been in municipal elections more or less confusion in the minds of electors as to where they should register their vote, and this difficulty in locating the proper polling place has played its part in keeping the total vote from reaching a respectable proportion.

Many voters having finally been persuaded to use their franchise at municipal elections, have gone to a polling booth where they supposed they would be entitled to vote, found they were not on the list there but were eligible some place else, and at last have given it up in disgust and gone home.

Experiences of that kind have been frequent in the past, and the plans suggested last night would minimize the chance of such confusion in future elections.

It is realized that there is lamentable indifference on the part of many electors in regard to their responsibility in helping to select the municipal bodies and in voting on civic issues, and the simplification of electoral machinery along the lines proposed might help to improve the general situation.

It would at least take away from indifferent electors about the only excuse they have for not exercising their franchise.

THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Peterborough Horticultural Society is seeking members this year on a higher plane than under the old system which was designed to appeal to the commercial spirit rather than to community spirit of the citizens.

The furnishing of plants and bulbs to members has been discontinued, and the people of Peterborough are asked to associate themselves with the Horticultural Society for the opportunity it offers them of making Peterborough a more attractive city.

Much has been done by the society along that line, and the well-kept and trim lawns and flower-beds in most sections of the city have won from visitors ungrudging admiration and praise.

There remains, however, much more that can be accomplished with the co-operation of the citizens.

The membership of the Horticultural Society should be much larger than it is at present.

The fee is not large, and the aims and objects of the organization are such as to commend them to everyone with the least appreciation of beautiful things or with the smallest spark of civic pride in his make-up.

"The City Beautiful" is not a vision or a myth.

It is something well within our reach, and can be brought about by enthusiastic co-operation in the efforts of the Horticultural Society, for whose success up to the present the citizens have every reason to be grateful.

THE CURTAIN OF MYSTERY.

The skeleton of a prehistoric woman, a giantess eight feet tall, has been dug up in the Salmon River country of Idaho. Scientists are excited about the find. The skeleton probably will wind up in a museum, to be seen by only a small portion of the public.

What a pity, old P. T. Barnum isn't alive to popularize these scientific discoveries by making people pay admission to see them. One reason for the unpopularity of knowledge is that it's free.

The mysterious past is rapidly giving up its secrets. The skulls found recently in California belonged to people who lived before the glacial period about 20,000 years ago, according to latest estimates.

Another big find is made by the Nevada mining engineer, John T. Reid. Two years ago he discovered what looked like a fossil of the sole of a shoe. It even had marks of holes punched for thread. This fossil was found in rock millions of years old. It's a scientific mystery. Experts decide it may be a freak of nature. They don't think people lived that long ago.

Reid's latest find is the fossil of a horse's foot. This fossil is annoying the scientists. They had it all figured out that the horse originally was a cat-sized animal with four toes on each foot, and that evolution gradually turned it into the modern big beast with toes gone and hoofs in their place. The fossil found by Reid should have toes. Instead, it's like the modern horse's foot. Quite a puzzle.

Science reminds us of a small boy, happiest when he is rooting around in an old attic. You have observed how scientists are delighted when they find an ancient fossil from which they can reconstruct the past.

Maybe you've also noticed the tendency, of science, to pay a thousand times as much attention to the mysteries of the past as to the great mystery of the future—namely, what happens to us after death.

TORONTO'S TROUBLES.

The British harvesters who hiked to Ottawa to demand work or maintenance from the Federal Government got neither, but they have been having the time of their lives nevertheless.

Some strategist in Ottawa decided that the best way to dispose of the clamouring harvesters was to ship them back to Toronto, so a Government picnic was organized, a special C.N.R. car arranged, and the "hikers" travelled de luxe back to the Queen City, no doubt singing that old favorite war ditty "Here We are, Here We Are, Here We Are Again."

The Toronto authorities utterly fail to see the humour of the situation.

They claim with reason that they did not bring these people out to Canada, that they have been taking care of them for many weeks, and that the Government had no justification in dumping them back on their hands again now, in view of the fact that the problem of looking after Toronto's own citizens who are out of work has already assumed serious proportions.

The deportation of such members of the hiking party who refused to accept work offered them would have been a better way out of the difficulty.

Apparently there are among the harvesters men who have no intention of working so long as they can get their living out of municipal or Government charity, and the Toronto protest against this delegation being hustled back to them at the expense of the Government is well founded.

"A DESTRUCTION OF CAPITAL."

People everywhere are commencing to really think about taxes—what they mean, who pays them, their relationship to industry and wages, and especially their appalling increase during recent years. It may be that many are still more or less passive in the matter; but, when the situation as a whole is scanned, something like a popular awakening is seen to be in progress. Those who show indifference are probably influenced by a sense of personal impotence in the matter; but their numbers will decrease as the discovery is made that they have, after all, a voice at the polls. It is there they can very effectively offer resistance to swelling taxes.

It is unfortunate that in the first stages of alarm some shortsighted taxpayers have been disposed to listen sympathetically to those who have mere palliatives to propose. For the most part these measures take the form of increasing the burden of those who appear best able to bear it, the underlying assumption being that proportionate relief would thus be brought to the shoulders of wage earners and so on. All thinking on this subject will be futile if notions of that nature should become general. That is not the way to lighten the load of the weak. It is, in fact, the quick and sure way of adding to the load.

Secretary Mellon made that truth clear to a committee of the American Senate a day or two ago, when the proposed increase of the tax on estates were under review. He said:

> "It should always be borne in mind that estate taxes are levied upon capital; that they are used for current operating expenses; and that they amount, therefore, to a destruction of capital in the country."

It is at that point sound thinking must begin in order to avoid an economic blunder. On the face of things, it looks very plausible to raise revenues by taxing legacies and so on. The suggestion at once arises that by such a process the rich are merely relieved of a proportion of their surplus, and the less fortunate have their taxes cut. But the student of economy knows that to be false and dangerous reasoning. He assents to a reasonable impost on estates, as a matter of both justice and expediency; but common sense tells him that past a certain point that method hits the poor much harder han it does the rich.

Secretary Mellon spoke soundly when he said that a tax of this nature is a levy upon capital. He might very well have gone a step farther, and pointed out that capital is the source of wages. No one can question that. It is a fundamental truth. Hence it is a logical deduction that you cannot lower the volume of productive capital without at the same time cutting off the supplies of wage earners in a like degree. We must therefore be on our guard in all measures of taxation to so distribute the impost that it will not check the wheels of industry or enterprise; for the moment you do that you lower the fountain head of wages. Employment can never be buoyant while capital is being diverted from the channels of production to the public treasury.

There is hope in the fact that the common people are being aroused to the seriousness of the situation as to rising taxation; but more harm than good is likely to result if, in their efforts to obtain relief, they kill the goose which lays their golden eggs. The way out of the situation is very clear. The extravagance and imprudence which is back of higher taxation must be stopped. That aspect is summed up in the trite but homely axiom that, to avoid disaster, one "must cut his coat according to his cloth." What we have been doing is to bend all our efforts toward getting more cloth. We must now learn to get along with less coat. Having learned that lesson, the next step is to so lay out our scheme of taxation that it will not hamper production; for in hampering production we bring about unemployment. We contract the source of wages.—Ottawa Journal.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, April 7.—This is the week for Easter killing purchases and this served to fetch in a goodly number of baby beeves. The average quality of these was not too high and prices were stronger than they have been. Seven were bought at 8¼ cents a pound, and a few of extra finish brough 9 and 9¼ cents, but some sold at 7¼ cents.

Average good steers were $7.75 to $8 a cwt., but for two 1,400 lbs. each, $8.60 a cwt. was paid. For heifers, cows and bull prices kept quite close to last weeks.

The abbatoir buyers were apathetic and this made this end of the market slow. For average good butchers, it was difficult to get over $6.75 a cwt. It was hard to get anything for the common beef trade less than 5¼ to 5¾ cents a pound, and temporarily this is about the strongest end of the market.

Today's calves were generally a poor lot. A few fancy calves sold steady at 12 cents a pound and useful calves at 10 and 10½ cents. In the common stuff there was an ever abundance and some of the poorest samples went at 5 ½ cents. For the best commons the price did not get over 7 cents a pound.

The supply of yearling lambs was light. Kit Waugh got the largest bunch at 15½ cents a pound for the ewes. Heavy sheep around 230 lbs sold at 5½ cents. Spring lambs are not too good a market and there were about twenty on sale. It takes a real good 50-lb lamb to bring $15.

Hogs seemed to have settled at $7.50 a cwt. f.o.b. and packers say they do not want them at anything over that price.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, April 7.—Wheat underwent a setback in price to-day, largely as a result of a decline at Liverpool this morning, despite strength here on Saturday. Chicago closing quotations were weak 3-8 to 1c. net lower, May 1.02 3-8 to 1.02 3-8 and 1-2, and July 1.03 7-8 to 1.04. Corn finished 1-4 to 1-2 down, oats a shade to 1-4 off, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to 10c. decline.

Although the setback in values of wheat at Liverpool was associated with an advance in sterling exchange, the apparent absence of any demand from wheat exporters on this side of the Atlantic had a restraining effect on other buyers, and there was a noticeable lack of aggressive purchasing which characterized Saturday's market. Furthermore, the fact that wheat was being sold to go into store here and was being bought in the west for shipment to Chicago had an evident bearish influence.

Fine weather favorable for winter wheat growth and for spring wheat seeding tended also to ease values, little recovery taking place in the final transactions, notwithstanding 892,000 bushels falling off in the United States' visible supply. Additional handicaps on buyers were stock market weakness and gossip current that Europe had cancelled a previous purchase of some wheat.

AN AWFUL ATTACK OF PIMPLES ALL OVER HIS FACE

Pimples breaking out on the face and other parts of the body is a sure sign that the blood is not in proper shape.

While the skin is the object of the attack the real seat of the disease is in the blood on account of the entire circulation being poisoned.

Burdock Blood Bitters quickly and effectually banishes pimples and all other skin diseases as it goes right to the root of the trouble by cleansing and enriching the blood.

Mr. Conad Anderson, Kelfield, Sask., writes:—"A year ago I had an awful attack of pimples. They broke out all over my face and I could not get rid of them in any way. One day a friend told me about your Burdock Blood Bitters and let me have a bottle he had to spare. After using it I noticed a change, so I bought three more bottles, and now I don't know there is such a thing as pimples."

Mr. Norrish will illustrate his paper with both lantern slides and moving pictures. By means of these he will show the various steps in the making of the picture "Thais" which recently appeared on the screen, and also the "animated cartoons" which are so popular.

The meeting will be open to the public, and the citizens will be welcome to come and enjoy a description of what is now classed as the fifth industry in the world.

"LOST LOVE" WORTH LESS TO MAN THAN TO WOMAN.

Justice Decides $46,000 Alienation Verdict Was Excessive.

NEW YORK, April 7.—"Lost love" is worth less to a man than a woman, decided Justice Carswell, in reducing the $46,000 verdict to $22,000 for Charles Babb, of Brooklyn.

Babb recently won an alienation suit against Clyde Black, millionaire manufacturer, for the affections of his beautiful wife, Ada Babb, "the magazine cover girl."

Justice Carswell decided the verdict was excessive because a man should be more capable of support than a woman.

Babb sued Black for $100,000 on March 14, charging that Mrs. Babb left him because he could not buy $1,000 diamond bracelets or take her to Bermuda as Black did.

COBOURG AND DISTRICT

COBOURG, April 8.—The citizens of Cobourg have subscribed $27.90 to the fund which the British Welcome and Welfare League has raised to erect a stone over the grave of Charles Bulpitt. The money was collected by Mrs. Bert Clark and came from many contributors. Mrs. Clarke has received the following acknowledgement from the President of the League, Mr. Albert Chamberlain.

"Thanks to the splendid efforts of Mrs. Bert Clarke of Cobourg, the fund opened by the British Welcome and Welfare League of Toronto to erect a simple stone over the grave of Charles Bulpitt the young immigrant lad, who so tragically ended his life, has been closed."

"Cobourg cared—Cobourg thought it worth while to erect a simple memorial over the resting place of the young newcomer—somebody's boy."

"Cobourg raised more money for the tablet than any other place in Ontario. Mrs. Clarke sent a cheque for $29.70 to the British Welcome and Welfare League, being the amount she had collected from her friends."

"The stone will be erected within a month when the first frost is out of the ground."

Cobourg Motor League.

At the annual meeting of the Cobourg Motor League held at the Cobourg Club on Wednesday evening it was decided to send a letter of thanks to the past president of the Club, Dr. McNaughton, formerly superintendent of the Ontario Hospital here, who has been tarnsferred to Brockville. A grant of $50 was made to the Board of Trade for advertising and $25 to the Cobourg Club for use of the room. Several matters came up for discussion and will later come up before a committee composed of the directorate. One was the procuring of a service car for the use of the Motor League. Another, the erection of signs directing tourists to the local camping ground at Victoria Park. Another was a road map which would feature Cobourg for presentation to tourists entering Ontario at wider points.

DELEGATION TO OTTAWA URGED PRESENT DUTIES

Represented Manufacturers of Locomotives and Logging, Lumbering and Sawmill Machinery — Business Has Been Erected Under Moderate Tariff.

PETERBORO AFFECTED

OTTAWA, April 8. — (Canadian Press.)—With a request that there be no change in the duty on logging, sawmill and lumbering machinery and equipment, a delegation representing manufacturers of this class of product from Brantford, Peterborough, Hamilton, Montreal and other points waited upon the Prime Minister and Hon. James A. Robb, Acting Minister of Finance this afternoon.

Introduced by W. G. Raymond, Liberal member for Brantford the delegation presented three petitions, the first from British Columbia manufacturers; the second from those in Eastern Canada; the third from the manufacturers of locomotives used in lumbering.

It was explained by L. M. Waterous of the Waterous Engine Works, Brantford, that the coming of the delegation was due to the fact that the British Columbia Loggers' Association had submitted a memorial to the Government asking for a removal of the duty on logging and lumbering machinery and equipment.

He called on W. S. Campbell, of the Canadian General Electric Company, Peterborough, to read the petition submitted on behalf of the British Columbia manufacturers.

Retain Present Tariff.

This set forth that the majority of those engaged in logging in British Columbia were United States firms who wanted American-made machinery in Canada. Machinery of a satisfatcory character and design was being manufactured at present by Canadians in the Province of British Columbia. Plants for the manufacture of this machinery had been built up under the present moderate protective tariff, and this should be continued.

The eastern manufacturers, through Mr. Waterous, pointed out that over 90 per cent. of the machinery used in logging and lumbering operation, was now made in Canada. Canadain prices were based on the cost of production and not on the extent of protection given the industry.

A decrease in duties would result in the dumping of United States machinery on the Canadian market. Several members of the delegation were representatives of Canadian branches of American firms and if the duty was lowered these branches would become mere distributing agencies. The result would be the emigration of Canadian artisans to the United States.

Locomotive Competition.

W. Harty, Jr., of the Canadian Locomotive Company, Kingston, stated that it would be impossible for Canadian locomotive manufacturers to compete with United States firms if the present tariff were reduced or removed. Canadian manufacturers would simply have to close up.

Speaking on behalf of the City of Brantford, A. E. Bunnell, City Treasurer, declared that the uncertainty in the minds of manufacturers at present was one of the causes of people leaving for the United States. Manufacturers of Brantford were unable to give their employees assurance of lasting employment. Many men who had left Brantford to take employment in the States had returned only to remove their families.

Premier King informed the delegates that the Government was anxious to see all aspects of tariff question before coming to definite conclusions. He thanked the delegation, and promised that their petitions would be given consideration.

Two pipes were found in the debris which has led investigators to the belief that one of men struck a match to light his pipe.

PETERBORO' MAY BE CONSIDERED

F. W. Field, Trade Commissioner, Visits Peterboro and Discusses Trade Conditions.

"It is important that United Kingdom manufacturers should regard Canada as being a market for special consideration. It is one of the most difficult markets from the United Kingdom exporters' point of view, and must be given unusual attention in certain matters, in order to secure permanent business of value." This statement was made in an interview with a representative of The Examiner, by Mr. F. W. Field, British Government Trade Commissioner at Toronto.

"Industrial production is probably more highly developed here than in any other British Dominion market. The competition to be met, particularly from the United States, is very keen, on account of the close proximity, and because of other obvious advantages they enjoy in relation to Canadian import trade. Elsewhere, United Kingdom manufacturers are often able to do substantial business direct from their factories or export warehouses. In this market, it is essential that our manufacturers should have representatives on the spot.

"Visits to Canada by principals of firms or other representatives who are well qualified to observe and analyze the characteristics of a market, are almost invariably productive of excellent results. These visits are every day occurrences for the United States business man who frequently travels a long distance. There is nothing quite as satisfactory as a personal survey of the market. It is of considerable value in itself, and also in its application to reports afterwards received from time to time, from various sources on the trade of the market. It also clarifies and strengthens the relations between the firm and their Canadian agents. Visits of United Kingdom representatives to Canada have been far too infrequent. When they are made ample time should be allowed, so that a proper appreciation of the market may be obtained, rather than the cursory and incorrect impressions which are often gained from a too hasty trip. A large number of British manufacturers have recently visited Ontario. The spring will bring numerous others, and many are visiting all Dominion's markets. Two of them have recently discussed the establishment of branch plants in Ontario, and Peterborough as a possible site will not be overlooked.

U. S. Capital Increase.

"In regard to the establishment in Canada of branch factories of United Kingdom firms, the figures recently published in a report of the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa, will not fail to impress many of our manufacturers. It was shown in the report that in 1918, of the securities of companies engaged in the manufacturing industries of Canada, 34 per cent. were owned by the United States, 56 per cent. by Canada, and 9 per cent. by Great Britain. When the compilation of the figures for 1920 is complete, we are told that it may be found that the 34 per cent. representing the proportion of securities held by United States Capitalists, has increased to nearly 50 per cent., and that the British percentage has increased little or not at all. It is probable that United Kingdom firms will in many instances secure better results by manufacturing at home and exporting to the Canadian market. At the same time, in certain lines, when the competition is exceptionally keen, the establishment of branch factories under the direction of British rather than foreign capital is a matter for the serious consideration of British trade and financial interests."

Referring to the British Industries Fair organized by his department in London, and which is now the largest annual trade fair in the world, the Commissionar said:

"A number of Canadian buyers will attend the fair this spring as usual. At the same time they may see the British Empire Exhibition which will be open from May till October. This will be the open shop window of the Empire and the greatest exhibition in every way ever held."

He stated his office in Toronto and those of the British Trade Commissioners at other points in Canada, were at the service of the Canadian commercial community with regard to their import requirements.

Mr. Field is visiting various cities and towns in Ontario prior to his departure for England, where he wil be on duty until the autumn before returning to Toronto. He is conferring with several manufacturers in Peterborough, and was a visitor to the Chamber of Commerce offices.

GOVERNMENT OF PREMIER SMUTS GOES TO PEOPLE

Submits to Defeat In By-Election and Seeks New Vote of Confidence at Polls—Nationalists and Labor Noisy and Eager As They Accept Government's Challenge.

MAJORITY WAS FOUR.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, April 8. Canadian Press Cable, via Reuters. — The scene in the Union Assembly Monday afternoon was most dramatic. The evidence of something unusual in the air had attracted a larger gathering than usual to the public galleries. There was general anxiety to see what the repercussion of the Wakkerstroom by-election would be.

Cheers and counter-cheers rang out when Premier General Smuts, Leader Hertzog of the Nationalists, and other leaders, entered the House. The cheering was renewed when announcement was made of dissolution —culminating in such an uproar that Colonel Creswell, the Labor leader, who followed Smuts, had to speak at the top of his voice.

Premier Smuts, in announcing dissolution, said the government was doubtful, after the Wakkerstroom election, whether it enjoyed the confidence of the country. A mere parliamentary majority was not enough, as the government was dealing with questions of policy which only a government enjoying the confidence of the country should undertake. The government, he said, was not prepared to carry on without the full confidence of the country.

Speaking to the motion to adjourn General Hertzog said he was sure the general public would welcome the cause of the adjournment and the opportunity of expressing their views at the polls.

The Labor leader, Colonel Creswell speaking amid an uproar of cheers, declared that from the day the present house was elected on entirely false issues, the labor party had looked for this dissolution The last election was fought to reduce the labor representation and labor now accepted the government's challenge that the people would reject the present government.

DUTCH WANT REPUBLIC.

LONDON, April 8. Canadian Press Cable. — The rapid movement of events in South Africa, leading to a general election, is arousing much interest in London. The Smuts administration has had to fight strong opposition since the war, and its majority in the House of Assembly has now been reduced to four by the Wakkerstroom by-election.

The government is now confronted with a united opposition of Dutch nationalists and the Labor party, the latter being mostly English. There is almost no concealment by the farmers of the fact that their aim is the establishment of a Dutch Republic in South Africa, while the Labor Party's aim is to extort better terms from the mine owners of the Rand. The only thing common to both factions is their hatred of General Smuts, who broke up the Boer revolt of 1914, and twice broke armed labor revolts in Johannesburg.

COTTAGES ROBBED BY OMEMEE YOUTH

Clarence Brooks Sentenced In Lindsay to Ontario Reformatory For Minimum of Six Months.

LINDSAY, April 8.—(Special to the Examiner).—Provincial Officer Storey was in Peterboro on Saturday where he took into custody Clarence Brooks of Omemee, who was charged with robbing summer cottages on Pigeon River, near Omemee, last January. He came before Police Magistrate Bradford today and was given six months at the Ontario Reformatory with an indeterminate sentence of not more than eighteen months less one day.

Brooks entered the summer home of H. O. Hays of Toronto and stole household effects, fishing tackle and guns to the value of $200. Some of the articles were recovered shortly after the robbery in second hand stores at Peterboro.

New York Fur Prices Decline at Auction.

NEW YORK, April 8.—With the exception of lynx, which did not change, prices declined from ten to twenty per cent. at the opening sessions of the ninth annual spring fur sale held under the auspices of the New York Auction Company. In the Masonic Hall here Monday. Dealers did most of the buying and the day's total reached four hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Fisher brought the top price of one hundred and fifty dollars for the day. Marten did not do so well. British Columbia and coast skins declining twenty per cent.

Top for marten was fifty-six dollars. Compared with January sale, these percentage declines were shown to-day: Fisher, fifteen; baum Marten, fifteen stone marten, pale, fifteen; marten, best colors, ten; lynx none; wildcat, northern, ten; squirrel, fifteen. The sale will run eight days.

A FUR EASTER

By HEDDA HOYT.

NEW YORK, April 5.—(United Press).—

"I'd like to see a jacquette, please," Said Mary to the clerk.
"What fur?" the salesgirl asked her;
"Fur Easter," Mary smirked.

From all indications it looks as though Easter will be just one fur jacquette after another. Already the smart women about New York are wearing these short affairs in preference to the long winter wraps.

Black and white combinations are those most noticeable at functions where smart women gather, and it looks as though the black and white effect in furs would be the Easter rage. Combinations of ermine and broadtail, ermine and seal and ermine and monkey fur are shown in all shop windows.

At the Columbia University show which was given at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel last week the large attendance of college girls reflected the styles favored by youth this spring. Short coats were worn in numbers, made of ermine, white coney, squirrel and seal. While coney trimmed in collars and cuffs of monkey fur or seal, were types most in evidence. These were little box-shaped affairs which were worn wrapped about in front.

In Black and White.

On the Avenue one sees the newer combination of black and white, the short seal jacquettes with collars and cuffs of ermine. These are distinctly new and, although seal has heretofore been considered a winter fur, when combined with ermine it is sufficiently springlige. As many women are tired of the long seal coat or wrap, the short seal jacquette offers a new mode for renovating the last winter's sealskin.

One of the prettiest coats using the seal and ermine combination is made like a Mandarin jacquette with flaring sleeves and upstanding collar. A narrow band of ermine edges the entire coat and extends about the cuffs. This was worn at the Biltmore Hotel at tea-time by one of the ultra fashionables. A black satin gown was worn beneath the jacquette and a hat of black satin, with its upturned brim trimmed with appliques of white leather leaves, a favored trimming, completed the black and white effect.

Little white tie-scarfs of ermine are among the smart small neckpieces. White fox is being sponsored for the younger miss.

The favored length for the fur jacquette is hip-length.

Unusual Scarf Idea.

A black satin dinner gown which caused some comment at the Fashion Art League recently depicted a novel usage of the modern scarf. It was made with a shoulder yoke effect and the scarf was cut in one, with the yoke projecting from the left rear side.

The scarf was fashioned so that it could be worn in scarf manner or wrapped about the left arm to form a sleeve It snapped together at the wrist, where it finished with a tassel.

The right arm of the frock was sleeveless, although the yoke rounding over the shoulder gave a short, caped effect. This gown would have been just the ordinary long-bodiced and simple-skirted type had not the novel scarf-sleeve idea given it distinction.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Blackheads

There is one simple, safe, and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them. To do this, get two ounces of peroxine power from any drug store — sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth— rub over the blackheads briskly— wash the parts and you will be surprised how the backheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The peroxine powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.

Calgary's Supply of Farm Labor Runs Out.

CALGARY, Alta., April 8.—Orders poured into the Calgary office of the Alberta Government Employment Office for farm labor at such a fast rate on Monday morning that before the noon hour, the first shortage of farm labor in the district was experienced. The market for men here was thrown wide open and British Columbia points were advised to send as many men as possible for farm work.

Your doctor advises internal cleanliness

HE will tell you that the first results of constipation—headache, sleepless nights, biliousness, backache, etc.—warn that the body is flooded with intestinal poisons. In time, these poisons may cause the breakdown of health and lead to serious disease. In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Hence, doctors urge internal cleanliness—regular and thorough removal of food waste from the body.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Not a Medicine

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Prudence Page—a pretty country girl, is slowly recovering from her infatuation with

Bert Traymore—a fascinating, unscrupulous philanderer. Prudence is mystified to discover him digging at the foot of an elm tree in a secluded spot, where he has evidently concealed something, but she speaks of the incident to no one.

Janet Mercer—Prudence's friend, an older woman, plain but clever, is relieved to find the girl becoming indifferent to Traymore, whom she dislikes. Janet is in love with Will Ogilvie, whom she intends to marry some day. In the meantime she is masseuse to the delicate child of Mrs. Vansittart—a pleasure-loving, woman-of-the-world, owner of Winston Towers.

Virginia Dale—her ward, is a calculating beauty, who counts Traymore among her many swains. She is genuinely interested in

Peter Armstrong—a brilliant young inventor, clever and ambitious, who has evinced considerable liking for Prudence. Virginia, aware that Prudence is a dangerous rival, plans to do the girl harm in some way.

Janet warns Prudence of Virginia's determination to "win" Peter.

Prudence is invited to 'fill in' at a dinner party at Winston Towers.

Prudence surveys herself in the mirror with a pleasurable feeling of excitement as she makes ready for Mrs. Vansittart's dinner.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Theft and a Discovery.

Peter Armstrong wasn't at the dinner!

And she (Prudence) had somehow been so sure he would be there!

Was it for him that she had dressed so carefully, taking such pleasure in her gorgeous gown?

An empty feeling seized her. Having forsworn love, it did seem queer that she should miss this Peter person!

Bertram Traymore she avoided. The boot-button sleekness of his well-oiled head, the too-excellent fit of his ultra-fashionable dinner-jacket, the suave smoothness of his manners — all these things she noticed now and marvelled at her past infatuation.

"There is nothing so dead as a dead love!" says the proverb.

But had it ever been real love that she had felt for this young dandy?

He tried to seek her out, but she avoided him. That whetted his hunter's instinct.

Gad! the girl looked beautiful tonight! Never had he seen her quite so lovely. Not even Jinny, marvellously gowned in orchid draperies, could hold a candle to the Prudence child.

But, as time passed, and almost pointedly she ignored him, he began to feel chagrined. Was his hold on her so slight as that?

Admiration changed to annoyance, and annoyance to actual anger.

Unconscious of these feelings, Prudence did her best to be agreeable to her dinner partner—a red-faced, genial country squire, whose brains were not his long suit, as it were, but who was susceptible to feminine beauty.

It was an elaborate meal, and the profusion of 'courses,' knives and forks, rather confused the girl. She watched her hostess, copying her example in the use of dishes, and succeeded in not making any noticeable mistake.

But she was rather glad when the long session round the table ended and the ladies rose to go to the drawing room, leaving the men behind.

"Your hair is coming down," tittered Virginia Dale spitefully, as she swept by Prudence in the hall. "I tried to signal you during dinner, but you were so enraptured with your partner that you didn't see my signs."

This was untrue. A tiny curl had crept loose on Prudence's white neck, but it was quite in keeping with her quaint frock and coiffure, and really enhanced the young lady's beauty, as Virginia's own partner had remarked.

But the spiteful comment disconcerted Prudence, as, indeed, Virginia had intended that it should.

"I'll run into Mrs. Vansittart's bedroom and fix it," said the young girl, flushing hotly, and putting a swift hand up to her curly locks.

Arrived there, she realized there had been no truth in Virginia's 'cattiness.'

"She only wanted to make me feel bad. It's a return for what happened in Mr. Armstrong's laboratory this morning thought Prudence, with a wry little smile, surveying her charming image in Mrs. Vansittart's long pier-glass.

She had no desire to go now to the drawing-room and encounter Miss Virginia a second time. And so she lingered in the bedroom, patting her hair into a more decorous smoothness, and then spent an odd moment or two in Mrs. Vansittart's boudoir with a magazine she found lying on that lady's desk.

Mrs. Vansittart found her there, and smilingly chided her for lingering.

"You naughty girl! You mustn't only be charming to the men, but come along and meet my women friends!"

In spite of her hostess' rallying way, Prudence felt that she had committed a social error in lingering in the boudoir and at once apologized.

She did her best to talk to Lady Cumbermere, but the latter snubbed her, and so did another homely-looking woman, who had sticking-out teeth and wore a very obvious 'toupee' under the fond delusion that it 'took years off her age.'

Prudence felt uncomfortable.

The entry of Bert Traymore and her own dinner partner created an interruption. The latter sought her side at once.

Prudence and he were chatting together when up came Traymore, a queer look on his face.

"Mrs. Vansittart wants to speak to you," he said.

The girl rose, and as she did so Bert half stumbled against her, and apologized.

She crossed the parquet floor to her hostess, who had a worried air.

"A most awkward thing has happened, my dear," said Mrs. Vansittart in a stage whisper which 'carried,' however, to several of her guests. "I had a thousand dollars in notes in the small desk in my boudoir—they were there only half-an-hour ago—and now, they're gone! And I'd stupidly left a pair of very valuable diamond earrings—pendant type, and worth at least fifteen hundred—in the top small drawer of my dressing table, and they've vanished too! It was very careless of me, I'll admit—but my maids are all honest—every one of them; been with me for years; and—now, don't think I'm imagining anything, but you were the last person in the suite, weren't you?" She flung Prudence a queer, embarrassed glance.

"I—I've only just come from there. I—I ran in to fix my hair. You saw me in the boudoir, by the desk——" Prudence broke off, very pale.

By this time, thanks to the offices of Mr. Bertram Traymore and Miss Virginia Dale, who had just heard from him the story, the entire room knew of their hostess' recent loss. Virginia came right up to Prudence and Mrs. Vansittart, as did the other guests. Only Bert Traymore hung back a little.

"Stolen? Nonsense!" cried Prudence's genial dinner partner with a grin. He was an honest-minded, simple soul, and subtlety was not his forte. "You're dreaming, Mrs. Van.! I bet you'll find the diamonds sticking in your gown, somewhere, and as for the thousand, why, you've gone and spent it and forgotten! But just to set your mind at rest, let ME play detective! Come on, ladies and gentlemen!" He wagged a playful finger at them all. "I've got a search warrant, he! ha! I'm Sherlock Holmes! I'll begin with the prettiest girl in the room—Miss Prudence Page!"

Little guessing what his action would unfold, he advanced, smiling gaily, towards Prudence.

"No pockets in your gown? No hand-bag? No vanity-bag? That only leaves the sash as a hidey-hole! Come, let me look!"

He slipped a finger in the edge of the white-draped girdle that the girl was wearing, and—to his own consternation and the breathless amazement of spectators—jerked out a roll of 1000-dollar bills and a glittering diamond earring that fell to the parquet floor with a clatter and lay there, winking up at the astounded audience with a hard, remorseless eye!

To-morrow: "A Common Thief."

SEATTLE, Wash., April 4. (Associated Press).—Whether a bobber is a barber, a question that has disturbed the State of Washington since, the legislature a year ago enacted that barbers must have licences, evoked the classics when a case reached Judge J. T. Ronald in superior court here on appeal from the justice court.

"Beauty parlors, like baseball, have become a national amusement," Judge Ronald remarked in deciding that bobbers needn't be licensed barbers.

The lawyers having dealt with the case of Samson and Delilah, the judge brought out some lines from "Milton and other poets." Lamenting the modern spirit of women, "Which has robbed her of her chief charm, to make wigs and toupees for men," the court yet admonished her:

"Then cease, bright nymph, to mourn thy ravished hair
Which adds new glory to the shining sphere."

Perhaps, mused the judicial mind as it made itself up, Anna Larson, whose locks William Hoffman, unlicensed, bobbed in a beauty parlor, had "long, loose hair flung deftly around her head," or perhaps

"Twas a beautiful mist falling down to her wrist;
Twas a thing to be braided and jewelled and kissed."

After all, the court concluded, beauty parlor workers oughtn't to have to learn the jokes to pass examinations as barbers.

SCOTTISH PEERS LOSING MEMBERS.

Once the Strongest and Most Flourishing of Great Britain, Now Only Contains 86 Members.

LONDON, April 8 (Associated Press).—The Scottish peerage, once the strongest and most flourishing of Great Britain, now only contains 86 members, says the new issue of Debrett. At the time of the union of the parliaments of Scotland and England in 1707, the peerage enrolled 154 members, which included almost all the wealthiest men of Scotland, the clan chiefs and political leaders of the country. These peers were in almost absolute control of the country, and owned most of the shipping interests, then the greatest commercial enterprise of the British Isles.

Attainder, extinction and dormancy have since then reduced the number, and the growth of new commercial interests has taken away the influence of the peers.

As no Scottish peerage could be created since 1707, to be a member of the Scottish peerage is a greater distinction than to be a member of any other British peerage. Forty-nine of the Scottish peers have been made peers of England and therefore allowed to sit in the House of Lords, which prerogative is not accorded to the Scottish nobles. The remainder are allowed to elect 16 of the number at the veginning of parliament to represent them in the House of Lords.

At the present time the peerage is composed of 4 dukes, 4 marquises, 42 earls, 2 countesses, 4 viscounts, 21 barons and 4 baronesses.

ITALY'S GENERAL ELECTION SUNDAY.

The Majority Tickets and the Minority Tickets Are Each Distinguished By a Party Emblem.

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

ROME, April 8 (United Press).—The Italian general election to be held for a new chamber of deputies may look like a great joke to the average American, but not so to Premier Mussolini and his fascist followers.

First of all, the new Italian electoral law was devised to allow the fascists to remain in power whether the country wanted it or not and in order to achieve this extraordinary result, the law provides that any party polling 25 per cent., or one-fourth of the votes actually cast, will elect two-third of the deputies composing the Italian chamber of deputies, or 356, out of a total of 535.

In practice the law works this way: The country is divided into fifteen electoral districts, and the tickets are divided into two main categories, namely, national, or majority, tickets, and districtual ,or minority, tickets. The former are the tickets which on polling 25 per cent. of the votes will elect a majority of 356 deputies; the second are only after the whole or part of the 179 remaining seats, and which the law allots to the minority, which may or may not be opposition.

A national or majority ticket must be presented in all the fifteen constituencies or electoral districts; the minority tickets must be presented in at least two districts. In each district the majority tickets will carry a number of candidates equal to two-thirds of the deputies the district elects, owing to its population. The minority or districtual tickets must have no more of one-third of the candidates. For example: Suppose a district elects 30 deputies. Then the majority tickets will carry 20 names and the minority tickets 10. Furthermore, while the votes of majority tickets are counteic "nationally", the votes of the minority tickets are counted only in relation to the districts in order to allow each district to have one-third of its deputies in the chamber. To exemplify: A majority ticket may or may not get 25 per cent. of the votes in one, two, three or more districts; but if the total of the votes polled by the same ticket in all the districts is equal to the 25 per cent. or more of the votes cast, it elects two-thirds of deputies in "all" the districts. A minority ticket will elect its one-third of deputies, regardless of the number of votes it receives.

Naturally, there can be more than one majority ticket and many minority tickets. But only the majority ticket polling the largest number of votes above the 25 per cent. required by the law, elects the 356 candidates, while the rest of the majority and minority tickets will divide among themselves the seats allotted to the minority in proportion to the votes which each ticket receives.

The majority tickets are each distinguished by a party emblem, and so are the minority tickets. The emblem is the same for all the districts in which the ticket is presented.

Should no majority ticket secure the required 25 per cent. of the votes cast, then the electoral proportional system, formerly in use, comes into play and each ticket, whether majority or minority, elects the number of deputies to which it is entitled in proportion to the votes polled.

All the controversies arising out of the new electoral law be settled by the court of appeal of Rome; which will also make the final count.

CHAPLIN IS BACK WITH BOTH FEET.

Miss Purviance, Who Scored Distinct Triumph In Chaplin's "Woman of Paris," Will Again Appear.

By JACK JUNGMEYER.

HOLLYWOOD, April 8.—It is a curious coincidence that whenever Charlie Chaplin begins a picture his bamboo cane is as busy puncturing a flock of assorted rumors as it is describing arcs of comedy.

The latest story to be deflated is persistent whispering that Charlie had severed all professional connection with Edna Purviance, many years his leading lady, because Lita Grey was given that role in his forthcoming production.

This Charlie emphatically wishes to deny, asserting that Miss Purviance is still under contract and receives her weekly salary just as if she were actively engaged.

Miss Purviance, who scored a distinct triumph in Chaplin's "Woman of Paris," will again appear in a dramatic production supervised by Charlie, he announces.

Rumors that the comedian had broken with Edna began shortly after the Courtland Dines shooting scandal, which headlined Miss Purviance and Mabel Normand as dinner guests of the Hollywood bon vivant when the host was shot.

This was shortly before Chaplin announced Lita Grey as leading woman in the Alaskan gold rush picture now being made. And Hollywood, doting on gossipy speculation, promptly drew conclusions.

Another rumor which Chaplin says will not materialize is that he will direct Mary Pickford in a photoplay of the London slums.

He wants it known that he is back in comedies, to continue playing the character that brought him fame and fortune. While a Chaplin unit for production of dramatic films may be organized under his supervision, the old type comedies will not be relinquished.

And while he's spiking speculation, Charles Spencer Chaplin, the world's most celebrated bachelor, enters a general denial that he is engaged to be married to anyone, famous or otherwise.

AUSTRALIA'S ONLY HOPE IN OLYMPICS.

Fencing and Rifle Shooting Are the Summer Snorts That They Will Make Good Showing In.

PARIS, April 8 (Associated Press).—Austria hesitated long before deciding to participate in the 1924 Olympic Games, but once having made up their minds the Austrian athletes are resolved to make a strong bid for world recognition. At Chamonix her unrivalled figure skaters, singles and pairs, carried off two firsts and one second in the three events competed.

Fencing and rifle shooting are the events in the summer sports towards which the Austrians are bending every effort in their training. Austria's fencers in pre-war Olympic Games have always given a good account of themselves, and French fencers here feel that they will again prove a factor to be reckoned with. Austria will be represented by eight fencers and two jurymen.

An Austrian team of six men will compete in the rifle target shooting competition, while two will enter the clay pigeon shooting.

The Austrians have specialized in the light and middle-weight boxing classes, and will be represented only in these two categories.

They have entries for ten track events, the 5,000 metres being the race which they have uppermost in their minds.

Ten shot putters and javelin throwers are entered and five wrestlers, also in the light categories.

Austrian oarsmen, however, have remained irreconciliable, and absolutely refuse to participate in the Olympics from which their German comrades are barred.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Hanging in all the chartered banks and many post offices, from the Pacific to the Provinces by the Atlantic, is Federal Government circular offering assisted passages and loans without interest to desirable farm settlers from abroad. The opening sentence reads thus:

"Any British subject in Canada may nominate any British subject in Great Britain or Northern Ireland who will take up farming, or work as a farm laborer, in Canada."

Why put Southern Ireland out of bounds? Why this discriminatory distinction and definition as to the prescribed boundaries? Why not say that only Belfast farm laborers are wanted in Canada? Who knows but the Dominion immigration agents in the United States are making representations on behalf of our country, that only disciples of the Ku Klux Klan are wanted in the Dominion as settlers. Are we to perpetuate the preaching of the gospel of sectarian hates in this country? The Irish immigrant, like our own Canadians, usually head for the United States when they leave home. I do not belong to any society whatever, but I know that certain psalm-singing pharisees have made it a lucrative occupation to keep the smouldering embers of religious and racial strife always ready to blaze. This cancer of intolerance is one of our worst afflictions. It was hoped by many that the great cataclysm of 1914-1918 would end or mend such discord. I believe that the world is producing no finer citizen than the average Canadian of to-day. Intolerance has lost us millions of our best people. This is not the time of place to discuss the Irish situation—past or present, north or south—but I may be permitted to point out that the late Rt. Hon. Baron Shaughnessy, Hon. Edward Blake, Sir Frank Smith of Toronto, Nicholas Flood Davin, Darcy McGee, and others such, have no peers among the benefactors of Canada who have appeared since Confederation. Our consular, trade, and immigration staffs certainly need reorganization. The immigration agent will, no doubt, be startled to learn that the above-named gentlemen, or their fathers, came not from "Northern Ireland," but from Southern Ireland. I cannot believe that Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, or the present minister of immigration and acting minister of finance (Hon. James Robb) are in sympathy with the unseemly announcements contained in the circular in question. Yet it bears the seal of the Crown and is a State document. Hence my protest. Moreover, it is not easy to believe that the Ontario ministers share the views of the immigration propaganda. Certainly Hon. George P. Graham, or Hon. Thomas Lowe, would never have sat in Parliament without the loyal support of Irishmen. In old Quebec city, Hon. Ernest Lapointe has no more ardent supporters than that large element who are traditionally Liberals, and who were conspicuous in all Sir Wilfrid Laurier's campaigns from 1874 to the end.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: Some little time ago I ventured to write a New York paper as follows:

"My theory is that the world is still shell-shocked. Who but a lot of raving lunatics would re-edit a book, cutting out what they do not like, and then call it the 'Word of God?' Who but a docile and benighted people would sit and take it for Gospel?"

I have received letters from people approving the question. Perhaps it may interestyour readers also.

DO YOU BELIEVE IN BEING LUCKY.

Napoleon Might Have Won Waterloo If Rain Had Not Mired His Artillery.

By ALBERT APPLE.

A monkey almost strangled Cromwell to death when he was a baby in the cradle. For a few moments, until he was discovered and driven away, that ape held the destiny of nations in his hairy paws. How do you explain it? Luck? A mat ter of chance?

Important events of the world and our own lives often hinge on such petty little details that an observer is baffled to explain.

Napoleon might have won Waterloo if a rain had not mired his artillery.

Mohammed, pursued by enemies, hid in a cave in Mount Shur. A spider promptly spun a web across the cave's entrance. Seeing the web, the pursuers reasoned that no one could have entered without breaking the silken threads. They passed on. Mohammed escaped. That spider determined the religious belief of billions of people later. The same cave-spiderweb story, by the way, is told about other historical characters—borrowed from Mohammed.

If Cleopatra's nose had been shorter, the conditions of the world would have been different. So wrote Pascal in his epigrams. Her beauty made her one of the most powerful women that ever lived.

A small boy in church, watching a chandelier swaying back and forth, conceived the idea of the pendulum.

Luther might have been a lawyer if a terrific rainstorm had not prevented him from keeping an appointment with a friend.

Giotto, one of the early Florentine painters, might have continued a shepherd boy if a sheep drawn by him on a stone had not happened to attract the attention of a great artist—Cimabue—who fired Giotto with ambition.

Nearly everybody believes in luck It they didn't, games of chance like cards would be entirely displaced by games of skill, like chess. Ambition is kept alive and nurtured by hope. And hope is lured on by a belief, whether admitted or denied, that luck will bring opportunity and fortune.

Luck, after all, is simply the popular way of expressing success or failure under the scientific laws of chance or probabilities. These laws are mathematical. Gamblers use them. Insurance rates are based on them.

But most of us cannot accept chance as a satisfactory explanation of such crucial incidents as baby Cromwell escaping death at the monkey's hands. Some prefer to believe in fatalism. Others are confident that the guiding hand of Providence is back of it all.

CHEMICAL ANALYSIS OF FOUR STAPLE FOODS.
1—Milk. 2—Eggs.
3—Potatoes. 4—Apples.

By BERNARD FANTUS.

(In Hygeia.)

EATING is the most important business of life, whether we like to admit it or not. Yet, strangely enough, most of us are not any more concerned about the whys and wherefores of food than the babe sucking at its mother's breast.

Now if it made no difference what we ate, the general indifference of mankind to the reasons underlying our dietetic habits might be more readily comprehensible; but, in point of fact, our food is a highly complex mixture that, to maintain health, must have a certain definite composition in quantity as well as in quality.

To the uninitiated, the most remarkable thing about the food of mankind may seem its great variety and variability. Yet, when analyzed, it is remarkable for its correspondence in composition. All food contains the six elementary principles: protein, carbohydrate, fat, vitamins, salts and water; and these in fairly fixed relative proportions.

Most important from the standpoint of quantity, as well as urgency of need, is water. A strong man may go for almost three weeks without solid food before he dies from starvation; he cannot go without water for more than three days. This is because "all cells live in water and in running water." Cells exposed to air die. We can live outside of water because we are protected against rapid drying up by a fairly waterproof dead covering, the horny layer of the epidermis. Beneath this live our cells surrounded, thanks to the circulation, by water in motion.

The most pre-eminent material in all living matter is protein; the word, indeed, meaning "pre-eminent." Life, as we know it, has never yet been found outside of structures of protein. Living protein constantly undergoes a certain kind of decomposition, or breaking down, which is the veritable chemical essence of the life process; this must be balanced by a continual building up, or the cell dies.

Green vegetable cells alone are capable of building up protein from inorganic material. All other life must get its protein from these vegetable cells. Thus all our food is derived from the vegetable world, either directly or indirectly after its passage through an animal body.

Salts and the still mysterious, recently discovered vitamins must be present in the right kind and amount; otherwise life comes to a standstill or disease results. The secret of the vitamins was revealed to us by experiments on rats and mice, pigeons and other small laboratory animals.

Further study showed that there are at least three different bodies, of as yet unknown composition, present in certain of our foods which are in minute quantities essential to our well being and proper growth.

One of these is so delicate that heating and most other methods of food preservation destroy it. Lack of it causes scurvy, which can be prevented and cured by a substance contained in fresh fruits and vegetables. Lack of another vitamin causes beriberi. Rickets probably and pellagra possibly are due to vitamin deficiency.

These vitamins are products of the plant world, though animals store them in certain parts of their body, as in the liver, and secrete them into their milk.

Milk is a good example of the exquisite care nature takes in providing suitable food for those who cannot provide for themselves. It is a complete meal for infants, accurately balanced and adjusted to the requirements of the particular young creature for whom it was secreted. It is, however, not as suitable for any other creature.

Not to be nursed by its mother is therefore a great misfortune for an infant. The death rate among the bottle fed is very much higher than among the breast fed; and a bottle fed infant, though it survive, may have had such a poor start in life that it will never be as robust and well as it might have been.

Yet many a young mother carelessly robs her child of its most precious birthright—mother's milk—no doubt not realizing the harm she does.

There is one important deficiency in milk, namely in regard to iron; the infant's body on the other hand contains an excess. It is as if nature would not trust this important food element to the chance of poor digestion and absorption and thus provided us with a little excess store of it at birth. When nursing is prolonged much beyond the ninth month, the store of iron becomes exhausted; and, unless the child is given appropriate additional feeding, it becomes anemic.

At this point, the importance of eggs in the diet may perhaps be appreciated. An egg has, of course, the same chemical elements as the chick that hatches from it, a egg being almost pure tissue building material. The yolk contains quite a large proportion of iron, from which the little chick's blood is built up. Thus egg forms a particularly appropriate addition to the infant's food after weaning. When a person has become anemic from improper food habits, increasing the amount of egg eaten may make the taking of iron medicine superfluous. It should be said, however, that there are some children with whom eggs do not agree.

The chief deficiency of egg as food is that it contains no carbohydrate, or fuel for force production; the chick growing within the egg, of course, does not need it as it does not move. When egg is used as human food, this carbohydrate deficiency is corrected by eating it with bread or potatoes.

The older the child gets, the less rapidly he grows and the more he exercises. Hence less tissue building material and more fuel for power production—carbohydrate—is required. This we obtain chiefly from cereals.

Bread and milk almost constitute a complete diet even for an adult. The chief disadvantages of such a diet would be that it is too bulky for the stomach and does not leave bulk enough in the intestine. As milk is almost 90 per cent water its bulkiness may be reduced by oliminating the water, as is done in the making of butter and cheese. Milk bread, that is, bread baked from dough made with milk, is more nearly complete nourishment than bread made with water. If bran is added to the bread, as in the making of bran bread, this increases the amount of residue, or "ballast," in the bowel and thus corrects the constipating tendency of the bread and milk diet.

We have, however, other and more profitable ways of adding "ballast" to the diet: namely, by using vegetables and fruits. These furnish not only cellulose residue but also vitamines and alkali.

Fruits and vegetables also furnish alkali to neutralize the acids continually formed by the life process and introduced by animal food and cereals, which leave an acid ash. Vegetables leave an alkaline ash. It is well to have a liberal amount of alkali producing food in the diet, as it is believed that this lessens the tendency to kidney disease and to arteriosclerosis. Otherwise green vegetables and luscious fruits add little to our nutrition.

We have seeds particularly rich in carbohydrate, the cereals; seeds especially rich in protein, the pulses (peas, beans and lentils); and seeds very rich in fat, the nuts.

Among the underground stores of nourishment, potatoes are the richest and most important. They compare with bread in being chiefly carbohydrate food; but differ from it in the reaction of their ash. Cereals have an acidifying tendency, while potatoes are alkalinizing. A liberal supply of potatoes in our daily ration is therefore of advantage.

Meat is chiefly concentrated protein nutriment.

People like meat not only because it is easily digested, concentrated nourishment, but also because it carries with it, in its extractives, a stimulant to its own digestion. In the making of soup, these stimulants are separated from the protein, which becomes insoluble on cooking, so that soup is quite devoid of nutriment unless such is added to it.

Because of its stimulant effect to digestive secretion, soup is used at the beginning of a meal; it also forms a good vehicle for protein nutriment, such as peas, beans or eggs. However, meat and soup should be used in moderation, because excess burdens the system with toxic waste products.

The caffeine beverages, tea and coffee, when taken clear, are not nutritious. They stimulate gastric secretion, the central nervous system, the muscular system, including the circulation, and the kidneys. It cannot be doubted that they help man in his struggle for existence when used in moderation, preferably as a breakfast cup.

Cocoa is more of a food and less of a stimulant than tea and coffee; therefore it is less likely to be used in excess.

Though alcohol is oxidized in our system like fat and carbohydrate, it is too toxic to be classed properly as a food. Mankind craves it because of its narcotic qualities, which are capable of giving pleasure and of relieving pain. Unfortunately, these same narcotic qualities directly lead to its use in excess, as it undermines and finally destroys self-control.

How a Priest Invented the Silk Stocking

ALTHOUGH millions of women wear silk stockings there is scarcely one who knows that this fashion was started by a curate of Nottinghamshire, England. The name of this priest was William Lee, according to the London Tit-Bits. He invented the first stocking-making frame in the days of Queen Elizabeth. The main principles of his invention are embodied in the modern machine, which weighs five or six tons, and turns out a dozen finished pairs of stockings an hour, as compared with the dozen a week of the hand frame.

But while pure silk goes into the making of the more expensive kinds of stocking, artificial silk is the basis of the manufacture of hundreds of thousand of pairs of the cheaper varieties. This silk is obtained from wood pulp. Frequently stockings made of this class of silk are lined at the feet with cashmere, to enhance their durability.

The term stocking is derived from stock or stump, meaning the part left when the foot has been cut off. In olden times lower garments were made all in one piece, from the waist to the ties. This garment was called a stock. When it was divided, and knee breeches came into fashion, the lower part was known as the netherstock, and later as stockings. Incidentally, the word sock originated in soccus, the Italian for slipper or light shoe.

Never was the silk stocking more popular than it is to-day, but it is worth while remembering that our grandmothers and their grandmothers before them were by no means blind to the charms of this kind of hosiery. Queen Elizabeth accepted a pair made by the Rev. William Lee, who started the industry in France because he could not find sufficient support for the enterprise in his own country.

The secrets of silk making were formerly guarded with great care. In Roman times an emperor bribed two Persian monks to visit China and bring back specimens of the worm that spun silk. They accomplished their mission by concealing the eggs of the silkworm in a hollow cane.

Later, at the beginning of the eighteenth century, a manufacturer of Derbyshire, England, named Lombe disguised himself as a workman and obtained employment in certain Italian factories, where he made drawings of the machinery used in the different processes. On his return he obtained a grant from the British Government and, building a new factory, started a great industry.

Why do most women like silk stockings? Cynical males would probably answer that the fashion is the outcome of woman's vanity. While there may be some truth in this assertion, experts agree that silk stockings are popular because they keep their shape better than stockings of any other material.

The reason for this is to be found in the fact that silk will stretch fully a quarter over its normal length and still retain its elasticity, without any sign of slackness. Compare silk stockings with those of any other material, and it will be seen that the silk variety fit the leg and foot perfectly, whereas with other kinds there is usually a noticeable tendency to loosen.

CAMPHOR Made from TURPENTINE

TURPENTINE is the principal ingredient of artificial, or "synthetic," camphor. It would be more accurate, however, to say "pinene," of which turpentine contains 70 per cent.

The chief source of natural camphor is the island of Formosa, which belongs to Japan. But destruction of the camphor trees has had the effect of elevating the price, and thereby a profitable market for the synthetic product has been gained.

It was the Germans who invented synthetic camphor. Later on, American chemical concerns undertook to manufacture it. The artificial product is really superior to that produced by nature, being purer and of more uniform quality than the gum of the camphor tree.

Nevertheless, the synthetic camphor industry just limps along. The price of the natural product fluctuates considerably. When it is high, there is good profit in the manufacture; when it is low, the case is otherwise—notwithstanding the fact that the bulk of the world's supply of turpentine is produced in the United States.

For household purposes camphor has been replaced to a great extent by naphthaline, which is a by-product of the distillation of petroleum. It is the stuff from which moth balls are made. But within recent years many new uses have been found for camphor, as, for example, in the manufacture of celluloid and in the production of an artificial oil of sassafras.

Butterfly Wings Made Into Jewelry

RINGS, brooches, pendants and other items dear to the feminine mind are now made of butterfly wings protected with polished crystal and in silver settings. Very often an entire specimen of the gorgeous insect itself, from which these trinkets are made up, is used in fashioning a striking brooch.

There are only one or two species of butterfly used for these brooches and pendants, the finest of all being that known to the scientific world as morpho rhetenor, perhaps the most splendid butterfly in the world.

It is found in the forests of the Amazon region, soaring above the dark swamps and high over the tops of the tallest trees, where it displays its jewel-like wings far out of reach of the collector's net.

Such butterflies cannot be caught in the ordinary way, being so wary that they fly off before one can approach even within a half-mile of them. The extremely bright, liquid blue, more intense than that of sapphires or any other natural product, is used by the insect for dazzling purposes, as it tantalizingly flashes its gorgeous wings to the bewilderment of any bird or other foe.

Morpho butterflies were once very difficult to obtain, one collector only succeeding in capturing two specimens in eleven years. But they are now to be had in considerable numbers due to the discovery of the caterpillars from which the insects are reared by natives for export. Because of this fact the new butterfly jewelry became possible.

The color, when protected by a crystal covering, is practically permanent, as it is a kind of blue produced by the reflection of light upon the scales of which the butterfly wings are made up, and as long as the scales are uninjured the blue remains. In the event, however, of breakage or bruising, a new portion of wing is easily put in.

Only the male butterflies of this race are so brilliantly colored, the females being of a dull brown and are so different in appearance that they were formerly actually listed as entirely different species.

Is PAIN an INDEPENDENT Sense?

ONE who has burned a finger or bumped a rheumatic joint is likely to consider pain a sort of modification of the sense of touch. Doctors, however, believe that the sense of pain is not necessarily connected at all with the sense of touch. Evidently, they say, the sensation of pain is received and transmitted by certain nerve endings specially designed for that purpose. Nature, of course, did not intend that these nerves should function and cause us to feel pain except when through accident, abuse or neglect something goes wrong with certain tissues or organs and they demand attention in order that the trouble may be remedied in some way. In other words, pain is only a warning signal which calls our attention to some disorder so that we may take steps to have it cured or to avoid things which cause such trouble.

Strange as it may appear organs which have no ordinary sensibility whatever may be the seat of the most exquisite pain. For instance, the Journal of the American Medical Association says that the visceral peritoneum and the intestine are not sensible to pain; the intestine may be cut, sewed or handled without its owner feeling any sensation whatever. Yet a strong contraction of the organ's muscular wall or an increased distension—as when a boy eats too many green apples or even indulges excessively in wholesome food—will give rise to a severe griping pain. In the same way the ureters, which are devoid of sensation, can become the seat of excruciating pain when they are contracted firmly on a retained calculus or stone.

Authorities differ considerably as to the reasons for these seeming discrepancies. A German investigator has lately announced the opinion that though the visceral organs for the most part are not sensitive to pain they do exhibit such sensitivity in certain localities. In these nerve branches can invariably be detected. Even the sympathetic nerves, this man declares, may serve to conduct sensations of pain. Abdominal operations are usually comparatively painless for the reason, presumably, that the number of visceral nerves capable of conducting pain stimuli is relatively so small.

Petrified Trees Found to Be a Source of Radium

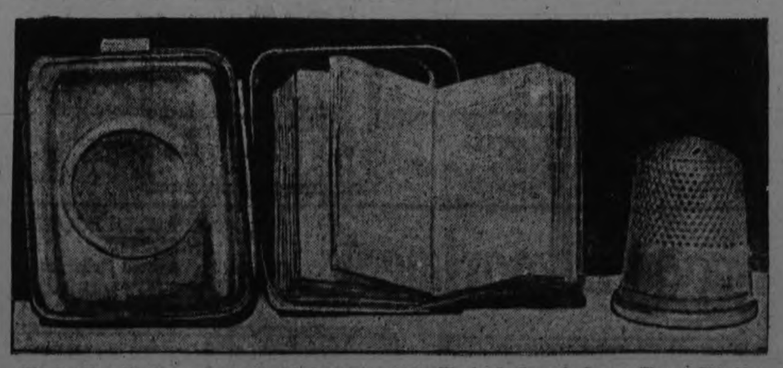
SCIENTISTS have just discovered that radium exists in the trunks of petrified trees found in Western Colorado, and a process has been perfected for the extraction of this most precious of all metals, which promises to increase the world's meager supply.

Petrified trees, standing in the position in which they grew and completely covered by sandstone, says a contributor to Popular Science Monthly, have been found to contain large quantities of uranium oxide and vanadic oxide. From the first of these radium is obtained, 250 tons of the material being required to produce one gram of radium.

Millions of years ago, the movements of the earth's crust caused areas covered with vegetation to be submerged. Rivers, running into these tree-covered depressions, filled them with silt and sand. Gradually the loose sand was turned to stone by pressure and the cementing process due to chemicals in the water. The uranium compounds suspended in the water gradually were deposited in the cells of the trees. The wood disappeared, and in its place was left a mineral called carnotite, still retaining the form of the original tree.

In time the water receded to lower levels, or the land rose and there remained the dry sandstone hills in which were embedded the petrified trees, composed of carnotite and other mineral substances.

A Pigmy Dictionary for the Vest Pocket



The Smallest Dictionary in the World, Containing 14,000 Words, Is Scarcely Larger Than a Thimble.

WHAT is claimed to be the smallest dictionary in the world is a pigmy volume, scarcely larger than a thimble. This tiny book, which contains 14,000 words, is 1 1-16 inches long, 13-16 inches wide and 5-16 inches thick. It is the property of Mrs. Joseph Griffin, of New York City.

This "microscopic" edition of Webster's has 384 pages and has been in use 35 years. It was printed in Scotland. The photograph shows the size of the dictionary compared to a thimble.

NEWS LAKEFIELD AND DISTRICT

The Village Snow Plough Takes a Well-Earned Rest—Personals.

LAKEFIELD, April 8.—On Monday evening an emergent meeting was held in Clementi Lodge, No. 313, A. F. & A. M., to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the lodge. The first meeting was held on April 7th, 1874. Past masters occupied the chairs on this special occasion.

On Sunday evening next the members of the lodge will attend service at St. John's Church in a body. The lodge, organized fifty years ago, was named for Rev. Vincent Clementi, who was rector of St. John's Church, and in whose time the present edifice was erected.

So it is fitting that the golden jubilee church parade should be held there in the church built by the founder of the lodge.

The farm, stock and some house hold furniture, the property of A. E. Dawson, were sold at his farm in Orono on Friday afternoon last.

The village snow plough has been packed now for the season in its summer quarters, having done splendid service all winter. Its last trip of the season was made on Wednesday morning after the heavy storm of April 1.

Messrs. Hill & Sabatino have installed a pumping system for washing their cars. It will also provide work for the "colt" during the summer season.

The Grove School closed on Friday last for the Easter vacation, the boys leaving for their homes that day.

The Misses Burgess of Peterboro' were in the village for the week end.

Mrs. Robert Nugent, who spent the past month in Peterboro', has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Hendren and Miss Ivah, were in Peterboro' on Friday last.

Wm. Simpson, of Sudbury, is spending a few days at his home in the village.

Miss Eileen Higgs, of Peterboro', was the week-end guest of Miss Jean Erskine.

R. J. Knox, of Peterboro, spen the week-end with friends in the village.

Miss Laura Walsh, of Hastings, was a week-end visitor in the village.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Fitzgerald motored to Peterboro' on Friday last.

Miss Lilian Condon was in Hastings for the week-end.

Miss Irene Madill, of Peterboro', is a week-end visitor in the village.

Mrs. Walter Madill has returned home from St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Everett, of Palmerston, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Sutton last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Hill and children of Lock No 4 were in the village on Saturday.

IRISH TROUBLES ARE NOT SERIOUS.

The Irish Soldiers Feel That the Free State Was Won By Their Campaign.

By J. W. T. MASON.

NEW YORK, April 8 (United Press).—Disturbances in the Irish Free State over the question of throwing 30,000 soldiers out of work, through demobilization of the army, are no more than the modern counterpart of the army troubles in America at the conclusion of the Revolutionary War. The Irish soldiers feel that the Free State was won by their campaign, and by the spirit which they personified. Therefore, they demand a privileged position.

After the American Revolution, efforts of the civilian authorities to look upon the army simply as a machine, and difficulties about overdue backpay, caused a number of officers to start a royalist movement, culminating in the offer of the crown to George Washington. The common sense of Washington smoothed the trouble, and civilian control eventually was firmly established.

In Ireland there is every indication that a similar outcome will result. After self-government has been won by an appeal to the sword, in any country, trouble develops between the military and civilian officials. Whichever side wins in the end determines whether the new government shall be militaristic or democratic. There is not enough militarism in Ireland to allow the soldiers to win.

Army It Doesn't Need

The demobilization order of the Government, however, has had to be withdrawn for the time being because there is still a lively recollection among the Irish of the decisive influence guerilla warfare and military turmoil played in the establishment of the Free State. Ireland has no need whatever for her present army of 50,000 men. The only practical use of a Free State Army is to prevent the Republican rebels from taking the field; and the De Valera forces have become so inactive that the problem of dealing with them, as disturbers of the peace, is a matter for the police rather than the military.

The Irish Government wants the army to number about 17,000. Even this strength is more than practical considerations require. But it would be specially hard on the officers, numbering about 1,000, to send them back to civilian employment, to occupy very subordinate roles in civil life, after their work in establishing the Free State Government. The officer class feels a sense of dignity and does not like to surrender commissions for low civilian posts and play no further part in the Government they established than to vote at elections. The officer class is always the trouble centre under these circumstances. It was the officers, after the American Revolution, who tried to make Washington king.

All Human Nature

Though patriotic duty should induce the Irish military faction to return without protest to their home affairs, the civilian authorities at Dublin have to deal with human nature as it is. A slow process of demobilization is better than a peremptory all-inclusive movement. It salves the pride of the officers, and at the same time permits them to fit themselves one by one into civilian life.

More satisfactory results will follow that system than can possibly result from letting loose a thousand officers at once to scramble for the few immediately available choice civilian positions.

There is no danger to the Free State in the present unpleasantness. Self-government in Ireland has not failed. On the contrary, the quick realization by the Dublin authorities that they have made a mistake shows that common sense rules. The continued application of common sense and recognition of the pride and sensibilities of the soldiers who gave the Free State to Ireland will end the crisis and continue to keep Ireland's Government in civilian hands.

FIELD MUSEUM GOT RARE COLLECTIONS.

New Zealand Jade Is Hard and Tough and the Manufacture of Small Implements Required Weeks of Labor.

CHICAGO, April 8 (Associated Press).—A rare collection of stone implements, jade and feather pieces from the native Maori of New Zealand, many of them apparently antedating the great migration, has just been acquired by Field Museum of Natural History here.

The Maori were famous for their skill in feather work and for their carvings in wood and bone. Some explorers are of the opinion that the discovery of jade by early visitors was one of the main reasons for the settlement of the island. New Zealand jade is hard and tough and the manufacture of small implements required weeks of labor. It was sawed with thin slabs of sandstone and then polished with fine sand and water.

The collection includes a number of excellently shaped clubs of diorite. Some of the stone implements were found buried deep in the soil and differ so much from those of the Maori that they are believed to be the work of earlier black inhabitants. One of the most valuable feathered objects is a chief's waist mat woven of native flax and decorated with white hair from the tail of an extinct species of dog. Of the wood carvings the most important are three large boxes covered with scrolls and grotesque animals and faces cut in high relief. Various small carvings are in bone and ivory inlaid with alabone shell.

Ancestors of the Maorians were daring navigators whose exploits rivaled those of the Norsemen. Although they had only stone tools they built large and seaworthy vessels and did much exploring. They are credited with having discovered New Zealand before 1000 A.D.

THE REPARATIONS REPORT PUBLISHED.

Favors Establishment of Committee of Five to Regulate Gold Flow.

PARIS, April 8. United Press. — The Matin to-day publishes what it calls a "complete resume of the Dawes' report." It stresses the various sources from which funds for reparations payments are to be obtained, and understands that these are to be interdependent, so that if one fails, revenue from the others will be increased proportionately.

For example, says the Matin, a deficit on the railways will result in supplementary tax on Germany's fiscal resources.

"The project," the Matin says, "is based on the following alternative—either assure a reparations minimum annuity of two and one half billion gold marks, and a maximum of three billions, or mobilization of capital of at least sixteen billions, to which a minimum of one and one-half millions, and a maximum of two billions will be added.

"The greatest difficulty concerns the transfer abroad of such immense sums without troubling the international financial market.

"The experts," continues the Matin "suggest the creation of a permanent committee of five charged with regulation of this flow of German capital to other countries, to prevent economic troubles."

NOT A NATIONAL HOME

LONDON, April 8. — United Press —At best, Palestine can only be a sort of Semitic Switzerland for Jews and not a national home, Israel Zang will declared in a speech to Rotarians at Worthing.

"The Jews there are obliged to buy every inch of land on a rising market. The bulk of the Jews of the world must remain exactly as they are at present.

EUCHRE PARTY AT BAILIEBORO

Under Auspices of Cavan and South Monaghan U. F. O. Club—Largely Attended.

BAILIEBORO, April 8.—The Cavan and South Monaghan U.F.O. Club held a progressive party and dance in their club hall at Centreville on Friday evening, April 4.

It took about twenty tables to accomodate the crowd, and there were quite a number besides who did not play euchre.

Miss Kathleen Ibister, Messrs. C. Hall, and Geo Berry were in carge of the tables, and looked after the punching of the tally cards.

At elevent-thirty o'clock the cards were collected and dainty refreshments were served. The ladies prize was won by Gerald Armstrong who was taking the place of a lady on account of not having as many ladies to play as there were men. William Isbister won the gentleman's prize for winning the most games. The consolation prizes were won by Miss Violet Atchison and Jack Hiscock.

After lunch the Stewart Orchestra provided good music for dancing and the happy event broke up about 2.30 o'clock.

Among those who were present were: Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Ibister, Mr. and Mrs. H. Moncrief, Mr. and Mrs. R. Moncrief, Misses E. Donaldson, L. and E. Perrin, P. Bowles, L. REGULAR MEETING ROSENEATH WOMEN

News of Roseneath and the District -- Reeve in Hospital.

ROSENEATH, April 8.— The regular meeting of the Women's Institute for the month of April was held at the home of Mrs. Albert Halstead on Thursday with a goodly number of the ladies present.

The meeting was opened with the singing of "The Maple Leaf," after which the minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

There was much discussion on the questions of lighting the village streets and also on putting the running water in the school. Those ladies that had been appointed on the dierent committees gave their reports. Mr. Harold Campbell of Harwood was present and explained the Delco light system and the cost of installing. The trustees of the school were interviewed and promised to pay half the expenses, providing water could be supplied satisfactorily.

It was decided to have the young people of Plainville present their play, "Dust of the Earth," on Saturday, 24th May. This concluded the business part of the meeting.

Miss E. Brown gave her paper on the works of our popular author, whose pen-name is "Marion Keith." This was very interesting, as many of those present had read her books. Miss Vera Varcoe read a piece on Australia, which was very instructive.

The district president, Mrs. Abert Nill, was present and gave a much appreciated address on Federation.

A hearty vote of thanks was given Mrs. Halstead for her hospitality.

The next meeting will be held at Mrs. J. A. Brown. A good attendance is expected, as this will be the yearly meeting and election of the officers.

The meeting closed with the singing of "God Save the King," after which the hostess served a very dainty lunch.

Mr. Thomas H. Honey, Reeve of Alnwick Township, was taken to Nicholls Hospital, where he was operated on Saturday.

Mrs. John Murphy was taken suddenly ill on Thursday night.

The stage drivers, Mr. Joseph Braithwaite to Hastings and Mr. Delbert Brisbin to Cobourg, are again using their cars on the roads.

Mrs. Fred Harper and family expect to leave on Friday to join Mr. Harper at Neepawa, Manitoba. Their household effects were shipped from Hastings on Wednesday. We wish them every success in their new home.

How Fat Actress Was Made Slim

Many stage people now depend entirely upon Marmola Prescription Tablets for reducing and controlling fat. One clever actress tells that she reduced steadily by using this new form of the famous Marmola Prescription, and now, by taking Marmola Prescription Tablets several times a year keeps her weight just right. All good druggists sell Marmola Prescription Tablets at one dollar for a box, or if you prefer, you can secure them direct from the Marmola Co., 4612 Woodward Ave. Detroit, Mich. If you have not tried them do so. They are harmless and effective.

PREMIER THOUGHT CANADA ACCEPTED LAUSANNE TREATY

Attitude of Canada Again Brought Up In British Commons—Premier Desires to Produce All Communications.

LONDON, April 8. — (Canadian Press Cable.)—The question of Canada's attitude towards the Turkish treaty signed at Lausanne, which was broached in the House of Commons last week by Sir John Simon calling the attention of Premier MacDonald to the denial of Premier Mackenzie King of Canada that the treaty imposed obligations on Canada, came up in the House again last night when further questions were asked on the matter.

Premier MacDonald was asked if be remembered that the question originally addressed to himself on the matter was whether Canada had accepted her obligation under the Straits convention and that he replied that he was perfectly sure Canada had so accepted? Was not this reply, the questioner persisted, inconsistent with the emphatic statement by the Canadian Premier that Canada would not accept that obligation or agree to the ratification of the Lausanne treaty?

Premier's Opinion.

Premier MacDonald said it was clear from the meaning of a detached sentence uttered by him, after he had left the subject of Canada's position on the treaty, that in view of what had happened he was of the opinion that Canada would do so.

W. M. R. Pringle, Liberal member for Penistone, Yorkshire, asked: "Are we to understand that Canada does not accept the obligations of the treaty?"

Premier MacDonald —I refer the questioner to Hansard for the precise statement of the Canadian position.

Cries of "Oh."

Produce Correspondence.

Premier MacDonald added that the overseas governments had been asked if they had any objection to laying the papers on the matter on the table, but no reply had yet been received to the query. It was impossible, the Premier said, to lay merely one communication on the table. All the communications would be necessary if the position were to be made clear.

In the debate in the British House of Commons a week ago on the Lausanne treaty, Premier MacDonald said Canada's position was that she would agree to do what the Imperial government did. In order to guard against possible extensions of the principle of the treaty without warning being given Canada desired, Premier MacDonald said, to retain for herself certain rights of decision over and aboye the imperial rights of decision.

In the House of Commons at Ottawa at the beginning of March, Premier Mackenzie King stated that Canada did not regard as binding upon her any of the terms of the Lausanne treaty, nor did the dominion government concur in the ratification of that instrument by its signatory powers. Premier King added, however, that his administration was not objecting to such ratification by other nations.

EXPLOSIAN CAUSES A SUIT

Ammonite Company Asks $400,000 Damage From Nixon Works.

TRENTON, N.J., April 7.— The Ammonite Company, Inc., of New York City, filed suit for $400,000 damages in the United States District Court here against the Nixon Nitration Works of Nixon, N.J., as the result of the explosion at the defendant company's plant, March 1 last. The bill of complaint has two counts, the first alleging carelessness by the defendant, which resulted in the killing of nine of the Ammonite Company workmen, injury to fifty other employes and the destruction of a large quantity of machinery, stock and other material.

The second allegation charges that the Nixon Company violated the New Jersey laws by storing explosives in larger quantities and in small areas than is permitted under the States' statutes.

"Eczema on My Face Completely Relieved"

Miss Winifred Ernest, Box 46, Blockhouse, N. S., writes:

"Ever since I was a little child, I suffered with eczema on my face. At times my face was completely covered with large sores, and I tried nearly every kind of medicine that I heard of with no results. This lasted for over twenty years, until one day I asked the advice of my druggist, who bade me give Dr. Chase's Ointment a trial. After using the Ointment for a few days, the sores began to heal, and soon I was completely relieved of the disease."

YOUR GARDEN

GARDEN CULTURE.

No other plant is more closely identified with the progress of western civilization than the rose.

It is at once an insignia of joy, sorrow, love and exquisite beauty.

It is the flower that knows no caste. It is loved by rich and poor alike.

Climbing roses are generally propagated by hardwood cuttings. Cut-flower roses are grown from hardwood cuttings, greenwood or softwood cuttings, and by budding and grafting. They are also grown from seed.

Soil capable of growing good garden or vegetable crops is adapted to roses. The soil should be deep. Likewise it should be adequately prepared to insure good results.

Rotted cow manure is the best fertilizer. But any other manure may be used.

Do not place the manure in direct contact with the roots nor immediately beneath the plant in any quantity sufficient to cut off direct connection with subsoil and water supply.

Sandy soils need more frequent applications of manure than heavier soils, as sandy soil burns out the organic matter more rapidly.

In planting rose bushes, they should be so spaced that they will come together without overcrowding when reaching maturity.

Plant baby ramblers two feet apart, rugosa and Austrian copper groups, three feet apart, and the hybrid rugosas and other kinds from 4 to 6 feet apart.

Planting should begin in the spring as soon as the ground is dry enough to work. Fall planting is best carried out as soon as the leaves have fallen from surrounding trees and bushes.

It is best to plant stock as soon as it arrives. In event this is not possible, dig a trench and lay the roots in it to bring them in contact with the soil.

Should the rose roots seem dry, soak them in water an hour or two before putting them in the ground. If the stems are shriveled, burying the entire plant for a few days may restore a natural condition and insure growth.

Never plant frozen plants. They should be thawed out GRADUALLY until all frost has been removed.

Cover the roots of rose plants by immersing them in a bucket of water while transferring to the planting ground.

This admonition should be carefully heeded no matter how short the distance to be traversed.

Undue exposure of the roots at planting time kills more roses than anything else.

Dont' plant roses too deep nor too shallow. Keep lower branches out of the soil but gets the roots entirely under.

The hole in which the roses are planted should be several inches larger across than the roots will extend. Spread the roots well in all direction, and, when partially covered, shake the plant up and down to make sure it is in close contact with the soil.

The one great need in rose growing, apart from a fertile soil, is the necessity of cutting back almost to the ground.

By all means bear this in mind. The rose produces its bloom on the shoots it makes after being cut back.

This fact is also true of all summer flowering and late flowering shrubs. Prune them before they begin to grow.

TOMORROW: Promoting growth.

FABLES ON HEALTH

KNOW HUMAN MACHINE.

"Daddy, what happens when we breathe?" asked the ever curious Johnny Mann of Mr. Mann of Anytown.

"Don't ask so many questions," replied Mr. Mann, who invariably used this device to cover up things he didn't know himself.

But it set him to thinking. And the next time he went down to the gymnasium he took the physical director aside and got some tips.

"Same old story," sighed the physical director. "You business men get out in the world of stock tickers and market quotations and, with your mind preoccupied on providing for a family and building up a fortune, you forget the elements of physiology you learned in school; or perhaps you never learned them.

"And you don't do a thing to help impress upon the minds of your children, a lot of things that would be valuable for them to know. Every child, if properly told, can understand the simple fundamentals of the marvellous machine of the body; just the simple rudiments of physiology.

"You'd think yourself an awful dub if you didn't know the mechanics of your automobile. And you try to get your small boy interested in a little steam engine.

"How vastly more interesting and wonderful is the machinery that makes the body go. Wise yourself up.

"Don't pass the buck when your children ask you questions. HELP THEM FIND OUT THINGS."

FRUIT PIES.

An interesting variation for fruit pies is to put the fruit in the bottom of the pan and use only a top crust.

HEART WAS SO BAD HAD TO SIT UP IN BED

Mrs. O. E. Fitzgerald, 106 Ross St., St. Thomas, Ont., writes:—"In the Fall of 1921, I was taken ill with my heart, but I did not pay much attention to it. I kept on with my household duties, but seemed to become worse and worse, and finally had to call in a doctor. He said I was all run down and was a nervous wreck. I had a severe pain in my chest which would move over to my heart and it became so bad I could not lie down, as when I did I had such a smothering feeling I would have to sit up in bed till it passed away.

I tried several remedies, but with no good results. Finally, I was induced to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I took 7 boxes, and I am now as well as I was 30 years ago, and I am now 65 years old."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box at all druggists or dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

It is probable that delegation will meet the Prime Minister and some of the members of cabinet during the after soon or evening. No definite appointment has yet been made.

The Blouse Comes Back

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, April 8 (United Press).—Last season a blouse manufacturer, addressing his salesmen, said: "The blouse may be down, but it's never out."

This spring proves that he was right in his statement, as the blouse has been revived after several years of dormancy, the tailored mode being responsible for its reinstatement in the fashion world.

This season's blouse styles range from tailored bosom-front affairs to gorgeously-embroidered and beaded silk crepes and metal cloths. Sports types are known by their monograms, scarfs and tucked bosom-fronts. Monograms are used either on pockets or scarf ends, and are worked in contrasting colors. Materials such as English broadcloth, flannel and velvet are among the smartest of blouses for sports wear. Plain materials, in bright colors, are favored to pastels and printed fabrics.

For Tailored Wear

For tailored wear, silk crepe, satine broadcloth and lingerie types are shown. Bright colors are used for tailored wear as well as for sports wear, although many new soft shades have been introduced this season, such as powder blue, banana and ashes of roses. Broadcloth is particularly lovely in these soft shades and as it launders well it is not considered an extravagance. The tuck-in type of blouse is quite as popular as the over-blouse effect for wear with the tailored suit. Jabots, pleated or ruffled, are used on many models, either falling from the ends of the collar or from the neckline. Sometimes the jabot falls from one end of the collar only, giving a scarf effect.

For dressy wear silk crepes, heavily beaded in colors, are shown. These are invariably made in overblouse effect and some of them are made sufficiently long to resemble tunics.

A recent fashion show presented several new blouses that are worthy of mention. One of silver cloth, embroidered in colors in floral design, was worn with a white silk crepe jacquette suit. The jacquette was of hip length and the skirt pleated and rather shorter than last season's skirt.

In Tangerine Velvet

Another sports model shown in this review was made of tangerine velvet and was sleeveless. A monogram of white leather was stitched in the centre of the blouse, just below the normal waistline. A short white flannel cape and pleated skirt accompanied this blouse. Though velvet seems rather a heavy material for the Summer blouse, when made without sleeves and with a false back of silk, it is sufficiently cool for comfort. Flannel blouses of the sleeveless variety also may be purchased with silk or cotton backs.

Colorful buttons and pipings trim many of the white satin and lingerie blouses.

* * *

Hip-length overblouses are styles most frequently noticed.

* * *

Men's shirtings creating blouses of "boyish" charm are being sponsored for the more youthful types to accompany the "boyish" tailleur.

* * *

Cuff-links and button fastenings often match. Many women prefer to purchase odd buttons of vivid color and have them made into cuff-links.

* * *

Bright-colored blouses with their collars ending in long scarf effect are worn with the tailcur, the ends of the scarf wrapping about the throat.

AMOUNT OF BOOZE TAKEN INTO U. S. MADE PUBLIC

WASHINGTON, April 8 (Canadian Press). — Secretary of Commerce Hoover made public yesterday the first official estimate of the value of foreign whisky and other liquors smuggled into the United States.

The Secretary places the value at $30,000,000 for 1923.

His figures, reckoned by experts of the Department, is the first official admission that the Government is aware of the huge quantity which escapes customs, coastguards, and Prohibition men.

COLONIAL PATRIOT MINUS HIS HEAD NORTHERNER HAS IT

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 8 (United Press).—The remains of Brig.-Gen. Samuel Elbert, colonial-governor and military leader of Georgia, following the discovery of the bones at Rea's hall, near Savannah, about two years ago, now rest in Colonial Cemetery—all except his head.

The re-interment of Gen. Elbert's bones, together with the remains of his wife, whose bones were also found in the grave discovered by Brig.-Gen. R. J. Travis, has an interesting untold story in connection with the whereabouts of that distinguished patriot's head.

About five years ago, drainage work took laborers to the vicinity where Gen. Elbert's grave was later discovered. While the workmen were digging out Pipemaker's canal, a skeleton head rolled out of the earth.

W. F. Chaplin, superintendent of county public works, took the head to the court house here, and for some time it was on display. Months later, a northern tourist, making a southern tour for Indian relics, visited Savannah. He was a friend of Chaplin, and the head greatly interested him. It was generally believed that the head was that of an Indian.

Because of the tourist's interest in the head, Chaplin gave it to him.

Before Gen. Elbert's remains were discovered Chaplin died, as did his wife. Consequently, it has been impossible to learn the identity of the northerner who holds the head of Gen. Elbert.

It's coming--drastic doings--keep your eyes open

HOW VITAL NERVE FORCE WINS THE JOYS OF LIFE

It Keeps Our Bodies Filled With Energy and Rekindles the Fires of Strength.

A boy wakes and hustles out of bed. He has had enough of bed; he's got to get out in the world and see what's going on—and make something go on. His long sweet sleep has renewed him, restored his vital energy. The only way to keep him in bed is to tie him there.

That boy is on the run when he hits the floor. It takes the whole family to hold him long enough to tie his shoes. That boy has what many men and women lose when they ought still to be young; the vital force and energy that makes a real woman with all the charm of full physical vigor.

That boy has all of his vital nerve force. It has not been impaired by illness, overwork, worry or mental strain—so he is filled with energy that will not be denied. In some men and women the vitality of youth lasts all their lives. They do not know what it means to have weakened or shattered nerves, to have under nourished bodies, to lack strength and purpose.

Such men and women are everlastingly joyous. In work or play, business or pleasure they succeed because of the vital force that is in them.

When our systems no longer respond to Nature's strength building processes we must look to our nerves if we wish to restore ourselves. Our nerves are the positive forces of our lives. We must nourish our nerves, feed them the elements they require. If we suffer from general physical weakness, poor appetite, impoverished blood and nervous depression; if we are too thin, pale, anaemic looking we should begin at once to rekindle the fires of strength.

Such men and women ought to go to their druggist's without delay and begin the home treatment of Wincarnis, the nerve restorative and blood builder. Wincarnis nourishes the nerve system. In twelve days see the improvement this home treatment brings. Wincarnis treatment costs less than ten cents a day. You will no longer worry over failing strength and exhausted nerves.

PAVING PROBLEMS AGAIN ENGAGE

Alderman Crowe favored a careful scrutinizing of the work to be done in order to keep down expenditures.

Mayor Turner said the city is committed to a certain amount of paving which must be done.

Alderman Crowe: "I'm not in favor of calling tenders if we are to do the work in concrete. It is a waste of money since we have our own staff."

Aldermen Fife and Phelan moved that Water Street from Antrim Street to the C. N. R. be paved with concrete.

Alderman Stocker moved as an amendment that the material be asphalt.

Alderman Jones moved that tenders be called for both, the decision to be later made by the council.

City solicitor Joseph Wearing said great care must be taken in amending the by-law. Certain moneys have been borrowed from the banks and the banks' solicitors should pass on the amended by-law.

Alderman Stocker: "Nothing to it. You're paying the bank for your accommodation."

Alderman Phelan: "It's alright to say pooh! pooh! and so on about the bank, but when you go to sell these bonds it's a different thing. If you mutilate this by-law—every by-law is subject to approval of the legal advisor of the bond house—the lawyers will turn down the applications.

"Why not do the portion of the work that has already been started in concrete? We don't have to change the by-law to call for tenders. We can decide later which we want and we do not obligate ourselves to either pavement."

Alderman Stocker: "What possible objection can the bond house have to our changing the by-law to asphalt that's a thousand times better than concrete?"

Alderman Phelan: "That's Alderman Stocker's opinion. In my opinion asphalt is not one, two, three with concrete. The point is the change in the by-law may invalidate it with the bond houses."

Alderman Meyers: "In the first place, the by-law was not in accordance with the recommendation of the committee which did not specify concrete."

Alderman Crowe: "Shouldn't the people who have to pay for the paving have a say as to what kind of pavement they want?"

Alderman Turner seconded a motion by Alderman Fife that tenders be called for paving the several sections with asphaltic, concrete and bitulithic pavement. This includes Water from Brock to Dublin; McDonnel from Aylmer to Reid; Aylmer from McDonnel to Dublin, and George from Romaine to Lansdowne in one section, and under a second section, Water from Antrim to the Canadian National Railway; and, Argyle from Water to Sunnyside.

Wants Local Labor

Alderman Stocker asked to have included in the specifications that local labor be employed, complaining that last year laborers were brought in from all over the country.

Alderman Phelan moved that the Standard Paving Company be asked to repair George Street free in order to maintain their good reputation.

Alderman Fife moved that George Street be repaired this year, even if some other work be omitted.

Alderman Stocker seconded Alderman Phelan's motion.

Alderman Fife: "I consider it childish."

The motion was lost.

Alderman McIntyre expressed the opinion that a small plant should be acquired for repairing asphaltic pavement.

Alderman Fife: "We fail as city representatives if we don't fix George Street South."

Alderman McIntyre seconded Alderman Fife's motion to pave George Street, and it carried.

The vote was challenged and yeas and nays were called for by Alderman Phelan.

Alderman Jones, Fife, McIntyre, Crowe and Mayor Turner voted yea while the nays carried the field with Aldermen Turner, Meyers, Stocker, Phelan, Morrison and Maher voting against the proposal to bind the council to re-surface George Street.

Several Claims on City

A notice of suit was received from Gordon and O'Brien on behalf of Mrs. Emma Trotter of 226 Edinburgh Street. Mrs. Trotter, it is alleged, fell on a sidewalk on Aylmer Street near the corner of Edinburgh Street on March 13, the cause being water which flowed over the sidewalk.

The action is for $1,000. Mrs. Trotter sustained a broken leg.

William Hutchinson, 246 Wescott Street, again asked for consideration of his application for expenses incurred when his daughter Doris was injured by falling through a faulty wooden sidewalk. He said the council had previous notice of the dangerous condition and he has sufficient evidence if he finds it necessary to resort to the courts for relief.

Mr. Hutchinson's communication was followed by a notice from Gordon and O'Brien that settlement will be accepted at $70, but if suit is necessitated it will be entered for $120.

Gordon and O'Brien further advised that action will be entered unless settlement is made for injuries caused when Miss Jane Horsefield, 220 London Street, fell while entering the Toronto Savings and Loan Building on George Street. The present claim is for $300, but if compelled to sue, this will be increased.

A. E. Dixon asked for settlement without litigation of his claim on behalf of J. T. O'Connell and the estate of his late father, John Dixon, for serious damage to the extent of $2,500 by the raising of the street and the erection of a concrete sidewalk on Murray Street, and for further damage to the extent of $350.

All of the claims were referred to the legal committee.

Reports on Utilities Accounts

W. R. Morris, F.C.A., acting on instructions from the city council, presented a statement of the power accounts of the Peterborough Cereal Company, Limited, and the Campbell Flour Mills Company.

This shows amounts paid as follows:

	Pet. Cereal	Campb'll
1918, 3 mos.	$ 876.75	$ 1,088.69
1919	3,507.00	3,782.88
1920	5,969.01	3,206.17
1921	8,427.78	3,307.77
1922	10,077.40	2,380.70
1923	10,810.67	8,454.37
1924, Jan.	1,043.60	702.83

Lighting Central Park

Two plans for additional lighting in Central Park were presented by the Utilities Commission. The first suggested the placing of a magnetite arc lamp at the junction of the walks in the centre of the park at a cost of $100. The second plan called for nine incandescent lamps on standards set on concrete bases at a cost of $1,093.85. H. O. Fisk, manager of the Utilities Commission recommended the first plan.

Applications to Council

Mrs. Eusbia Bashino of 317 Smith Street, applied for a new sidewalk and approach on Smith Street from Reid to Downie.

The Peter Hamilton Co., Ltd., applied for the construction of a sewer on King Street from George Street.

Mr. Carpenter applied for a sidewalk on the west side of Armour Road north of Douro Street.

A. W. Black asked permission to instal a gasoline pump at the corner of Aylmer and Charlotte Streets, at the new premises of the Cowain Co.

The Fontaine Taxi Co. asked permission to instal a pump on Hunter Street and to build a fireproof office.

On an objection that the large number of gasoline tanks in the city is becoming a nuisance, the requests were referred to the Property Committee for discussion with the city engineer.

A petition signed by four residents of the district asked for a sidewalk on the north side of Gilmour Street from Monaghan Road to Albertus Avenue.

Jopling and Cooney applied for permission to erect a temporary office and shed near the Montgomery Hotel on Simcoe Street.

The Mather grain sheds where the office is now situated must be vacated to make way for the new Canadian National Railway freight sheds which will be built this year.

The city engineer had refused under the by-law to grant the request, but could see no objection to the erection of the buildings for temporary purposes and subject to removal on proper notice. The request was granted.

Estimates of costs of pavements to be constructed this year were presented by the city engineer as follows: On Argyle Street from Water to Sunnyside, 27 feet wide, $9,375.84, and Sunnyside Street from Argyle to the end of Synnyside, $4,758. This paving is designed to provide an easy-riding surface for patients being taken to Nicholls Hospital.

Board of Health.

A resolution was received from the Board of Health asking whether room can be provided at the sewage disposal plant site for a refuse ground. A second resolution asked that the Council enquire into a method of giving a sewer service on Smith Street, east of the present sewer, and on Harvey Street, between Antrim and Smith Streets.

Approves Resolution.

A letter from G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., acknowledged the Council's resolution regarding the tariff which the Deputy-Speaker characterized "a real Canadian manufacturers' resolution."

"Do you think the Council would support more protection for copper smelting; manufacture of asbestos-yarn; and leather?" Mr. Gordon asked. "These concerns are asking it, and I would like to have the opinion of the City Council on these matters as they affect Peterborough industries."

Alderman Turner moved that Mr. Gordon be asked for particulars of the tariff question pertaining to the classes mentioned.

Better Live Stock Train.

A MacNab, C.N.R. agent, applied for permission to close King Street, between Aylmer Street and Bethune Street, from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Friday, to accommodate a "better live stock special."

The request was granted; the Board of Works to carry out the work.

Vote in Schools.

Alderman McIntyre moved to ask the Board of Education if their schools will be available for use as polling places in the event of legislative sanction being obtained. This is in line with a suggestion made by Mayor Turner on Saturday, and the plan met with general approval.

City Auditor's Report.

The report of F. J. A. Hall, city auditor, for the year ending December 31, 1923, was received. The auditor called attention to the fact that the collector's roll for 1922, which he said should have been returned on or before December 15, 1922, had not been returned on December 31, 1923.

He reported all books of account of the various civic departments in order.

The question of the non-return of the tax collector's roll on time was broached by Alderman Turner. Alderman Phelan said the only way the taxes can be gotten in is by taking drastic action, which is not desired.

It was remarked that for twenty-five years the roll was returned on time, but during this last three or four years conditions have not been propitious. There is still $15,000 due.

Alderman Turner asked whether something could be done to ensure the return of the 1924 tax roll at the proper time.

Alderman Phelan said five per cent. has already been added as a penalty for non-payment, and an extra five per cent. will be added on May 1. "It is not good business to have two rolls in the tax collector's hands at one time," he said.

Alderman Crowe asked if those who are in arrears belong to different clubs in the city, and, if so, "I would have no mercy on them."

Alderman Fife moved that no drastic action be taken.

Alderman Turner moved that the tax collector be advised that the roll for 1924 must be returned on time.

Fire Chief's Report.

Fire Chief George Gimblett submitted his report for March, showing 35 alarms with a loss of $520. The resignation of electrician B. Trotter was regretfully mentioned.

Roy H. Parsons, city engineer, in his monthly report showed sixteen permits issued in March, with a total value of $7,850.

F. Adams, city treasurer, presented a statement of the receipts and expenditures of the city for the first quarter of 1924.

The Caledonian Pipe Band wrote thanking the City Council for its recent grant.

Assistance was sought from the Council by the Amputations Association of the Great War towards having the bonus to disabled veterans made a permanent part of the pension. The letter was forwarded to the Finance Committee for careful consideration.

G. W. Mulligan was granted the use of Central Park for the holding of open-air meetings on Sunday nights. Mr. Mulligan remarked that this is the twentieth similar annual application.

By-Laws Passed.

A by-law to authorize the raising of $25,460 by 20-year debentures for improvements in the water system of the city in 1923 was introduced by Alderman Phelan. A second by-law authorized the issue of debentures for $10,000 for extensions and improvements to the waterworks system.

Alderman Turner introduced a by-law to authorize the completion of a lease of signs in Rivers de Park to J. J. Turner & Sons, Ltd. The lease gives the company exclusive sign privileges in Riverside Park for three years for $50 a year.

Alderman Stocker suggested that small metal signs be excluded, and Alderman McIntyre considered the price too cheap, but the by-law carried without alteration.

Utilities Accounts.

Delinquent water and light charges will not be added to the tax bills of the properties affected as requested by the Utilities Commission, pending investigation.

Alderman Fife objected to the taxing of lights against the property.

Alderman Maher: I think that the Utilities Commission might be capable of collecting their own accounts without loading them on to the city.

Alderman Meyers thought the Commission could collect their accounts if they tried in time.

Alderman Fife moved that the request be received and no action taken.

Alderman Maher seconded the motion.

Aldermen Jones and Phelan moved to refer the request to the Fire, Water and Light Committee for discussion with the Utilities Commission and the previous motion was withdrawn.

Alderman Fife reported that a subcommittee appointed to report on Mr. John Green's lot, south of the C.P.R. track, had not yet reported to the Property Committee. A report will be presented to the Council by the Property Committee.

Supplies for the Board of Works, including a four stave block and tile pipe in carloads, were authorized.

Several renewals of eating-house and billiard table licenses were passed.

Alderman Turner moved to ask F. White to remove hay now stored in the old Rapid Tool building, as the Fire Chief reports the fire hazard too great.

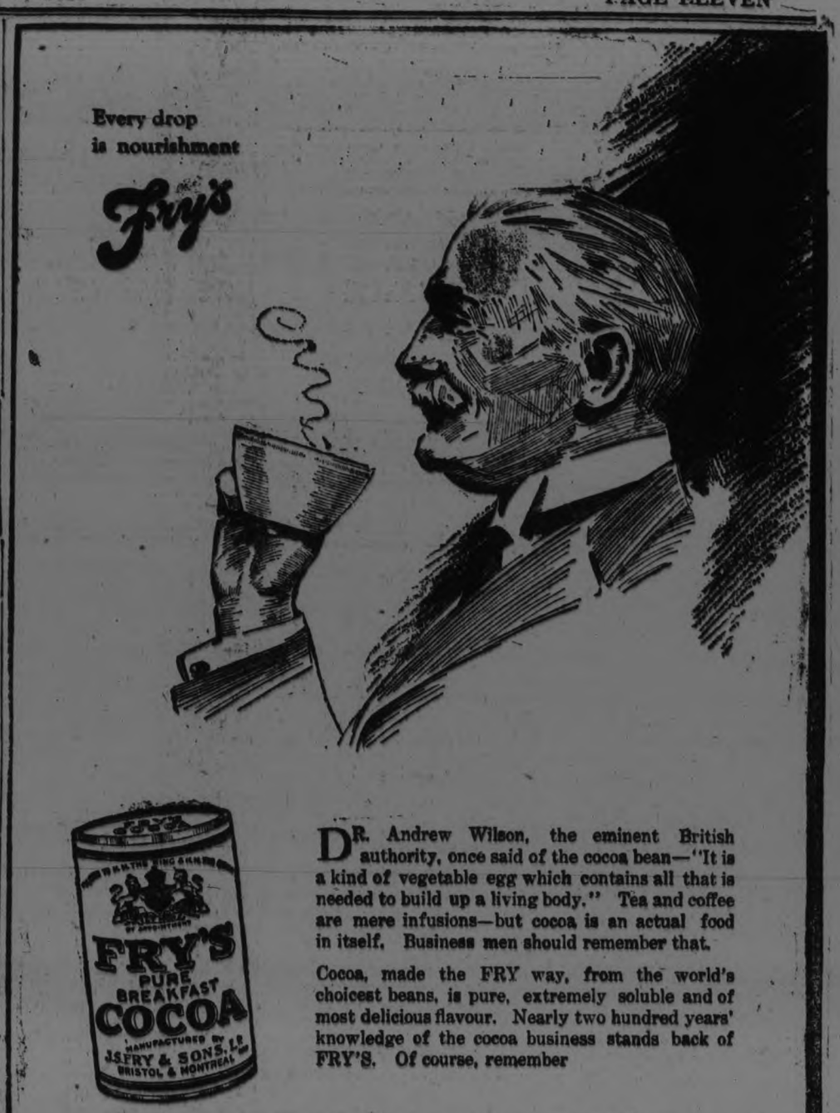
Wants Information.

Alderman Turner moved that in future, when submitting debenture by-laws to the City Council, they be accompanied by a statement showing how the sinking fund and interest are to be provided.

Banquet Juniors.

Alderman Stocker moved and Alderman Jones seconded a proposal to include the junior hockey semi-finalists with the intermediate team. The proposal was passed with favorable comment on the younger team.

A request for a light at 404 Dublin Street was presented by Alderman Morrison.



DR. Andrew Wilson, the eminent British authority, once said of the cocoa bean—"It is a kind of vegetable egg which contains all that is needed to build up a living body." Tea and coffee are mere infusions—but cocoa is an actual food in itself. Business men should remember that.

Cocoa, made the FRY way, from the world's choicest beans, is pure, extremely soluble and of most delicious flavour. Nearly two hundred years' knowledge of the cocoa business stands back of FRY'S. Of course, remember

WHERE GOD IS LEFT OUT.

The Home for Children of Red Army Soldiers in Kremenchug, Russia, in charge of Comrade Vrona, is considered one of the best in the province. The children attend to their work very diligently, draw and study music; games, too, are fairly well ganized. The change in the outlook of the children is tremendous. The children are ashamed to say, "As true as there is a God!" They have become anti-Christians and infidels.

Here is a little scene from a recitation conducted by Comrade Vrona during the "political lesson":

"Uncle Pania, is there a God?"

"We'll talk about that at some other time."

"But tell us now just the same."

"No, there is no God. All those who believe there is a God raise their hands."

There are three, four, seven and ten hands raised and lowered again.

"Now those who are against God."

Quickly a whole forest of hands raise. There is a lusty shout of "Hurrah!" God has lost out.

Little Theatre Club In Jeannette's Play

"Melange," or "Three Women and a Man," a clever one-act comedy, written by Miss Kathleen McCarthy (known to Examiner readers as "Jeannette") is being presented as part of the programme at the Capitol Theatre for the first three days of this week, by the Little Theatre Club, who are affiliated with the Women's Art Association. This all-local production, written, directed and acted by Peterboro people, was heartily enjoyed by a big audience last evening, and the general verdict was that the presentation was a triumph for all concerned.

Miss McCarthy's playlet is convincing and logical, with a plot that contains several unexpected twists and dialogue that is true to type. The characters have been deftly drawn and the development of the action is along reasonable lines, leading to an unexpected climax.

The scene is the fashionable small hat shop of Madame Fantine, on Fifth Avenue, New York, and the principal characters are Madame Fantine herself, her assistant, Irene a successful actress, Gloria Tremaine, and a mere man, who is variously known as Lord Algy, Jim and Fred.

Lord Algy, when the audience sees him first, is apparently the devoted slave of Gloria, but afterwards he is discovered to be the divorced husband of Madame Fantine, who has designs upon the bank roll of the actress, and is "financing" "Jim" until he brings home the bacon. She gives "Jim" $500 with the admonition to make it go as far as he can, and he follows instructions by making it go to California, to which land of oranges and moving picture studios he elopes with Madame's pretty assistant, who has known him as "Fred."

Mrs. McKee Bingham, under whose direction the comedy is produced, is always in the picture as "Madame Fantine." She is at one moment the typical business woman, and at the next the crafty schemer, to the life, and her work throughout is of professional calibre. Miss Claire Mason is effectively cast as the assistant, Irene, portraying the role with a sure touch, and showing no signs of stage-fright or self-consciousness. Miss Dorothy Engel is charmingly effective as the actress, making the part thoroughly convincing.

The male member of the cast, who has to be a different man to each of three women, not the easiest task in the world, is Mr. J. M. Gaiger, who succeeds to the audience's satisfaction in achieving what has been set out for him. It is a part that calls for considerable skill, and Mr. Gaiger makes an admirable success of it, adding much to the success of the presentation.

The locale of the play gives an opportunity for the introduction of a fashion divertisement for which the hats and costumes were supplied by Richard Hall & Company. The three very charming models are Miss Mathilde Masson (Aimee), Miss Jean Eastwood (Suzanne), and Miss Audrey Huycke (Marie), while Miss Eastwood also plays the part of Billy the messenger boy.

The stage direction is supplied by Mrs. E. H. Wood, while the stage settings and management were in charge of Miss Linden Hall, who has been indefatigable in her efforts to supply the proper atmosphere and color. Polly, the parrot, which was loaned for the occasion by Mrs. Clifton Carruthers, helped to add to the effective stage picture, while a clever four-footed actor was "Beauty," the Pomeranian dog which belongs to Miss Iris Edwards.

At the conclusion of the performance last evening, Mrs. Bingham and Miss McCarthy were each presented with handsome bouquets of flowers.

"Melange" will be presented by the Little Theatre Club again tonight, and at matinee and evening performances to-morrow. It is a clever, bright, little performance that will be enjoyed by everyone.—F.D.C.

MAKING MONEY MAKE MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

If you propose to build a house you can save money by investigating the new building processes which reduce the cost of building.

The very high cost of building that has prevailed the last few years has brought about much experiment in methods of building and in processes of dealing with building material. Some of these experiments have been conspicuously successful in reducing the cost of building for the home builder.

Particularly is this true in the matter of cement construction and unit planning. Considerable progress has been made in the way of reducing the very costly item of roofing.

Do not be wholly satisfied with plans that stick to time honored types of construction. Investigate for yourslf and insist that your architect and builder investigate for you as to all new methods of house planning and building.

SIMON BILL MAY PASS IN COMMONS

No Indication of Government's Course on Bill Which Brought About Its Defeat.

LONDON, April 8. — (Canadian Press).—The Government's future action on the evictions question, in connection with which, it suffered defeat in the House of Commons yesterday, is the main topic of political speculation in Parliamentary circles and press, but there is as yet no indication of the course it proposes to take.

It is noteworthy that after the defeat of the Government's Evictions Bill a similar measure, introduced by Ernest Simon, Liberal, passed its second reading without opposition. The Simon Bill was almost identical with the Government bill with the exception of the first clause, objections to which killed the latter. This clause had to do with the reimbursement of landlords whose tenants, through unemployment, are unable to pay rent.

Liberals now hope that the Government will adopt the Simon bill and put it through. Apparently it would have no difficulty in doing so, as both opposition parties are agreed on its main principles, as they were on all the clauses of the Government bill except the first.

Another Government defeat, involving no direct political consequences, came in the House last night, an amendment on a minor financial question being carried against it 207 to 170.

The Manchester Guardian, which, despite its sturdy Liberalism, usually is ready to act as apologist for the present Ministry, declares that none of the parties came out very well, in the matter of the Government's defeat in the House of Commons last night on Neville Chamberlain's amendment to the rents bill opposing the second reading. The Government's management of the matter touched the ludicrous, the Guardian says. Liberal divisions revealed weaknesses in leadership at a moment when the whole House was crying out for a safe guide, and Conservatives voted solidly against the only measure in the field for the relief of a grievance which they deplore as loudly as anyone.

The Guardian asserts that a simple human issue as to whether penniless tenants should be evicted got entangled with the problem of finance, and it appeals to Liberals and Labor members of the House to pull themselves together and deal with it.

The Yorkshire Post ascribes the Government's defeat last night largely to Ministerial bungling, due to the intimidation by the Glasgow contingent of Labor members as well as a division among the Liberals, upon whom the Government depend for support.

MAKES NO CLAIM WRANGEL ISLAND

OTTAWA, April 8.— (Canadian Press.) — Interior estimates made slow headway in the House of Commons yesterday. Votes for such scientific work as surveys brought the criticism of the Opposition benches that there was an overlapping as between departments and that considerable money might be saved in this regard. Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, who had the estimates in charge, denied that there was overlapping.

The discussion led to the civil service. Mr. Stewart took the ground that revision in civil service salaries now in the hands of the Civil Service Commission was not necessarily an upward or downward revision. That was left for the Commission.

Right. Hon. Mr. Meighen asked why it was necessary and Mr. Stewart mentioned in explanation, discontinuance of the bonds, adding that there might be some cases where salaries will be revised downwards.

Mr. Stewart rather surprised the members when he announced that Canada would make no claim to Wrangel Island where the late Allan Crawford, of Toronto, and several others lost their lives. Mr. Stewart said that he had heard in a roundabout way that the British Admiralty might be interested in the island as a flying base, but apparently the British government was unwilling to set up any claim to it.

"I do not know what their intentions are," he said, "but so far as Canada is concerned, Canada does not intend to set up any claim to Wrangel Island."

"MARTHA MADE OVER" WAS REPEATED AGAIN

Hugh Rose, John Heard, Allan Trussler, Harvey Henry and Arthur Pitchford. The charming play, excellently staged and acted, was received with enthusiasm by an appreciative crowd. During intermissions, a musical programme was given, including vocal solos by the Misses Edna and Violet Buckham and Ted Jackson, and instrumental duetts by the Misses Kathleen and Muriel Benson and Jean and Marion McCannon.

At the conclusion of the performance, the cast was entertained by officers and teachers of the Sunday school classes, and short addresses were made by Rev. R. Pogue, Rev. M. C. Mackinnon and Messrs. M. N. Clark, H. J. McCannon and Hugh Rose.

A REPLY TO REV. J. J. BLACK

(By Rev. C. F. McIntosh)

Campbellford, April 7th, 1924.
The Editor of The Examiner,
Peterborough:

Dear Sir,—My attention has been directed to an article appearing in your issue of April 3rd, entitled "A Question of Interpretation," by my good friend and neighbor, Rev. J. J. Black, of Burnbrae. With much of that article I am in most hearty accord, but I feel it may have conveyed, in certain statements, more than the writer intended. It is difficult in reading it to avoid the impression that the minister referred to were lacking either in Biblical scholarship or in candor.

As minister of the church in which these union discussions were held, and being chiefly responsible for the presence of these speakers, I feel obligated to write a few words of explanation and defence. Otherwise those, who, like Mr. Black, were not present at the services when the text referred to was used, may retain not only mental confusion but misconception.

It is only fair to both speakers to state that the "diametrically opposite conclusions" at which they arrived were not even professedly connected with the text announced by both. They simply followed the procedure, not unique among ministers, of using the text as a point of departure. Particularly was this true of Dr. Denoon, who after reading the text (John 17:21) frankly disposed of it in a couple of sentences, saying that there was difference of opinion as to whether an inner and spiritual unity merely were intended, or, in addition to this, an outward and visible unity, but all would accept it as a proper background for a discussion of the church union question.

Further, Dr. Denoon might be forgiven for not knowing that the interpretation of the text, as referring only to an inner and spiritual unity, was "quite unassailable." He may be familiar with a modern and trustworthy commentary which states: "In this, its deepest sense, the unity of the church cannot be broken by outward divisions. But inward unity ought also to show itself in visible outward unity, "that the world may know that Thou hast sent Me." Hence every Christian is bound to pray and work for the reunion of Christendom. (Dummelow, in loco). Or again, he may attach some importance to the article 'unity' in Hastings' Dictionary of Christ and the Goseps, which reads: "Undoubtedly He (our Lord) desires that the vital and spiritual unity which He effects should have a concrete expression—such expression as is apprehensive, not only to the spiritual man discerning spiritual things, but to the world . . . The unity which our Lord teaches appears, then, to be a visible and organic unity, based upon a vital unity in the Holy Ghost." In popular phrase, which illuminates this point, "The world sees our outward division, not our inward unity." This plea has been reiterated by our foreign missionaries. One can at least excuse the preacher for not considering this matter of interpretation a closed question.

Probably both speakers were aware that "denominations" had not arisen in New Testament times. From that point of view, "organic union was not contemplated in the New Testament church." Nevertheless many are confident that the New Testament does shed some light upon our modern problem. May we not properly infer that Christ's prayer bears upon present-day denominationalism, if we have any reason to believe that it may hinder even spiritual unity? When Paul urges the Corinthian church not to allow differences to issue in schisms does not His appeal bear upon the healing of these schisms after they have been created? And is it not probable that the present guidance of the Holy Spirit would come in part through our appreciation of the situations addressed in the New Testament? In any case, these church union speakers have not a few followers in their method.

MACDONALD WILL CARRY ..ON UNTIL GOVT. BEATEN

(By Lloyd Allen, United Press Staff Correspondent).

LONDON, April 8.—Undismayed by last night's defeat, Premier Mac Donald to-day reiterated his determination to carry on until the government is beaten on a "Substantial issue, a matter of principle or a direct vote of confidence."

The Labor Cabinet met to attempt to devise a method to handle the evictions bill in another form. It was on this measure that the government met defeat by nine votes. The parliamentary orders prohibits re-introduction of a defeated bill in the same session.

The British Press generally upholds MacDonald in not resigning.

The Premier spent the morning about his foreign office duties. He showed the strain of last night's harrowing experience when he sat with folded arms and deathly white face in a malestrom of jibes from the tory opposition, refusing to resign.

SPECIAL SERVICES GEORGE STREET

Rev. Newton Jones continued his services yesterday in George Street Church in connection with the New Life campaign, and his messages found responsive notes in the hearts of many hearers.

In the afternoon he gave the first of his Bible readings for adults, the subject under consideration being the Gospel of John. With insight and skill he brought out the fundamental message of the book, dwelling on the evangel of Jesus as the Gospel of "Life." With his intimate knowledge of Scripture he went on to answer the question as to what sort of life this was, and when he had finished his hearers had set clearly before them a summary of the New Testament conception of this subject that could not fail to be helpful.

In the evening Mr. Jones took as his subject, "A Consecrated Personality," the text being Romans xii., 1. This proved to be a message especially for those who had already begun to follow the path of Christian living, and in it he dwelt on the various elements of a thoroughly genuine and sincere Christian life. The striking feature of his address was its practical character, every point brought out having a direct bearing on the everyday living of men and women. Such aspects as the realization of obligation to others, and the necessity of continual growth were made very clear, and driven home by the use of apt and telling illustration. The devotional side of the service was especially notable and deep impressions undoubtedly made.

To-night Mr. Jones' subject will be "Bondage to Liberty." Last night the choir led the singing, with Mrs. Renwick as soloist, and to-night will be present again, with Mrs. Ford Turner singing a solo. To-morrow afternoon Mr. Jones will speak at 3 o'clock on "Divine Leading."

WOMEN'S ART ASSOCIATION

The Women's Art Association held a musicale on Saturday afternoon in the studio of the Conservatory of Music, when a very interesting paper on "Great Painters and Their Pictures" was read by Cecil Cragg, son of Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Cragg, Rubidge Street.

The youthful speaker had a very appreciative audience. He did not attempt to follow the usual stereotyped rules in a paper of this sort, but instead, gave his own impressions of visits made to great Art galleries, in a naive and entertaining style that was much enjoyed. From visits to the National Gallery, London, the Wallace Collection, to St. Paul's Cathedral, where the wonderful painting, Holman Hunt's "Light of the World," was recently damaged during a demonstration of unemployed men, to the Imperial Gallery, Vienna, and to the State Gallery in Budapesth, Hungary, the young speaker, taking with him evidently, an unbiased mind and a taste trained by reading and observation, gleaned many interesting lessons. His remarks on various subjects were delivered in humorous fashion. Paintings of martyrs fascinated him, particularly on account of their wooden expressions; he regretted that Holbein had not painted Henry Eighth's wives instead of "the scoundrel himself"; he contrasts the healthy outlook of the English school of art very favorably with the attitude of the Latin painters; he is frank enough to criticize the famous "Blue Boy" of Gainsborough, for his ordinary expression; he has a good deal to say about the wooliness of Ruben's babies, and about the thrilling battle-scenes in the Hungarian galleries, and altogether, his impressions, delivered in frank and candid fashion, were most interesting and worth while.

During the afternoon, Miss Mathilde Masson sang very charmingly Chaminade's "Love Song" and "Vainka's Song" by Leo Delibes, followed by an encore "Philosophy," with accompaniment by Mrs. G. Porter.

At the close of the programme, tea was served, at a table prettily decorated with purple candles in silver candelabra, and a bowl of mauve sweet peas with pink roses. Madame Masson and Mrs. Joseph A. O'Brien poured tea, assisted by several young men: Messrs. Cecil and Bertram Cragg, F. Hodgson, Cunningham, and Fowler.

The president of the Association, Mrs. F. C. Neal, announced the next musicale, to be held on Saturday, April 19th, when Madame Bonnaure Walsh will give a paper on "Gounod," and the Symphony Orchestra, directed by Mr. Rupert Gliddon, will give excerpts from the work of the same composer. Tea hostesses will be Mrs. George Macdonald and Mrs. F. D. Kerr.

Mrs. Neal also asked the members to patronize the Little Theatre Club's production, "Melange," at the Capitol Theatre.

POINCARE OPPOSING THE TRIAL OF INTELLECTUALS

PARIS, April 8. — (Canadian Press).—Premier Poincare to-day protested strongly to the foreign Minister Tshitcherin of Soviet Russia concerning the trial of the Russian intellectuals now in progress at Kiev. He did this in a personally signed note couched in the strongest language. At the same time he called on the British and Italian Governments, who are in direct diplomatic contact with Moscow, to make the similar representations in an effort to save Savanth whose loss would be felt all over the world.

"In the name of science and in the name of the rights of man, the French University men demand that their Russian colleagues be saved from fate they have not merited," says note in part.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE

The patent-leather cat, rubber dog and wooden duck were arguing.

"Oh, dear!" said the napkin rabbit, "Doofunny Land would be a grand place if it were not for that dreadful rubber dog."

"And I think that it would be a fine place if it were not for that awful cat," squeaked the little tin mouse. "Every time I move I seem to run into him, and he has such terrible eyes and long spiky whiskers. I get paralyzed with fright, so I do."

"If you want to know what real trouble is," croaked a hoarse voice, "just look at me. I am still shivering. I just hopped past that old wooden waddle duck and he snapped at me with his old scissor bill. I thought when I came to Doofunny Land that I would so safe. But it seems that I was mistaken. Ducks are far, far fiercer than dogs and cats," said the puffy cotton frog.

Mister Fuzz Wuzz, the pipe-cleaner man, turned to the Twins.

"Do you hear that?" he said. "It's time I was putting an end to all this nonsense. If Doofunny can't be a peaceful place—what is the use of it, I'd like to know?"

"Yes, I should like to know, too," agreed Nancy. "The Fairy Queen told us that Doofunny Land was a funny place."

"And so it should be—the merriest place in all Fairyland. Come! I have an idea. What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander."

The Twins followed him, and by and by he came to the place where the teddy-bear was.

"Busy, Mister Bear?" asked Mister Fuzz Wuzz.

"Nup," said the bear. "Not doing a thing."

"Well, then," said the little man, "I've got a job for you!" And he went close to the bear's ear and whispered and whispered.

"Ha, ha, ha! Why of course I'll do it," laughed the bear in a minute. "Sure, Mister Fuzz Wuzz, I'll go right away."

Still the Twins didn't know what the secret was about, but no sooner had Teddy gone than the pipe-cleaner man beckoned to them, and all three followed on tippy toe.

Pretty soon they came to a place where the patent-leather cat and the rubber dog and the wooden waddle duck were having an argument.

Suddenly a horrible voice said, "Ah, ha! Now I've got you! I'm going to eat you all up—all three of you."

The Twins and Mister Fuzz Wuzz stopped and hid. The secret was a secret no longer. It was Teddy Bear who was talking so fiercely and pretending that he was a big growly, hungry bear.

"Oh, goodness!' quacked the duck, turning yellower than ever.

"Yip! Yip! barked the rubber dog, turning redder than ever, then whistling through the whistle in the top of his head as he always did when excited.

"Miew! Miew!" shrieked the black cat, turning, if possible, blacker than ever. "Oh, please don't eat us, Mister Bear!"

"Yes, I'm going to eat you all," growled the Teddy Bear, making his voice as big as he could. No one could see him and they all thought he was as big as an elephant.

"And now," said he, "I'll tell you why I am going to eat you."

Canadian Stock Exchange and Mines | New York Stock Exchange and Curb Prices

TO-DAY'S QUOTATIONS AND OPINION AND REVIEWS OF THE MARKETS.

The market has sunk back into another rut; it is a draggy affair, with only the railroad shares showing any signs of life, and in that direction only in moderate proportions. The next development of importance will be the Dawes report, involving large loans to Germany and immediate payment to France. Automobiles and oils are influenced by the unseasonable weather.

Opinions.

Hornblower and Weeks: We would take advantage to sell long stocks.

Noyes and Jackson, W.: When this rally is over we think the steel and motor stocks, especially Studebaker, will be left in a weak position.

Hall and Steiglit: Owing to fear of foreign competition, it would seem logical to confine speculative committments to the groups we have been suggesting the last few months, namely, rails, oil, copper, and shipping stocks.

THE MINING MARKET.

NEW YORK, April 8. — The mining market was quiet this morning, with no outstanding feature outside of Teck Hughes, which advanced to 1.25 on New York buying; there is no news of this mine outside of what is already publicly known.

Toronto and Montreal markets were absolutely devoid of any feature. Steel of Canada weakened off a point from yesterday and the bid on Maple Leaf was up to 67¼, 2½ points better than yesterday's close. Outside or this the markets were at a standstill.

The New York list opened unchanged but the rail stocks got under way, and advancel silghtly The industrial lists were inclined to be soft through the session with some specialties weakening off sharply.

Foreign news is supposed to move the market out of its dullness within the next few days, according to the interpretation placed upon same by Wall street. The Dome mines' annual meeting is scheduled for this afternoon, and will result no doubt with the return of the Bache control, although the Canadian crowd have a very strong representation.

EXCRUCIATING PAINS, CRAMPS

Entirely Remedied by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Eberts, Ont. — "I started with cramps and bearing-down pains at the age of eleven years, and I would get so nervous I could hardly stay in bed, and I had such pains that I would scream, and my mother would call the doctor to give me something to take. At eighteen I married, and I have four healthy children, but I still have pains in my right side. I am a farmer's wife with more work than I am able to do. I have taken three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I feel that it is helping me every day. My sister-in-law, who has been taking your medicine for some time and uses your Sanative Wash, told me about it and I recommend it now, as I have received great relief from it."—Mrs. NELSON YOTT, R. R. 1, Eberts, Ont.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine for ailments common to women. It has been used for such troubles for nearly fifty years, and thousands of women have found relief as did Mrs. Yott, by taking this splendid medicine.

If you are suffering from irregularity, painful times, nervousness, headache, backache or melancholia, you should at once begin to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is excellent to strengthen the system and help to perform its functions with ease and regularity. C

ICE MAY IMPERIL THE WHOLE WORLD

It is Feared That an Ice Cap Ten Thousand Feet Thick May Crush Greenland in the Near Future.

BUFFALO, April 8.—(Canadian Press).— Fear that an ice cap ten thousand feet thick will crush Greenland and imperil the world by throwing its axis out of balance, has caused Dimitrie Ioanovici to dispatch letter to President Coolidge and Canada, also the British and Danish Governments.

Ioanovici's letter proposes as a remedy the construction of a dam three and a half miles long and 180 feet deep across fury and Hecla straits between the Bay of Bothia and Fox channel, which will turn the cold Arctic current which now races through this northern inlet to Hudson Bay and back upon itself to be dissapated in the already cold northern inlet to Hudson Bay and back up on itself to be dissipated in the already cold northern seas, instead of allowing it to join the Labrador current at the mouth of the Hudson Channel, thereby increasing the Arctic resistance to warm waters of the Gulf Stream At present it penetrates slightly beyond Cape Farewell at Southern End of Greenland, Mr. Ionaovici says. With Labrador currents resistance cut down by pruning away of Arctic current, warm waters will be able to reach well toward the mid section of Greenland, he believed, and thus melt away the excess ice and preserve the earth's balance.

TORONTO, April 8.—(Canadian Press). DISSOLUTION OF AFRICAN PARLIAMENT, IMPORTANT

Press).—The impending dissolution of the South African Parliament is recognized here as holding possibilities of the greatest importance, not only for South Africa but for the British Empire.

Upon the question whether General Hertzog, who stands for Republicanism, or General Smuts, with the support of the British community and Progressive Dutch carries the day at elections, the events of far-reaching consequences depend.

The newspapers dwell on the uncertainty of the outlook with evident uneasiness, and suggest that the possibility of the Republic in South Africa may have awkward reactions in the distant parts of the Empire.

Test This New Way

To whiter, cleaner teeth

Here is a method needed in your home. Millions now employ it. To the homes of some 50 nations it has brought a new era in teeth cleaning.

This ten-day test is free. Learn what this method means to you and yours.

It combats film

Film on teeth—that viscous film you feel—is what clouds and ruins teeth. Under old methods of tooth brushing, much of it clings and stays.

Food stains, etc., discolor it, then it forms dingy coats. That is why most teeth look cloudy.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Such tooth troubles come to nearly all who do not fight the film.

Now dental science has found ways to daily combat film. One disintegrates the film at all stages of formation. One removes it without harmful scouring.

Dental authorities have proved these methods effective. A new-type tooth paste has been created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.

Leading dentists everywhere began to advise it. Now careful people the world over use this new-day method.

A child can see

Even a child can see that Pepsodent does what no old way accomplished.

It does more than fight film. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva, which is there to neutralize mouth acids. It multiplies the ptyalin in saliva, which is there to digest starch deposits on teeth.

These combined effects bring at once a new conception of what clean teeth mean.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear.

You will be amazed and delighted. Cut out coupon now.

Protect the Enamel

Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

OSHAWA SPORTS WILL HUM SOON

Baseball, Football and Lacrosse the Major Activities—Two Soccer Teams in T. and D. League.

OSHAWA, April 7. — Sporting activities in Oshawa this coming summer promise to create a new record for this city, and considerable difficulty is anticipated in finding accommodation for the various teams.

Oshawa has one team in the Central Ontario Baseball League, being grouped with Kingston, Belleville and Peterborough; two teams in the Durham and Ontario Counties Intermediate Baseball League, the General Motors and Red Sox, which are grouped with Whitby, Bowmanville, Orono and Port Hope; two teams in the Toronto and District Football Association, one team playing in the First Division and the other in the Third Division These teams open their respective schedules next Saturday with Lancashires of the First Division playing here and General Motors playing a Third Division fixture in Toronto with Mount Dennis.

Lacrosse has not been stirred up locally as yet, but as in previous years it is expected that two teams will represent Oshawa in the O. A. L. A. Intermediate and Junior series.

Apart from this the Church Baseball Association will operate in three series, senior, junior and midget. The senior, it is understood, will apply for an intermediate rating and affiliate with the O.B.A.A. The junior series is already in the O.B.A.A.

The usual ladies' and men's softball leagues are getting ready to organize and are also looking for accommodation at Alexandra Park. Sunnyside and Lakeview Parks will be put in shape for the Church League. Other baseball, lacrosse and soccer clubs must come to terms regarding the use of the chief athletic field situated at Alexandra Park.

The Central League schedule will not get under way until May 21, but exhibition games have been arranged. Oslers, of Toronto, will play here on April 26 and Strollers on May 3. The Durham and Ontario Counties Baseball League opens on May 24.

FIRST HALF COMPLETED

NEW YORK, April 5 — The first half of the international chess tournament at the Hotel Alamac has now been completed, and the leader is neither a young blood nor an apostle of the "new idea." It is the "old master" who is showing the way, Dr. Emmanuel Lasker of Berlin, the former world's champion, who won the title from Steinitz when his nearest competitors of to-day were in the nursery. He is the oldest player in the tournament, but there has not been the slightest sign that his 55 years have lessened his ability to withstand the strain of such a long hard struggle as the one in which he is now engaged. His spirit, force and skill compel admiration for this veteran, no matter who one's choice may be.

Not only has Dr. Lasker made a slightly better score than any one else but his playing has been the most consistent of any in the tournament, and his manner at the board the perfection that it always was. Nothing surprises or disturbs him. Whether his opponent makes the best or the worst move, the strangest or the most familiar, he gazes at it with the same impassive countenance and writes it on his score card with the same steady hand. Then he studies the position with a facial expression that suggests that he has seen that very arrangement of pieces a hundred times before. When he moves himself he does so with an authority that must be discouraging to any but a lionhearted adversary. Furthermore he is never bothered by the time limit The clock has not held such terrors for him as it has on several occasions for others, Alekhine, for example.

SPANISH GIRL A TENNIS STAR

Senorita de Alvarez Made Good Impression at Cannes Tournament — Olympic Contender.

PARIS, April 7.—Spain, through the 18 year old Senorita de Alvarez, will probably make a strong bid for honors in the womens' singles championships at the Olympic games lawn tennis tournament. So greatly has the Spanish girl improved her game this winter that it is believed in many quarters that the finals may not prove to be a controversy between Suzanne Lenglen and Helen Wills, the United States Champion as was generally expected.

Senorita de Alvarez, in the recent Cannes tournament, defeated Mrs. Covell, of England, 9-7, 2-6, and 6-4 after she had disposed of Miss Elizabeth Ryan, of California, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4 in the semi-finals.

Senorita de Alvarez developed a powerful service and showed that she had greatly improved her ground stroke which proved her weakness last year. Her overhead game was second to none, not excluding that of Mlle Lenglen.

Negro Boxer Signs For Bout With Bartley Madden—Meets Taylor at Hartford April 30.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Negotiations for the heavyweight match between Harry Wills and Bartley Madden at the Queensboro Stadium, May 13, were closed to-day when the negro signed a contract to box the veteran Irish heavyweight in a 15 round bout.

Promotion of the match in the out door arena was agreed upon by arrangement with Newark promoters who originally signed the bout as an indoor attraction last February.

An injury to Wills' left hand forced several postponements. Providing this is mended satisfactorily, the negro also will go through with a previously arranged bout with Jack Taylor, Omaha negro, at Hartford, Conn, on April 30.

Paul Berlenbech, hard-hitting New York middleweight, will meet Jack Lynch of Oklahoma, in a 10-round match, semi-final to the Wills Madden affray.

C.G.E. WON TWO FROM C.P.C.

One of the biggest surprise of the new City Ten Pin League was the two straight defeats handed the C.P.C. received at the hands of the C.G.E. The win came as a surprise to many who figured the Canadian Packing, who won the last City Ten League, had a good chance of copping the new league. The C.G.E. gang were in form and rolled some fine scores.

Both teams were rolling good but the C.G.E. had the edge. The C.P.C. are using a six-man system now, but it doesn't seem to be getting them good results.

Nicholls was the high man of the evening, knocking the wood for 576, and Dedman was next in the limelight with 558. Metheral and Jackson came next with 549 and 526 respectively. Dedman had the high single of the evening and also of the league when he knocked 'em for 236.

Following are the scores:

Juniors Included At City's Banquet

The Peterboro Junior O.H.A. team who were kept from the semi finals of the Ontario championship by only one game when they were nosed out by Kingston who put them down one goal, will be recognized by the city council along with their bigger brothers on the Intermediate team.

This decision was arrived at on motion of Aldermen Stocker and Jones last night, and the date of the banquet which will honor the two teams will be announced later when it has been decided by the sub-committee appointed to arrange it.

While the juniors did not go as far as the Intermediates the youngsters were considered worthy of encouragement and the city fathers will show their appreciation of the fine showing made in this past season and will give next season a boost by honoring the juniors in a few days.

SPRING TRAINING BEHIND THE SCENES

SOCCER NOTES

The Canadian Woollens will play the Thistle in an exhibition game at King Edward Park on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock sharp. Mr. Mitchell will handle the whistle.

If it can be arranged the Vets and Quakers will participate in a friendly game on Saturday afternoon.

The first league game will be played on Good Friday according to the schedule drawn up.

Up to date forty-three players have been registered with the O.F.A. and local association. The Quaker Oats players are not registered—so far as the association is informed.

It is rumoured that North Dummer has been officially entered in the junior league. They cannot play any senior team because the junior association is an outlaw association to organized soccer.

A new referee in the person of Mr. Alex K. Mitchell, passed the theory examination board, last night, very satisfactory. He will have a practical test in one of the games in the near future.

All G.W.V.A. players are requested to attend the training sessions on Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 7 o'clock prompt. A special meeting will be held on Thursday evening immediately after training in the G.W.V.A. Hall.

Only three official referees were appointed to handle the whistle during the season, viz.: J. L. Howarth, J. Russell and A. R. Mitchell. Mr. Jack Clarke last year's splendid referee, has not made his application which is greatly to be regretted. The president, Mr. Wm. Cooke, told the referees that the Association would uphold them in every decision.

The Thistle have signed the following: A. Anderson, A. Bishop, J. Rae, A. Jackson, R. Dawson, D. McBeth, H. Richmond, A. Williams, A. Burgess, P. Hutton and R. Melville—11 players.

Canadian Woolllens have signed the following: A. B. Read, T. Wyllie, Joe Gaskill, H. Jackson, A. R. Mitchell, W. H. Downs, R. H. Perry, A. P. Hillman, Gord Monkman, C. V. Elliott, R. Quinn, W. Potts, A. Roberts, J. Chambers, W. Griffin, A. Sayers.—16 players.

G.W.V.A. players registered as signed is as follows: C. Griffin, R. Wasson. F. Dyer, E. Parkin, S. E. Tennant, N. E. Crowe, Geo. Beavis, Wm. Rickard, J. L. Wade, John Collingowod, F. E. Wade, A. McFadden, H. Bestard, H. Burrows, E. Chambers, A. E. McGuigan— 16 players.

The NUT CRACKER

BY JOE WILLIAMS

LAKELAND, Fla., April 8.—Speaking of bustles, honest statesmen, beaded underwear and other curiosities, step right up to the platform, folks, and meet Tris Speaker of the Indians.

Mr. Speaker is a left-hander with brains. You come across one of these rare birds about as often as someone discovers the pole, only less frequently.

Mr. Speaker has been known to subject his mental machinery to the torture of thinking without having both of his ears on the top of his onion blown into the next county.

How Mr. Speaker happened to be both lefthanded and intelligent is a mystery more robust than the popularity of prune whip and trapeze earrings.

The popular theory is that Mr. Speaker fell off a tall building when he was a mere child, and thus overcame the handicap.

Mr. Speaker hits all kinds of pitching alike—far and often.

In his day Mr. Speaker was the greatest one-man outfield known to the peanut fiends of the country. He could cover more ground than a Michigan forest fire and, at the bat, was just as hard to put out.

Mr. Speaker has grown silvery as to hair and he talks feelingly of the days when he enlisted as a drummer boy in the Civil War with the Texas volunteers; but he still stands out among the center fielders of baseball like a red flannel shirt at a college prom.

Mr. Speaker is also one of the game's most profound students. "What do you thing Ruth's weakness is?" asked a young Indian pitcher. "Wild pitches," answered the Texan.

Mr. Speaker is quite a remarkable gent. He can ride a wild horse, rope a steer, shoot a gun and row an untamed canoe. His other claim to distinction is that he never tried to whistle "Barney Google."

Should a golfer drink? asks Joe Kirkwood in a magazine article.... And, of course, the answer is, "Yes, if he can get it."

Young Stribling is said to be nothing more than a school boy and yet it appears that he taught Mr. McTigue plenty.

Although beaten in 12 rounds out of 12, McTigue still has his title, but will the gentleman who picked up two loose ears, five slightly soiled teeth and a somewhat rumpled eyebrow kindly return them to the champion at the box office?

The Chicago Cubs have organized an orchestra, but the music of the zooming base hit is still sweetest to the fans' ears.

Speaking of baseball puzzles, can anyone tell us why players like Sam Harris and Claude Jonnard carry bats to the plate?

The news that a referee was bribed to take Harry Greb's title away is interesting because it shows there it at least one other guy in the world willing to pose as middleweight

Encourage Your Employees To Cycle To Work

IT will pay you to encourage your employees to ride bicycles.

A smooth, brisk ride to work in the fresh air is much more healthful than hanging on to a strap in a packed street car.

The cyclist makes better time. He has no long waits on street corners. He is not held up by vexatious delays. His bicycle brings him on time—smilingly fit for work. The car fare he saves will pay for his bicycle.

There are more people riding bicycles today than for many years. If there are not a large number of bicycle riders among your employees it is probably due to lack of proper and convenient parking accommodation.

Many, many more employees would cycle to work, but for one drawback—the lack of suitable, convenient shelters in which to park their bicycles.

It is very discouraging to have to leave wheels in odd corners, or piled in a heap somewhere in the yard, where they get scratched up, covered with dust and soaked with rain.

You have a place to park your car. Why not provide your employees with a handy parking station for their bicycles and encourage them to cycle to work?

It takes comparatively little space or expense. A neat bicycle shed and racks to accommodate from 50 to 200 bicycles can be erected in a small space for very little money, or wall hangers can be installed in an unused portion of a building for a trifling outlay.

The nearest C.C.M. dealer or any carpenter will be pleased to give you a rough estimate of the cost of a bicycle shelter—or we will be glad to have you write us. We can furnish specifications of a standard size shelter that can easily be altered or enlarged to any size desired.

The Choice of 8 Out of 10

It is estimated that eight out of every ten cyclists in Canada ride C.C.M. Bicycles. They know that C. C. M.s have real quality—C.C.M. Triplex Hanger, Frames of English Seamless Tubing, Bearings of flint-hard Steel, Gibson Pedals, Hercules Brake and other high-class equipment.

ELINOR GLYN DEALS WITH REAL STUDIO LIFE AT HOLLYWOOD: ROYAL NOW PLAYING

Something absolutely new in screen plot and characterization is offered in Elinor Glyn's "The World's a Stage," which opened a three-day engagement at the Royal last night. Trust the celebrated authoress of "Three Weeks" and "Man and Maid" to discover real novelty. The screen has long needed a story which got away from the beaten path. "The World's a Stage" will surprise you with its out-of-the-ordinary plot. It is a vital, throbbing tale soaring to unexpected climaxes startling in its denouement, and will be talked about as the film sensation of the year.

Mrs. Glyn has painted accurately and vividly the inside life of a screen actress in Hollywood. All of the incidents of the story are founded upon real life. Mrs. Glyn has been a resident of Hollywood for some time, and her impressions of life are honestly recorded here.

The plot treats of the adventure of a stage star, heading a cheap repertoire troupe whose performance of Juliet is so fine that it attracts the attention of a picture producer and a wealthy mining man in the audience. They conclude that the screen needs new personalities, and the latter man, being somewhat interested in the girl, uses his influence with the director in getting her a contract. Her star is in the ascendant, but as happiness is about to be her reward, along comes the bitter pangs of disillusionment as she discovers that her hasty marriage is not a success. The picture is interpreted by Dorothy Phillips as its star and she gives a sterling performance. Others include Kenneth Harlan and Bruce McRae. Colin Campbell directed.

EXCELLENT FEATURE AND SHORTER SUBJECTS AT ROYAL

In addition to the Elinor Glyn Hollywood story, "The World's a Stage," which is excellent in every respect, and is reviewed elsewhere in this issue, the Royal also offers a long and interesting series of short featurettes. Two comedies, both filled with laughs—Buddy Messenger in "The Caddy," and an educational comedy, "Broke." A Lyman Howe "Hodge Podge" might also be called another comedy feature, as it cleverly blends educational subjects with novelty cartoons, etc. A half-hour Western, "The Last Outlaw," contains many thrilling moments. If the Royal continues to get feature productions like Elinor Glyn's "The World's a Stage," their slogan, "The Royal has the Pictures," will be fully lived up to.

REGENT Always a Good Show

TO-DAY

WILLIAM FOX presents
SHIRLEY MASON
IN Love Letters

Also Edna Murphy in "Her Dangerous Path." Will Rogers Comedy and Fox Comedy. Altogether making an unusually fine program.
No advance in Prices.

AT THE REGENT

"LOVE LETTERS" EXCELLENT PLOT

Shirley Mason has another good performance to her credit in the Fox production, "Love Letters," which began a three-day run at the Regent Theatre last night. David Solomon, who directed "Kentucky Days," and also made "South Sea Love," the latter starring Shirley Mason, has achieved another masterly bit of workmanship in his latest effort.

The others in the cast meet all requirements. Gordon Edwards, son of the director, contributes a well acted performance. Miss Alma Francis, lately engaged at the Fox studios, answers the demands made by her part. William Irving, an actor of long experience, is competent in the role he has been given.

The photography comes in for deserved praise, many scenes being of charming composition. But, after all, it is the story upon which a photoplay depends for value as amusement. And in this respect "Love Letters" is not found wanting. Of course, with such a title, it is hardly necessary to state that the love element is prominent. But, in addition, there is a mystery, well developed, with a surprising climax. By all means, see the picture at the Regent. You'll like it.

AT THE GRAND

Arlie Marks and her players opened a three-day engagement in a varying programme, changing nightly, at the Grand Opera House last evening, with 'My Irish Cinderella,' a comedy drama which had plenty of action.

The play deals with the adventures of Peggy McNeil, an orphanage child, a part taken in good style by Miss Arlie Marks. Adelaide Secord is Mrs. McGee, of Montreal, cruel stepmother of Peggy; Paul Brady is Lord Lonsdale, a British peer with much money, who discovers that Peggy is his grandchild. Lindsay E. Perrin is an officer in an aviation corps; Walter DeLuna is Bill Mansfield, an American detective; W. L. Phillips is Lord Lonsdale's nephew, who forms a plot with her stepmother, and Louise Adell is a society woman. Clarence Kane and Peggy Logan are the butler and maid.

All the actors took their parts well, Miss Marks particularly getting much applause at each appearance.

SPECIAL RETURN ENGAGEMENT

Travelling around various parts of the world with such celebrities as Jiggs Mahoney, Maggie, his termagant wife, Dinty Moore, the irrepressible, and the charming Kitty Mahoney is a treat that very few people should care to miss. At anyrate, the opportunity will be provided at the Grand Opera next Saturday—matinee and night— where the latest musical comedy success, "Bringing Up Father On Broadway," will be conspicuously on view. Probably no cartoons have reached the popularity and fame as the George McManus comics, and in the latest adventures of the beloved characters, whose doings and activities seem to be part of our national life, many novel twists and surprises will be in evidence. The new play, which is by John P. Mulgrew, a well-kuown writer of merry pieces, is in two acts and five scenes, running the gamut of action from a roof garden on Broadway to the burning mountains of sunny Italy. Once more Maggie aspires for social climbing. How she fares, her rebuffs, and the attendant complications that ensue, forms one of the merriest plots of a merry entertainment.

DENISHAWN DANCERS MAKE DRAPPERIES DANCE AND TALK

A unique evolution in the modern classic dance, which Ruth St. Denis has originated, is the use of draperies in such a way that the flowing and billowing chiffons and silks are just as expressive of the mood and meaning of the dance as the steps and bodily movements employed.

In watching the Denishawn dancers, who, with Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn at their head, will appear at the Grand on April 14th, perform a charming divertis ment called "The Wind," a huge square of rose-colored India silk, manipulated by the dancers, gives the most fascinating illusion of the vagaries of the air, from gentle zephyrs to wild hurricanes.

When asked how she managed to make the piece of rose-colored silk take on this breathing, almost living quality, Miss St. Denis answered: "I have always been interested in fabrics—in their bewitching magic quality, in their expressiveness, and from the very first presentations of my dances, I have experimented with them for effects. It is just a matter of studying your material. By finding how different weights and qualities of silk will react to the currents of air produced by the movements of the arms and the legs and the body of the performer, one can, by persistent experiment, achieve as sensitive and fine expression of beautiful feeling and thought by handling a piece of fabric as the harpist can get by playing his instrument."

"I have always wondered," Miss St. Denis continued, "why the modern Occidental woman has so absolutely overlooked the potentialities of fabrics as the chief decorative element in dress. Our French and American modistes go in for line; the material employed is only of secondary importance. Would it not be better if we were to follow the custom of the Hindoo women, whose sari, made of some priceless fabric, last for ten years at least. Made of a straight piece of material, the fashions never vary, but the color and quality of the fabric do."

AT THE CAPITOL

ROSSOW MIDGETS BIG ACT COMES TO CAPITOL

Rossow's midgets, a big novelty act featuring clever little people no taller than a yard-stick, in remarkable feats of skill, comes to the Capitol Theatre the last three days of this week. This act comes to Peterboro direct from a tour of the Western Vaudeville Managers Association houses, one of the big-time circuit lying between Chicago and the coast.

The bill at the Capitol for the first three days of this week is one of the most varied and meritorious of the season, and a capacity audience last night enjoyed every moment of the programme. In addition to the presentation by the Peterboro Little Theatre Club of Kathleen L. McCarthy's clever one-act comedy, reference to which is made in another column, there is an entertaining vaudeville act and a programme of pictures much above the average.

The feature picture is "Pied Piper Malone," and when you know that Tom Meighan is starred and that the supporting cast includes such sterling favorites as Lois Wilson, George Fawcett and Emma Dunn, and that the story was written by Booth Tarkington, you don't need to be told that it is a film triumph. The story is logical and impressive, true to life, as is everything that Tarkington writes, and the interest is sustained until the final fade out. The story of the young sailor, who is "Uncle Jack" to every youngster in his home town, and who is unjustly blamed for the loss of his ship, and condemned by almost everybody but the children, his mother and the girl he loves, is full of dramatic moments, varied by many a wholesome bit of comedy. It is a role that fits Tom Meighan like the proverbial glove, and he wins fresh laurels by his splendid presentation of this virile role. The supporting cast is excellent. George Fawcett's conception of the part of the old captain is a masterpiece. Emma Dunn has a "mother" role which she plays with her usual effectiveness, and Lois Wilson is a charming heroine. The many youngsters in the company do their work most convincingly, and "Pied Piper Malone" threatens to surpass in popularity Mr. Meighan's recent hit, "The Bachelor Daddy." It lacks nothing that is necessary to the success of a striking picture.

Another big hit on the programme is Will Rogers' parody on "The Covered Wagon." His two-reel comedy is called "Two Wagons, Both Covered," and it is a scream throughout. To those who have seen "The Covered Wagon," the burlesque of the principal incidents in that great picture will provide food for laughter every minute, as Rogers parodies the important characters, while even if you missed the original production you'll get plenty of chuckles out of the Rogers version.

There is another comedy picture as well as a Pathe News film, which includes some action pictures of the Canadiens, Canada's professional hockey champions.

The vaudeville act by the O'Brien Sisters and Co. is clever and lively. The two girls sing nicely, and their dancing, which runs the whole list from a clog to the hula-hula, is smartly done. The male member of the company is clever at the piano, and scores with a solo on the steel guitar.

The whole bill is full of good things.

PAUL BRADY, Leading Man with Arlie Marks, at the Grand Opera House to-night.

BOXING BILL ON TUESDAY NIGHT

Gene Clay, Clever Colored Boxer, Coming for Bout With Jordan.

Tuesday night, April 15th, is the date of the next boxing card at the G.W.V.A. hall, when the main bouts will be featured by a visit from George Smith, Russell Cates and Gene Clay of Toronto, all top notchers in the squared ring. Clay, the 112 lb. colored boy, who will meet Joe Jordan, is a great favorite at Queen City tournaments. Smith, Cates and Clay will compete in the Ontario championship next Thursday and Friday, so the local fans will have an opportunity of looking them over.

Reserved seats at the ringside will be on sale at the Empress Hotel and at LeBarr's new agency.

Art Johnston, Ray Millard and Joe Jordan, accompanied by Wilfrid Jones, will go to Toronto for the Provincial championship.

BASEBALL MEETING THURSDAY EVENING

The City Baseball League which is now under way will hold a meeting on Thursday night at 8 o'clock in the Holy Name Rooms on Simcoe Street. Officers have been elected, and the main problem to look after now is to get a couple of men who are interested in this sport to boost the League by taking in hand a group of boys and managing them for the season. Plenty of players are available but not enough men to handle the boys can be obtained. The grounds question will also be brought up, and representatives will be elected to get in touch with the Fair Board in an effort to obtain the Exhibition Park to play some of the games on this summer. This field will be in good shape, and it would not take long to fix it up if the work could be started on it right away.

EVERYTHING SET FOR BOXING BILL

From 60 to 65 Aspirants For Provincial Honours Will Take Part in the Tournament.

TORONTO, April 8.—(Canadian Press).—Entry lists for Ontario amateur boxing championships, which are to be decided in a 2-day tournament on April 10, 11, at the Arena here, have been well filled and it is expected that between 60 and 65 aspirants for provincial titles and possibility of entering the Olympic trials will be seen in action Ontario championships this year have an added interest owing to the Canadian championships being held in Montreal two weeks hence, when the winners of various classes will go forth to do battle for further honors. Upon the showing of boxers in provincial or Dominion championships depends their chances of being accepted as entrants for the Olympic trials to be held in Toronto on June 14, 15 and 16. Only those who have made a creditable showing in the championships will appear in the Olympic trials.

The draw will be made immediately after weighing in on the first night Present title holders are:—

112 lbs Johnny McGregor, Hamilton A. B. Club.

118 lbs Jackie Johnson, Toronto Riversides.

126 lbs George Barber, Toronto Classics.

135 lbs. Tommy Mitchell, (now professional).

147 lbs. Stan Cummins, St. Helen's C. & A.A.

160 lbs Harry Henning, Toronto Classics.

175 lbs and heavyweight, Charles McDoulton, Toronto Apollo.

LAKEFIELD AND DISTRICT SPORT

LAKEFIELD, April 8.—A meeting will be held here to reorganize the local baseball club for the season. Baseball should flourish in the village as there is a fairly good supply of interested young men who play baseball and who could be co-ordinated into a first-class team of which the village would be very proud. It means practice, certainly, but it would also mean some really good games here with visiting teams from other villages and towns.

An invitation has been reeved from the Campbellford baseball team to the local team to play there on May 23rd when a big day of sports will be held. This would be a good way for Lakefield to start their season.

An effort was made two years ago to reorganize the football team and several games were played, but the lack of local interest rather damped the enthusiasm of the players and the organization lapsed. Since that time there has been no effort made to reorganize or rouse spirit in the sport.

There is a movement on foot this spring to organize a lawn bowling club in the village. This has been mooted for some time but it is expected that the organization will get under way this spring.

ANOTHER WIN FOR WILLIE BUFF

ROCHESTER, N.Y., April 8.—Willie Buff, amateur lightweight champion boxer, defeated Spider Lewis here to-night in three rounds. It was Buff's 151st amateur bout and his 149th victory.

INSTITUTE FOR BLIND.

In connection with the tag day in aid of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, which takes place on Saturday next, under the auspices of the combined I.O.D.E. chapters of the city, Mr. J. R. Brownlee will give a demonstration of work in the window of Grafton & Company's George street establishment, on Saturday, with hours from 9 to 12.30; from 1.30 to 5.30, and from 6 to 9 p.m.

Mr. Brownlee is well known to residents of the city. He is an outstanding example of the work that is being done by the Institute to bring relief and cheer into the lives of sightless sufferers. Mr. Brownlee's fingers are skilled in arts of reed work, and he turns out some very artistic examples of pretty work, that could hardly be equalled by a 'sighted' worker.

"PEOPLE WE MEET."

Mrs. (Rev.) J. R. Aikenhead, the visiting lady evangelist, addressed a small but appreciative audience at Trinity Sunday school hall last evening under the auspices of the Sunday school of the church, on the subject: "People We Meet."

Mrs. Aikenhead's address, which proved both instructive and interesting, was delivered in pleasing fashion. It dealt with the underlying idea that success in life is often influenced by the small affairs of life. Being mainly a series of anecdotes, it described the reactions of ordinary people to small things in their daily existence, and the effect on their characters. Mr. J. M. Greene occupied the chair. A musical programme included a vocal solo by Mrs Ross Williamson, and an instrumental number by Miss McFadden.

CHURCH UNION NOW UP AGAIN

Advocates of Union Won First Round in Dominion House.

OTTAWA, April 8 (Canadian Press). — Advocates of church union to-day won the first round.

This morning after hearing counsel on both sides, the Standing Orders Committee of the House of Commons decided to report the petition for the Church Union Bill to the House.

The report was not unanimous.

It was passed "on division," but no vote was recorded.

The decision by the Standing Orders Committee means the rejection of the objection taen by the anti-unionists that notice given of the Bill was not sufficient.

This action carries with it automatically the first reading of the Church Union Bill, which will now be placed on the order paper for the second reading.

There was an array of counsel present on both sides of the question.

For the advocates appeared Aime Geoffrion, K.C., Montreal, G. W. Manson, K.C., Toronto, and Alex. Smith, Ottawa.

For the opponents were: Eugene Lafleur, K.C., and G. A. Campbell, Montreal, F. H. Chrisler, K.C., A. T. Thompson, K.C., George MacDonnell, K.C., Norman Gulpric, and H. M. Daly, all of Ottawa.

The Committee plunged almost immediately into the middle of the question. Chairman Parent stated the purposes of the meeting, and then on the motion of William Duff, Liberal, Lunenberg, counsel were called on to present the case.

First came Mr. Chrysler, who argued that notice of the church union petiton was not sufficient.

The Bill to be passed, he claimed, was one that affected property rights, and therefore notice was required in every locality, when there was property concerned.

YOUR HEALTH

DR. CLIFFORD ROBINSON

PHYSICAL FITNESS.

Either the human body is not strong enough to withstand the wear and tear of modern industrial life, or else it is abused to such an extent, in other ways, that we are failing in physical fitness.

The operation of great industries has resulted in great wealth, but has clearly upset the normal balance as regards mental and physical work, recreation and rest. There is no doubt that this has a well defined action on health and bodily condition.

The strain and stress of non-emotional, deadening sameness, or continual work at one thing is followed by occupational diseases of overstrain, bad posture, deficient eyesight, discontent and a letdown in mental alertness, causing different spinal, nervous and digestive disorders.

No one thing so interferes with the digestive work of the body and brings about so many conditions of physical inefficiency as discontent and low mentality.

The hurry, or speed-up habit, is also a factor in causing excessive use of protein foods. We not only hurry in our working hours, but through force of habit we hurry at our meals. The appetite is not satisfied with the proper normal amount, through the hasty bolting of food.

As a result of this haste comes a deadening of activity and soon the eliminative organs (the liver and kidneys) are forced to do extra work and lack of physical fitness looms ahead.

The remedy for this condition is not easy to apply. Unscientific attempts to correct nature's normal life, after over-indulgence, by waking ourselves up with caffein, moving our bowels with a cathartic, and putting ourselves to sleep with an opiate, are dangerous enemies of physical fitness.

Don't lose your physical fitness through carelessness or destructive habits. Avoid dope and rapid eating. Take your recreation gradually. Strive at all times to provide for proper co-ordination with work, proper digestion and exercise that will provide symmetrical development and proper health.

Let's see now! Oh, yes! Over in Paris they have published some statistics showing that place has the lowest birth rate of any large city in the world.

Paris shouldn't act so foolish. Children are nice people to have around even if they do wake up at night and want a drink of water.

Fine clothes are all right, but no matter how much a dress costs it won't stand with its nose pressed against the window waiting for you to come home from work.

And autos are handy vehicles, but an auto won't grow up and take care of you when you are too old or too lazy to work.—Exchange.

AN INTERMEDIATE LOOP WAS FORMED

Trenton Was Not Represented But Cobourg Will Enter Two Teams --H. T. McFadden Elected President of the League.

A successful meeting was held in the Queens' Hotel, Port Hope, yesterday, to form an Intermediate League known as the Midland League. Several speakers from the different towns intending to enter teams were all strongly in favor of the move and expect it to be a big success. Four teams were represented at yesterday's meeting, namely the C.G.E. and the Raybestos, of Peterborough, and two teams from Cobourg. Trenton was unable to have a representative, but it is expected that if the league is formed they will enter a team as there is plenty of baseball material in that town for a team or two. Port Hope has not stated whether they will enter or not, but they have asked for consideration if Trenton comes in so they will have a chance of making the sixth team.

Mr. H. T. McFadden, president of the Canadian General club, was elected president and he will no doubt show that he is worthy of the position before the season is over.

A resolution was passed, stating that all teams desiring to enter this league are to make their application to the secretary not later than April 15th, accompanied with a fee of $15.00.

A constitution will be drawn up immediately and a protest committee formed in the near future.

The following officers were elected:

Hon. President—Mr. R. A. Abbott, Peterborough.

Hon. Vice-President— Mr. A. C. Kimmel, Cobourg.

President—Mr. H. T. McFadden, Peterborough.

1st Vice-Pres.—Mr. B. H. Piper, Cobourg.

2nd Vice-Pres.—Mr. W. Kay, Peterborough.

Sec't'y-Treas.—Mr. W. G. Nicholls, Peterborough.

Executive—Mr. C. R. Gummow, Cobourg, Mr. J. Toms, Cobourg, and one representative from each club.

The League will go into action on May the 24th, with a double-header at Cobourg, and the Cobourg people are going to have a big day.

VOL. LIV., No. 85 PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9, 1924 PRICE THREE CENTS

AMENDMENT TO RURAL GAS ACT CARRIED BY VOTES OF GOVERNMENT

Two Conservatives Voted With Liberals and U.F.O. On Division Uphold Hon. Chas. McCrea's Bill By 59 to 24—Rates to All Municipalities Will Be Fixed By Gas Board—Opponents Feared the Farmers Would Have to Pay More For Gas.

DEBATE TOOK UP AFTERNOON.

TORONTO, April 9.—(Canadian Press).—Opponents of the bill amending the Rural Gas Act, introduced by Hon. Chas. McCrea, forced a division in the Legislature Tuesday afternoon. The bill was carried on second reading and the Government upheld by a vote of 59 to 24. T. J. Mahoney (Con., South Wentworth) and W. N. Berry (Con., Haldimand) voted against the Government with the Liberals and U.F.O., who voted solidly against the Government.

Hon. Chas. McCrea in moving second reading of the bill, reviewed briefly the history of natural gas legislation in Ontario. The first action towards control of gas was in 1918 when a bill gave over the matter of contracts, franchises and rates, etc., to the Ontario Railway Board.

Referee Appointed.

In 1919 there was an agitation against this infringement of contract rights and a gas commissioner was appointed to settle minor disputes, and carry on a campaign for the conservation of the gas In 1921 the referee was given power to fix the rates that should be paid for the gas and to set aside contracts or franchises whenever he thought that such action was in the interest of conservation. In 1922 the referee was substituted for a gas board but exempted from its jurisdiction were contracts between the owners of land on which producing gas wells were situated and the company operating the wells, and between the companies which enabled the companies to pipe gas and the operating companies. The effect of this was to restore to the municipalities in which gas was produced the original prices at which the gas companies promised to supply gas to the people in those municipalities. The present bill proposes to put all municipalities under the gas board for price-fixing purposes. The members who opposed it feared that this would raise the rate in producing or rural municipalities.

Benefit Companies.

R. N. Berry (Con., Haldimand) opposed the bill, declaring that it would benefit the companies at the expense of the farmer who would have to pay more for his gas.

Hon Manning Doherty opposed it also stating that the original franchise to the townships had simply enabled the gas companies to get their gas to the cities and towns by the permission to build their pipe lines on the highways. "These municipalities were given certain prices for gas then and we should not today tamper with those agreements," said Mr. Doherty. He said that it was as impossible to equalize prices on gas as it was on hydro. The present conditions were satisfactory and why change them, he asked.

E. P. Tellier (Nor Essex) said that there would be no conservation of gas by increasing the price, because the use was necessary, and the use would continue no matter what the price. He could not see why the poor consumer should be penalized for the benefit of the company. "This bill, if it passes," he said, "simply means increased revenue for the company."

Should Maintain Price

R. L. Brackin said that hundreds of farmers had put in the gas because they got it originally at a good price and that that the price would be maintained. If the price were raised then it was breaking the contract. The bill then put them at the mercy of the gas board as far as the rates were concerned. It would add $100,000 to the revenue of the companies but increase the rate of the consumer.

F. W. Wilson (Con., Windsor) favored the bill, saying that it brought the question back as it was in 1921, when the referee had the right to settle the rates T. J. Mahoney (Con., Wentworth) opposed the bill.

Inspect Homes.

Hon. W. F. Nickle introduced a bill giving the Provincial Secretary's Department the right to inspect homes before immigrant children were placed in them, and also the right to inspect them after the children were placed.

Hon. W. E. Raney asked the government if it had decided any policy in relation to J P. Savage, of Oakville, for legislation to allow him to carry on the practice of medicine although he had not taken his matriculation qualification standing. The Premier said that the matter had not been decided .

MUSSOLINI AND FASCISTI GIVEN CLEAR MANDATE

Italian Premier Assured of 374 Seats Out of 535 In Next Parliament — No Longer Doubt of the Nation's Support of the Fascisti, Says Tribune of "Black Shirts" Interpreting Result.

OUTLINES PLANS.

ROME, April 9. — Election returns from the various constituencies continued to reach Rome Tuesday. Last night the results at hand bore out the previous indications that the new Chamber of Deputies would be strongly in the control of the Fascisti.

From the still incomplete returns last night's figures showed that of the available 535 seats the Fascisti has gained 260, and that with the 114 Liberals, Catholics and Democrats of the supporting list the Government was assured of a majority of 374.

As constituted the new Chamber will afford the Government the desired scope for carrying out its vast programme of national reconstruction without fear of obstructionist manoeuvres which impeded it in the former chamber. The opposition has been so badly split up that its activities will be practically negligible.

Former Premier Bonomi was defeated in Lombardy, having failed to obtain the necessary number of votes under the present computation system.

Premier Mussolini when asked in Milan yesterday his impressions regarding the elections said:

"The electors have given me an unequivocal reply. There is no longer any possibility of doubting that the nation upholds the Fascisti.

INCOMPLETE RETURNS.

Results received from all parts of Italy up to last evening show the balloting to have been as follows:

Fascisti	4,264,454
Catholics	645,090
Unitarians	448,056

"Slim" Williams To Prison For Life

OTTAWA, April 9 (Canadian Press). .... Henry J. (Slim) Williams, who was sentenced to be hanged for the murder of Russell Campbell, a resident of the town of Melbourne, near London, Ont., will not pay the death penalty.

The Governor-in-Council has communted his sentence to life imprisonment.

Williams would have been executed on Thursday next if there had been no interference with the sentence.

Williams was associated with Sidney E. Murrell, who will be executed to-morrow, in an attempt to rob the Home Bank at Melbourne, Ont., during which Russell Campbell was killed.

SPONSOR WILL ASK TO WITHDRAW BILL

Church Union Bill May Be Withdrawn Awaiting Passage of Principle at Ottawa.

TORONTO, April 9. Canadian Press.—Wen the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature meets this morning, C. R. McKeown, M.L.A., will move that the church union bill be withdrawn.

Mr. McKeown, who introduced the motion, always has favored withdrawing the bill since the amendment of last week was adopted by the committee, but deferred committing himself to any definite step until the Church Union Committee had gone into the problem.

Yesterday Mr. McKeown received a letter from the Church Union committee asking that the bill be withdrawn until the matter of Church Union is passed on in principle at Ottawa.

The committee may not see fit to withdraw the bill but as a rule bills are withdrawn without opposition, when their sponsor asks for that privilege.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS LOOK INTO PROFIT

TORONTO, April 9. — Canadian Press. — "If any new avenue of information looms up through which we can secure any further information on the disposition of that $42,000, we will certainly go into it," stated Provincial Treasurer Price last night in reference to the Globe's editorial of yesterday which called attention to the fact that there was apparently a "toll-gate keeper" in the days when Hon. T. W. McGarry was Provincial Treasurer, and referred to the $42,000 of profits on the McGarry loan.

After reminding the Globe that he had exhausted before the Public Accounts Committee the information of Auditor G. T. Clarkson, former General Manager A. E. Calvert of the Home Bank, and former General Supervisor J C. Whittaker, the Provincial Treasurer proceeded:

"That $42,000 was part of the profit the Home Bank made on the bond issue for 1919, which was started by Mr. McGarry and completed on December 1st, two weeks after the Drury government came in. It was part of the bank's profit, and it was never intended to come back to the province. It went into Mr. Mason's private account, called special account, and Mason then of course chequed out of that private account. Cheques are there which showed he issued out of that, and that evidence is all before the committee.

"But when it comes to $15,000, according to the cheque stub, the stub indicates that the money was to come back to the province as rebate, because apparently either Mr. Smith or somebody else said that there was too much profit."

PARTY HEELERS INEFFICIENT IN FOREST PATROL

Good Experienced Ranger Worth Six of Them One of the Affirmations at Sudbury Forestry Conference — Staffs Need Reinforcements If Timber Losses Are to Be Curtailed.

MANY FIRES IN 1923.

SUDBURY, April 9 (Canadian Press). — That upwards of 300 bush fires occurred in the Sudbury forest district of last year, destroying over 280,000 acres of forested land, that over 95 per cent. of this loss was attributable to human carelessness in some form, and that unless forestry staffs are increased there can be little hope of materially cutting down this loss, were high lights of the Forestry Conference held in the Forestry Branch Offices here yesterday.

Political Berths.

When plans were laid for the 1924 season, other striking facts adduced at the conference were as follows: One good experienced man is worth six political appointees in fire ranging, according to a chief ranger; more than 60 per cent. of the forest fires were nipped last summer before any damage was done, thus proving the worth of an efficient fire ranging staff; three of the largest of the 300 forest fires last summer accounted for 90,000 of the 280,000 acres fireswept; with a capable and sufficient number of efficient fire rangers, properly supervised, the fire loss could be cut to a minimum.

Railways Share Blame.

Although the railways were blamed for a great many fires during the 1923 season, railway officials in this district are alive to their responsibility and the fire losses from this source, it is a known fact, have been materially cut. Without exception every fire ranger in the district declared that if his force was increased the fire loss would undoubtedly be reduced.

With a $5.00 travel license on American tourists in force, Temagami Forest Reserve alone would net the Government $17,000 a year in revenue.

An amendment to the present Fire Prevention Act makes it compulsory for a tourist or prospector to give a fire ranger all information as to his proposed route of travel.

Another important amendment makes it compulsory for all citizens to fight bush fires when called on by the rangers.

Sceptical of Airplanes.

Forestry officials are still sceptical of the value of radio and airplanes. The radio, can never replace the telephone in forestry work, they claim, and airplane scouting is necessarily of too cursory a nature. The consequence of radio and airplane service has been to reduce their fire ranging staffs, with which policy they do not agree.

RELIEF FOR GERMANY OF WAR DEBT CLAIMS FOR TWO YEAR TERM

Outstanding Recommendations in Reports of Reparations Committee —Stabilize German Currency.

FRENCH PROTECTED

NEW YORK, April 9. — (Canadian Press.) — Briefly summarized outstanding recommendations in reports of reparations experts committees provide for:

Relief for Germany for two years from reparation payments, these to be taken care of by foreign loan and tax on industries at present non-productive.

Return to Germany of economic control of the Ruhr and Rhineland, stabilization of German currency by means of loan of 800,000,000 gold marks and creation of gold bank of emission.

Return of German capital that has left the country with the collapse of the mark.

Priority of reparations payments for France in so far as cost of her armies of occupation are concerned.

Assurance for France of slowly but steadily increasing payments by Germany under Allied supervision.

Protection for France against an adverse exchange or trade balance that might result from incautious German payments.

The first prerequisite to the payment of reparations, experts assert, is sound money in Germany. They propose to this end the establishment of a new gold bank of issue with four hundred million gold marks capital, in the organization of which they make it to the interest and profit of Germany, as well as to the advantage of the Allies to co-operate.

Germany's production, they say, will enable her to meet her own requirements and raise amounts to apply to reparations as contemplated in the plan. These payments, fixed on a sliding scale, run from a hundred and ten million gold marks in 1922 to two and a half billion gold marks in 1934.

In order to prevent these payments from affecting adversely Germany's financial stability, an index of prosperity has been fixed, making it possible to judge whether the amounts of scheduled payments are or not beyond her capacity.

The General Board of Control, with allied, neutral and German members, and including the United States representative, is the experts' solution of the difficult problem of guarantees that Germany will execute the terms of eventual settlement under their plan. The experts found this plan most likely to satisfy the allies, and at the same time prove acceptable to the Germans.

One member of this board, with the title of commissioner, will be vested with the important duties of deciding according to an index of prosperity when payments provided for in the plan may prove too onerous and may threaten the unsetting of German finances.

An index is to be based upon the German exports and imports, the total budget receipts and expenditures, railroad traffic, monetary value of the consumption of sugar, tobacco, beer and alcohol by the total population, and the consumption of coal. The percentage will be fixed on the average statistics covering these basis, first for three years, then for six years; percentage of each of the six groups compared with the base being separately computed and the average of six percentage results forming the index.

When the resources exceed the index supplementary payments on reparations, basic payments shall be made for a period on which the calculations are based. But supplementary payments shall not become due until allowance has been made for the previous deficiencies.

Lots of Gold Marks.

Love Wins

She was an heiress. And he was a riding master. One day she went to the stables to arrange board and room for her horse. Soon they began taking long rides together. Romance had entered the lives of Elizabeth Keller, Cleveland society girl (above), and William Dunne (below), late of the U.S. Army. Miss Keller's father's objection to the match was overcome when the groom waived all rights to her property.

BUSINESS MAN IS SUING DUKE

John Tebutt, Quebec Shoe Manufacturer, Claims $5,494 From His Grace of Manchester—A Loan to Pay Hotel Expenses.

MONTREAL, April 9. — The Montreal Star published in its news columns yesterday a story to the effect that John Tebbutt, shoe manufacturer of Three Rivers, has sworn out a warrant against William Drogo Angus Montague, Duke of Manchester for the sum of $5,494.60 claimed by Tebbutt to have been lent by him to the Duke to defray the latter's expenses at a local hotel, Tebbutt declares he has never been repaid th's money and that the Duke appears to have forgotten the debt.

The Duke of Manchester with his son, Lord Mandeville, visited this city last year in connection with certain mining interests said by His Grace to be owned by him in Northern Ontario. It was on the strength of these holdings, Tebbutt states, that he undertook to lend the Duke the money. The Duke's luggage is stated to be still held by the local hotel management.

In the United States one patent or design has been issued for every 35,515 of population; in England, one for every 1188 of population.

GRAIN MIXING HURTS FARMER

Hon. Geo. Langley Estimated Producer Received Less Than Five Cents of Every Dollar Made By Mixing.

WINNIPEG, April 9. Canadian Press. — "Not illegal, but inexpedient and costly to the producer," declared Hon. George Langley, former president of the Saskatchewan Co-Operative Elevators Company, in stating his objections to the practice of mixing grain, while testifying before the Royal Grain Inquiry Commission on Tuesday afternoon.

"I say millions of dollors have been made by the raising of grades on grain going into private elevators, in handling grain that the grain act and the act of 1912 never contemplated. For every dollar made by the mixing houses the producer received less than fifty cents, and I think that this is a form of business your commission should seriously consider putting a stop to," Mr. Langley said.

The witness claimed mixing an inferior article with a superior one did not preserve the superior quality. He insisted that the grain going out is "skimmed" and this was contributed to by the system of selecting cars and diverting them to private elevators and millers. New grades are created when the grain passes through private elevators. The low grades going in have diminished and the high grades have increased, and the witness held the private elevators responsible for this.

The per capita consumption of coffee in the United States last year was 11.46 pounds. The per capita consumption of tea was .85 pound.

FARMERS DEMAND COMPLETE PROBE

TORONTO, April 9 (Canadian Press). — The United Farmers of Ontario emphatically demand that the probe into the Provincial financial operations be "pushed to the limit."

The U.F.O. Executive spent yesterday afternoon reviewing the evidence which already has been produced, and then prepared a statement calling for "exemplary punishment" of all offenders.

The statement, signed by President W. A. Amos and Secretary J. J. Morrison, is as follows:

"It would be premature at this stage to pronounce judgment on the evidence brought before the Public Accounts Committee of the Legislature. At the same time we feel that sufficient has been divulged to warrant the United Farmers of Ontario demanding in the most emphatic manner that the investigation now under way shall be pushed to the limit.

"The process of uncovering will have to be full and complete. No personal or political influence in any quarter must be permitted to stand in the way of this. No possible pressure by bond houses banking institutions or other financial organisations can be allowed to obstruct the course of justice. Public morality and the requirements of public life demand that the probe now instituted shall go to the bottom of whatever there exists.

"Then if he evidence justifies such action let the punishment be swift and as sure and of such an exemplary nature as shall serve as an example for a generation to come."

SNOW NORTHERN NEW YORK

MALONE, N.Y., April 9— More than a foot of snow has fallen in this section of Northern New York during Monday night and yesterday. Roads are almost impassable, most trains have been seriously delayed, and there appears to be little hope of relief to-day.

HERTZOG WANTS PRINCE'S VISIT

South African Nationalist Leader Says British Heir Would Be Warmly Greeted--Elections About Mid-June.

CAPETOWN, South Africa, April 9.—(Canadian Press Cable via Reuters):—Speaking in the union House of Assembly yesterday General Hertzog, the nationalist leader questioned the accuracy of yesterday's announcement of the postponement of the Prince of Wales' visit to South Africa and expressed the hope that the announcement was not equivalent to saying that the Prince would not come at all. (Cheers). Undoubtedly the change of plans meant disappointment to a great many but he hoped he was voicing the feelings of all sections when he said if the Prince visited South Africa in the future he would be greeted with respect and warmth worthy of his high position and of the South African people. (Cheers).

Premier Smuts, replying, said the statement of General Hertzog was quiet correct. The Prince would be perfectly welcome under any circumstances and was assured of a most royal welcome by every shade of opinion. It was only the proprieties of the case which induced the government to advise him to postpone his trip till after the turmoil of the election. He hoped the invitation would be renewed when the elections were over, so that the people might have an early opportunity of seeing the future King. He added that he knew the Prince was eager to come to South Africa and would probably find occasion to do so.

Introducing an appropriation bill for £4,000,000 Hon. H. Burton, minister of finance announced that there was an estimated treasury surplus of £200,000 in spite of the large extra expenditure entailed in fighting the locusts. This result indicated substantial improvement in the country's financial condition in various directions.

Lindsay Standing Pat on Fair Dates

LINDSAY, April 9. — At a meeting of the directors of the South Victoria Agricultural Society yesterday matters relating to the annual fair in September next were considered.

It was announced during the afternoon that an official of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition had suggested to a local director the advisability of sending a committee to Peterborough to discuss fair dates.

The meeting felt that it was up to Peterborough to consider a change in date.

The dates for Lindsay Central Fair had been selected, and would not be changed even though Peterborough Fair would be held on the same dates.

Winnipeg Merchant's Funeral Impressive.

WINNIPEG, April 9. — Winnipeg citizens of every walk of life, joined in paying their last respects to James H. Ashdown, Western Canada's pioneer merchant, who was buried yesterday.

The funeral service was one of the most impressive seen here in many years, and was attended by representatives of the Provincial and Civic governments, church, public and private institutions on which he has served in person and also by his munificence. Following private service at his late residence a public service was held at the Broadway Methodist church of which Mr. Ashdown was a member.

Such was the demand for admittance to the church that seating accommodation could not be found for several representatives of the various organizations in the city.

TRADE DISPUTE BILL

LONDON, April 8.—(Canadian Press Cable).—The House of Lords to-day gave second reading to the Industrial courts amendment bill which, Lord Askwith explained, provided that where the labor minister had referred a trade dispute to the court of enquiry, it would be unlawful for employer or workman to precipitate a breach.

Lord Haldane, speaking for the government, doubted whether the bill was practicable though he agreed to its main object.

DIED IN GAS MASK.

VICTORIA, B.C., April 9.—(Canadian Press).—With an army gas mask tied securely over his head and two empty bottles nearby, the chloroformed body of Bernard Cruddick, 50, was found in his home yesterday. Deceased was a civil engineer and was engaged on construction work at the Esquimalt drydock.

RAILWAY WAGE INCREASE.

CHICAGO, April 9. — (Canadian Press).—Agreement between all but six western railroads and representatives of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors granting the men in those organizations an approximate increase of five per cent., less compensations to the railroads, were signed yesterday afternoon.

MATHEWS AND MASON RETURN TO TORONTO

TORONTO, April 9.—(Canadian Press).—It was learned last night that Charles A. Mathews, Jr., the suspended Deputy-Provincial Treasurer, had returned to the city and would be a witness before the Public Accounts Committee at an early sitting. L. C. Mason, husband of Mathew's step-daughter, is also back in the city, and will be an important witness at the Treasury probe in the near future. The evidence to be heard to-day may be the most sensational yet given at the investigation. In the picturesque language of one on the inside, "there will be a bit of an explosion."

CAMPBELLFORD POLICE COURT

Theft and Infraction of O.T.A. Before the Court --Campbellford News.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 9.—Five youths, the youngest of whom was a mere boy, were in the police court Tuesday charged with theft and infraction of the Ontario Temperance Act. The case arose out of the hearing last week when two young men were fined one for intoxication and the other for having liquor in a place other than his dwelling. One of the defendants in court yesterday had left the town on the first sign of trouble, going first to Brighton and later to St. Catharines where he was located and was brought back to Campbellford by Chief Duncalfe. Magistrate Payne heard the case but declined to dispose of the theft charges stating that the young men had been before him on previous occasions and for that reason he might be prejudiced. Two of them were held for trial at Cobourg and are now out on bail. Another was fined $200 and cash, the alternative being three months in jail.

W. F. Kerr, Crown Attorney, of Cobourg appeared for the prosecution and J. F. Strickland of Peterborough for two of the defendants. He succeeded in getting both his clients off, the one on suspended sentence and the other being discharged outright. The young man first referred to is the one who left town and he was required to pay the rather heavy expense of his arrest and the return trip from St. Catharines. He gave testimony which resulted in two of his companions being held for trial on the theft charge.

D. J. Lynch appeared for one of the defendants.

On the theft charge only one witness was heard. He swore that he and two others went into the cellar of a building on Front street, looking for liquor, after they had sampled a bottle which they found in the yard. They broke the lock of a door and secured two five gallon jugs which the witness said were filled with moonshine. That liquor caused all the subsequent trouble.

Mr. Strickland who had asked immunity for the young man when the latter took the stand, to testify against his companions, said that after listening to his evidence all he could do was to advise him to plead guilty. He asked for leniency and in view of all the circumstances including his youth, the defendant was released on suspended sentence.

An information has been laid against the owner of the building from which the whiskey was stolen charging him with the illegal possession of liquor.

Veterans to Act.

It is likely that a meeting of returned men will be called for the purpose of passing a resolution asking the Dominion Government to make a permanent part of pensions to disabled veterans the bonus which they now receive. There is no organization of the ex-soldiers here at present. A number are in receipt of pensions and there are several war widows who will suffer if the pensions now paid them are derived by the amount of the bonuses.

Testing Sewer Pipe.

G. G. Robinson, representing the J. E. Russell Company of Toronto, gave the members of the Sewer Committee a demonstration of the strength of the sewer pipe that he is offering the town. A section of a 10-inch pipe, two and a half feet long, was placed in a shallow trench and along the top of the pipe a seven-foot board was laid lengthwise. Upon this board there were piled 45 sacks of cement, each weighing 90 pounds. Mr. Robinson and Councillor McDonald, one of the heavyweights, then climbed upon the sacks, bringing the total weight resting on the pipe to over 5,000 pounds.

Setting Out Trees.

Shade trees will be planted around the entire outside of the High School grounds, and the citizens will be given a chance to contribute to the cost of this work. It is estimated that it will require from 75 cents to $1.50 to purchase and plant a tree. Those wishing to subscribe can do so at the store of J. A. Loucks, chairman of the Board of Education. The list was opened yesterday morning, and by noon 15 donations had been received.

Pupils Have Holidays.

The pupils in the public school were released at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon to give them an opportunity to attend the matinee at the Regent Theatre, the attraction being the picture "Robin Hood," which was deemed of sufficient interest to supplement the history lessons taught in the higher grades. Over 200 boys and girls attended. The picture, which is being shown to crowded houses, will be the bill again for to-night.

OWNS BEAUTIFUL JEWEL

CHICAGO, April 9.— (Canadian Press).— Mrs. Edith Rockefeller-McCormick who is fond of emeralds and has money to gratify her tastes was disclosed yesterday as the owner of a $1,500,000 emerald and diamond necklace recently brought to Chicago. It is said the full duty of 80 per cent of their value was paid before they were started west. The gems were handled for Mrs. McCormick by the House of Cartier of Paris. Whether the beautiful stones were part of the missing Russian Crown jewels or the treasure of another Royal House remains a secret.

MILLBROOK DEBATERS DEFEATED PETERBORO

Miss Francis Turner and Mr. Morris Gray Win Trophy In Final Rhetorical Clash, Concluding District A.Y.P.A. Series--Presentation Here on Thursday.

MILLBROOK, April 8. — A gathering of unusual interest was held in the school house of St. John's church Peterboro, on Tuesday evening, the occasion marking the decision for final honors in the series of debates for the district cup.

The subject for debate was "Resolved that the school exerts a greater influence in the formation of character than does the home." Miss Frances Turner and Mr. Morris Gray, of Millbrook, ably upheld the affirmative, while Miss Florence Hutchison and Mr. J. G. Stevenson of Peterboro, presented arguments for the negative side.

Rev. Dr. Blagrave opened the meeting with prayer, and Miss E. Smith presided. Miss Crowe was timekeeper, and the judges were Mr. F. M De La Fosse, Mr C. E. Jamieson, Peterboro, and Miss Pearl Burnham, of Millbrook.

The usual rule of allowing each speaker 15 minutes to present their arguments, and the leader of the affirmative to reply, was followed. Miss Turner making excellent use of her opportunity for rebuttal in the time at her disposal.

The judges found considerable difficulty in arriving at a decision, as both sides had presented their case well, but finally gave the honors to the affirmative, the score being 35 points to 31. The cup, which is the gift of Mr. Hollingsworth of Toronto, president of the Dominion A.Y.P.A., will be presented at the district meeting which is to be held in St. George's church, Peterboro, on Thursday, April 10th, at 8 p.m. A number from Peterboro will motor in for the gathering.

St. John's church, Ida, which has now a A.Y.P.A., with a membership of about 40, will united with the District Association at the meeting on Thursday evening. Mrs. L. H. Winslow is president.

EGG CIRCLE AT WESTWOOD MEET

During 1923 There Were 87 Members and Over Forty Thousand Eggs Were Shipped.

WESTWOOD, April 9.—The Egg Circle at Westwood held their annual meeting, the president, Wm. Thompson, presiding. Minutes of last annual meeting were read and confirmed. The auditors, Mr. Graham and Mr. Fitzpatrick, in making their report, showed that they had gone extensively into the details of the circle's operations during 1923, and spoke favorably of the manager in that he had given them the assistance required in connection with the seconds. When report reads as follows:

Number of members shipping during 1924, 87; number of dozen shipped, 40,132; grower's value to circle, $10,900.98; net value to members, $10,093.30; cash advanced by manager, $9,231.36; gross profit over store prices, $1,669.62; manager's commission, $807.68; net profit to members, $861.94; average net profit per dozen, 2.1c; average selling price per dozen, 27c.

On motion the auditors' report was accepted.

Mr. McRae, agricultural representative for Peterborough County, addressed the meeting, dealing with the unfavorable reports in circulation as to the benefit of the circle to the community and making a comparison between the 1923 operations and the marketing conditions prior to the institution of the circle which, he contended, showed much in favor the circle. He further said if the operation of the circle during the past year did not meet their expectations the reason for this condition might easily be accounted for by the low quality of the product shipped, the graded returns showing a large percentage of eggs grading only No. 1's and lower, and that there was easily a matter of from five to eight cents per dozen difference between the high and low grades. Mr. McRae favored a continuance of circle operations for another year.

Mr. Fennell, of Havelock, who has been assisting in poultry promotion work in Peterborough County, when asked to address the meeting, pointed out that the benefits derived from circle operations was not confined solely to the marketing of their product. The improvement in quality should naturally follow the institution of a circle in a community. The better prices for the improved quality acts as an incentive for greater production while proper feeding and housing play an important part in production, the feature that adds to the greatest extent to profitable production from the poultry flock, is to cull from the flocks the boarders that is, all those birds that do not lay enough eggs to pay for their feed. The same number of eggs from half the number of birds adds greatly to the profits. The circle markets the product co-operatively, adds to the interest taken in the production and tends to increase production per hen.

It was decided to postpone the election of the directors for the year 1924 as it was deemed advisable to have the auditors' report published before the new officers be appointed. The officers for 1923 were asked to retain office until the election was called.

EXPERTS FINISH THEIR ENQUIRY

Investigation Expected to Last Six Weeks Extended Into Three Months — Details of German Affairs Carefully Scrutinized.

(By Webb Miller, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PARIS, April 9. — General Charles G. Dawes to-day delivered to the Reparations Commission the report of the experts of which he is chairman.

The report virtually proposes revision of the financial provisions of the Treaty of Versailles.

It is a "businesslike" plan for obtaining reparations from Germany, while balancing her budget and stabilising her currency.

At the same time there was submitted the report of a second experts committee, headed by Reginald McKenna, dealing with German wealth abroad and means for its return.

The Dawes report proposed:

1st—Creation of a bank of emission to issue paper money for Germany and handle the reparations account.

2nd—The taking over of German railways by a company, which will run them for the benefit of both Germany and her creditors.

3rd—A foreign loan of 800,000,000 gold marks to stabilise Germany's currency and take care of her immediate treaty obligations.

4th—Obtaining reparations payments from the sale of railway and industrial bonds and from revenue from monopolies on luxuries.

5th—A sliding scale of reparations payments, starting at one billion gold marks the first year and increasing as Germany prospers.

6th—France and Belgium must release their economic hold on the Ruhr but may retain their armies of occupation.

Re-establish Confidence.

The report hailed as the most momentous document since the Versailles Treaty, which it would in a measure revise, differs from that pact in this.

General Dawes and his colleagues, who included Owen d'Young, passed their findings on the hypothesis that "the fiscal and economic unity of the Reich will be restored," Germany is not told what she must pay and left to find the money, the experts, through limited control and supervision, would have the allies' share with the late enemy interest and responsibility in the business of making every German bear a fair share of a fair burden.

The re-establishment of confidence in Germany on the part of her own people as well as the rest of the world, is held to be vital to the success of the plan.

General Dawes' committee has proposed to create this confidence by making it to Germany's interest to pay her debts. To this end the broadest, most complicated scheme ever devised for the rehabilitation of a nation and extracting payments is outlined, involving intricate mechanism of parallel and interlocking boards of directors. The whole supervised by a reparations dictator "to safeguard the rights of the allies," who are asked to relinquish their economic grip on the Ruhr.

The plan is presented as a unit. It concludes, almost bluntly, in a manner characteristic of "Hell and Maria" Dawes, that it must be accepted in its entirely or not at all.

Minister For War Still Reverences Their Brass Hast

NEW YORK, April 9.—(Canadian Press).—Sir Philip Gibbs, writing in the World's Work on Labor's success in Britain, recounts the following:

"Stephen Walsh, the new Minister for War, or "Little Stee," as he is called, is entirely unable to conceal his reverence for generals and whenever any of them seek his presence.

He stands almost to attention, refuses to sit while they are standing, and shows them to the door, which he insists upon opening himself.

"Look here," said Field-Marshal Sir William Roberrson, "you mustn't do that, you know, you are my chief now."

But "Little Stee" shook his head. "I know my own place," he said. "You commanded the armies in the field; I was nothing but a private in the ranks."

RAILWAY BILL BEFORE HOUSE

Mr. Stevens Would Have Canadian National Do as Others Do.

OTTAWA, April 9.—(Canadian Press).—"Why cannot the Canadian National Railway come before Parliament and the committee the same as any other corporate body does?" queried Hon. H. H. Stevens on the House of Commons last night. The Canadian National branch line program was again before the House. "We are training the directorate to think that they can dip into the treasury whenever they like," Mr. Stevens pursued. The government claimed that they wanted to divorce the railway system from politics, then, added Mr. Stevens let the Canadian National Board be treated like the C.P.R. Board and appear before the Railway committee with their bills. Surely, Mr. Stevens went on, the house was not going to accept as evidence of need of a railway merely the request of the member representing the constituency affected and the committee do nothing more than utter a pious amen.

Mr. Stevens further referred to the Canadian National Board as "an excellent political board."

Frank Cahill (Liberal, Pontiac), who followed, declared that the Government of which Mr. Stevens was a member, had, in the dying days of its career, passed a Bill which deprived the Railways Committee of all discretion in the matter of branch lines in connection with the Canadian National Railways.

To this, the Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader, said that the present Government should follow the example of its predecessor and give full information.

Before adjournment, seven of the branch lines resolutions had passed the House, and Bills based thereon had received first reading.

All the seven lines are in the Western Provinces. Their total estimated cost is $4,989,000.

Twelve more branch line resolutions still remain to be considered.

NEWS FROM KEENE AND THE DISTRICT

A Surprise Party for Mrs. Harrison—Personal Mention.

KEENE, April 9.—A pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison on Thursday, when the executive officers and teachers of the Methodist Sunday School met to hold an executive meeting. After a short session, the Superintendent of the School explained to Mrs. Harrisson that the real reason of the gathering was in honor of her seventy-fourth birthday. Mrs. Harrisson was much much taken by surprise, and responded to Mr. Edwards' address, giving a hearty welcome to the guests, numbering eighteen. The work of the Sunday School has always been one of the most important and interesting parts of Church work to her, as she has been an active worker in the same Sunday School for forty-nine years, and has had great influence on the lives of many of those whom she has taught from infancy to womanhood and manhood. The evening's programme comprised the following:—

Address—Mr. David Edwards reading—"The First of April, or All-Fools' Day," Miss Fowler; Address—Rev. A. McLauchlin; Duet—Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Rennie; reading—"The Country Doctor," Mrs. (Rev.) McLauchlin; Piano and mouth organ duet—Miss Munro Edwards and Mr. A. E. Fletcher; reading—"The Life of Carrie Jacobs Bonds," Mrs. Henry McLachlan; solo—"My Task," Mrs. Harrisson. DOHERTY RESIGNS

TORONTO, April 9.—(Canadian Press).—Hon. Manning Doherty has resigned from the board of directors of the Farmers' Publishing Company. Mr. Doherty finds that his duties as leader of the Progressive group in the Legislature take up so much of his time that he is unable to attend the meetings of the board. W. J. Sanderson, business manager of the Farmers' Sun, has been appointed to succeed him. Some time ago Mr. Doherty resigned from the directorate of the U.F.O. Co-operative Company.

WOMEN PLANNING REAL POLITICAL SPRING CLEANING.

Whenever a Man Tells You a Thing Can Not Be Done Get a Woman to Do It.

BY HARRY B. HUNT

WASHINGTON, April 9.—As though party leaders weren't having enough trouble to keep their lines straight for the coming campaign, state and county organizations are reporting that new enfranchised women voters are gumming up the organization program in many sections of the country.

Apparently the spring housecleaning fever has hit a large section of the politically minded women. They're blaming the men for smearing the place with oil, tracking in mud and dirt and being not merely untidy but positively filthy.

Anyway, they're rolling up their sleeves, getting out the brooms and carpet beaters, and making a show of getting ready to clean up.

One of the first clean-up conferences called by women, who want to see the political homestead maintained in better order, is that of the League of Women Voters, which will be held in Buffalo April 24 to 29.

Among the women who will wield the duster on that occasion are Julia Lathrop of Chicago, former chief of the U.S. Children's Bureau; Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of Pennsylvania's Progressive Republican Governor; Mrs. Frank Vanderlip, whose husband has organized the Federal Research Bureau in Washington to assist investigations into governmental recklessness, and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt and Mrs. Mary Garrett Hay, veteran suffrage campaigners.

The conference will not choose as between Republicans and Democrats in deciding the course of the organization in the housecleaning, but will concentrate its efforts to stimulate women's interest generally in picking "clean" men for office this fall, from county prosecutors to president.

A taste of what may be expected from this feminine house-cleaning fervor has just been experienced by Cumberland county, N.J. An oldtime political boss there, as a sop to suffrage sentiment, named a young Smith College graduate, Thelma Parkinson of Vineland, N.J., as a member of the state Democratic committee. He figured she'd be satisfied with the honor of the job he'd get credit among the women for naming one of their sex, and everything would be lovely.

But, alas! Miss Parkinson took her job seriously. Once confirmed as a member of the committee, she got busy. She didn't like the boss' manners nor his methods, and said so. She organized the committee against him and then kicked him out.

Miss Smith will be at the Democratic convention as delegate-at-large from New Jersey—doubtless one of the youngest delegates on the floor, if not the youngest. She's just 25.

Singularly, when the men out in Preble county, Ohio, reported there was no use organizing against the G.O.P., it was a woman, Mrs. Ada M. Whipple of Eaton, who went out and organized the second biggest Democratic Victory Club in Ohio.

"When any man tells me a thing cannot be done," Mrs. Whipple wrote Democratic headquarters, "I'm going to satisfy myself."

Acting on this tip, Cordell Hull, chairman of the Democratic national committee, is turning more and more to women for assistance.

"Whenever the men report 'it can't be done,' get a woman to do it," Hull has ordered.

"And I never yet have had a woman fail," Hulls says.

BAR ON RAW OPIUM FOR USE IN HEROIN IS URGED IN HOUSE.

Alarming Additions Made to Million Addicts in U. S., Doctors Tell Committee—Not Needed As Medicine.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Means of outlawing all importations of crude opium for heroin manufacture are being prepared by the House Ways and Means Committee, following the appearance before it of medical authorities, who said that recruits are being added in increasing numbers to the million addicts in the United States and that there is only the most negligible use of heroin for legitimate purposes. All use of the drug as a legitimate medicine could be abandoned without inconvenience, it was testified.

Among those who favored the Porter bill to prohibit all importations were Dr. Amos Squire, chief physician at Sing Sing; Dr. Charles W. Richardson, of the American Medical Association, and Dr. Rupert Blue, formerly Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service.

Representative Stephen Porter, author of the bill, gave the estimate of 1,000,000 addicts, and said that less than 5 per cent. of the physicians of the country prescribed heroin, while only a comparatively small portion of the imported crude opium is used for its manufacture.

Dr. Richardson said the addicts of New York City use about 76,000 ounces a year. Compared to this only fifty-eight ounces is prescribed each year by the 14,000 physicians of the State.

One of every eleven prisoners arriving at Sing Sing in 1923 was a drug addict, Dr. Squire said, this representing an increase of 900 per cent. in six years. Fifty per cent. of the addicts are second-termers. Dr. Squire estimated that of the Sing Sing addicts 96 per cent. used heroin.

"I believe when a man takes heroin a number of years he is permanently injured. He commits crime in a frenzy to get money to buy the drug," he said. "Many of the gunmen of New York City are drug addicts."

THE QUALITY OF BULK TEA

The Quality of Bulk Tea is always unreliable for several reasons In the first place, being unlabelled its origin is unknown and there is no one who has any particular responsibility for its goodness. In the second place it is exposed to the air, and therefore very quickly loses its flavour and freshness Even if it were as good as "SALADA" in the first place it would rapidly deterioate, and in any case it would be impossible for any dealer to follow consistently the same quality throughout the year. "SALADA" always maintains an unvarying high standard, possible through skilful blending.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Much Interest Being Shown in the Large Number of Women Safely Carried Through the Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The Following Letters Are Impressive

Owing to modern methods of living, few women approach this perfectly natural change without experiencing very annoying and often painful symptoms. Those dreadful hot flashes, nervousness, headaches, melancholia and irritability are only a few of the symptoms incident to this trying period of a woman's life, and the following letters prove the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to overcome these abnormal conditions.

"Fisherville, Ky.—"For several months I was under the doctor's care as he said my nervousness, chills, hot flashes and weakness was caused by the Change of Life, but I did not seem to get any better. I was not able to work and spent most of my time in bed. A friend called to see me and asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I cannot tell you how much good the medicine did me, as I had such a hard time before taking it. I can only advise every woman passing through the Change of Life to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it did so much for me."—Mrs. EDWARD B. NEAL, Star Route, Fisherville, Ky.

A Michigan Woman Helped

Ionia, Michigan.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and had been under the doctor's care without any relief. A friend in Lansing, Mich., asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I feel fifty per cent better already. If any one in this condition doubts the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to help them I will gladly answer their letters."—Mrs. MAX W. HAHN, 587 N. Jefferson Street, Ionia, Mich.

A New York Woman Helped

Syracuse, N. Y.—"I was used up with nervousness, weakness and hot flashes so I could hardly keep around, and could not get out much on account of those awful prickly feelings. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helping another woman with symptoms like mine. My husband got some for me, and after taking it five months I can get around and even do my housework, washing and ironing included, and my friends can see what a change it has made in me."—Mrs. SIDNEY HUMPHREY, 326½ Burnet Avenue, Syracuse, N. Y.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9, 1924.

SEVEN YEARS AGO.

Today is the anniversary of one of the most glorious feat of arms in the history of the Canadian Army Corps, the anniversary of the date upon which the Maple Leaf soldiers wrested from the Germans the all-important Vimy Ridge.

How many Peterborough people remembered today the significance of the fact that this is the 9th of April?

Even among those who took part in that great attack—and there are many of them in Peterborough—there were probably not a large number who realized that today was the anniversary of the triumph of the Canadians.

It is a date that should be kept ever green in Canadian memory, for in that "big show" the troops from the Dominion won one of the outstanding successes of the war—a victory that had far-reaching results.

The anniversary should not be allowed to pass unnoticed, and in other years possibly the Great War Veterans' Association may give the lead in some public recognition of the significance of April 9th.

It is not possible to recognize all the dates of Canadian battles, but the anniversary of Vimy Ridge should be commemorated.

HELPING THE BLIND.

Peterborough is to have a tag day for the blind on Saturday, and although there is a growing tendency on the part of many citizens to resent this method of raising funds, except by those organizations who have for years conducted such campaigns, the Examiner feels sure that, in view of the object for which Saturday's effort is to be made, there will be a generous response.

The work of caring for the blind is a necessary and most commendable endeavour which has been the source of untold benefit to many sadly afflicted people, who have been taught to be self-sustaining and have been given new hope in life when all chance for happiness and comfort seemed to have been lost.

The Government grants toward this work have suffered from the country-wide demand for economy, and the generosity of the public will have to make up the difference if there is not to be a curtailment of the efforts of those who have been carrying on this splendid organization.

Peterborough people are being given their opportunity on Saturday, with the various chapters of the Daughters of the Empire providing the necessary campaign organization, to contribute their share to the year's budget.

The response should be as hearty as the cause is worthy.

AN ESSENTIAL WITNESS.

The issue raised by the Toronto Globe that Charles Matthews, Deputy Provincial Treasurer, is the man who can throw the most light upon the details of the financial transactions now under investigation by the Public Accounts Committee. is an important one.

The inquiry can not possibly be considered complete until Matthews has given his testimony as to what happened during the Hearst regime, as well as the particulars of Hon. Peter Smith's tenancy of office.

With the contention that the Public Accounts Committee should seek by every means in its power the return of the Deputy Provincial Treasurer to Toronto to tell the true story of the origin and operation of what the Globe describes as the "tollgate," there can be no quarrel.

Mr. Matthews was in a position to know much about these transactions, and the Public Accounts Committee should not regard its work as closed until he has been examined.

There has been no statement from the committee as to the whereabout of Matthews, or as to the likelihood of his giving evidence.

The public would like to know as soon as possible that every effort is being made to ensure the presence before the committee of this all-important witness.

There is an uneasy feeling that the half has not been told about these matters, and no pains should be spared in securing the evidence of all who can supply essential information as to the transactions under investigation, no matter whose head may drop into the basket as a result.

The people of Ontario want the truth and all the truth in this inquiry.

MUNICIPAL TAXATION.

The Citizens' Research Institute of Canada, continuing its investigation of taxation problems and municipal financing, has issued a bulletin, just received by the Examiner, which gives some ground for hoping that a day of lower municipal taxation is about to dawn, although it is possible that the return to sanity has not been nearly as pronounced as it should be.

The bulletin shows that between 1919 and 1920 the total taxation in 48 Canadian cities increased nearly $14,000,000, between 1920 and 1921 over $9,000,000 and between 1921 and 1922 a little over $4,500,000, indicating that while the total has steadily increased, the rate of increase has fallen rapidly.

The per capita taxation increase in the 48 cities was marked during the first two one-year intervals, but was extremely small in 1922.

Details indicate that the decline has been most marked in British Columbia, in which Province the taxation on the three cities studied seems to have been no greater in 1922 than in 1919, although there was an increase in the intervening years.

The Institute asks a number of pertinent queries.

Have the cuts in overhead cost been as drastic as private business?

Are we going to take a sufficient burden off the back of business and capital to enable them to carry on in fair prosperity, with a much more thorough-going application of principles of economy and efficiency to public business?

A preliminary examination of 43 cities indicates that 23 of them spent more per capita and 20 spent less per capital in 1923 than in 1922.

In the latter group almost half were Western cities.

The record for 1924 must be better than this if the tendency toward economy is to be significant.

Statements are frequently made that the whole or most of the increase in taxation is explained by the decreased value of a dollar.

This is largely aside from the question unless it can be shown that the average taxpayer has more dollars with which to pay his taxes than formerly.

OUT OF THE DRAB.

This is the month when gardeners and fishermen and golfers prepare to enter the paradise of spring, says the Ottawa Journal. Of all men who ride hobby-horses they are perhaps the most joyful, the most pleased. They are linked by likeness. They bore their friends in the same way: the gardener with stories of his wonderful tulips pushing up through the snow to be kissed by the sun, the fisherman with stories of big things rising in lakes and rivers, the golfer by telling you he's in mid-season form. And day after day they go on, the gardener grubbing out on the lawn and bringing in mud on his boots that ruins the new Wilton rug; the fisherman getting ready his tackle and recounting his last year's exploits; the golfer practising with his midiron in the parlor and terrifying the household lest he smash the chandeliers.

Of the three, the fisherman and the gardener are most likeable. They are somehow distinguished from all other outdoor men by a gentleness of nature and word, a mellowness of thought, a certain philosophic melancholy common to all who deal in first things. Why is it? Can the spiritual brotherhood of the men who fish and the men who dig be traced back to the beginning of things? These acts were surely the first steps man took on the ladder of progress. After thousands of years of digging and fishing man thought of kicking a ball about or of hitting it with a club. It still kept him near the soil, and no doubt increased his vocabulary, but it did not teach him those spiritual things learned beside the river's brink or at the furrow's edge.

Thank Heaven for the fisherman and the gardener—and the golfer. They take us from the drab mediocrity, the harsh materialism, the mad, unreflecting rush of the world. They teach us the meaning of mother nature, the beauty of flowers, the lesson of "brooks and stones." And these joyous days, when winter is but a memory of fireside nights, and Laurentian tramps, and sleigh-bells, and when April suns and April tears are answered by a blossom, and the whole earth is bathed with warmth and the fragrance of nature awake, it is good to be alive.

"There is no time like spring,
When life's alive in everything,
Before new nestlings sing,
Before cleft swallows speed their journey back
Along the trackless track."

THE DAWES REPORT.

The attitude of the German Chancellor toward the report of the Dawes Commission—with whose main features he is doubtless familiar—would seem to indicate that at all events he regards any German military resistance as impossible. Of course, he is talking for election purposes against the Nationalists, who urge immediate military resistance. He is primarily making a political argument. But the facts behind it are convincing. He tells his people that France is the strongest military power in the world, and that her army is a hundred times stronger than the German and equipped with the most modern war materials.

When France and her army will be supporting a plan upon which Great Britain and the United States have already agreed, it is obvious that the argument against German resistance becomes even stronger. France would be simply enforcing the carefully considered opinion of the civilized world. Chancellor Marx is undoubtedly right in contending that the Nationalist program of tearing up the Treaty of Versailles, defying the Dawes Commission and declaring German independence, is a policy of madness.

But, unfortunately, that is not the whole question. There never has been the remotest vestige of German "military resistance" to the Treaty of Versailles. Still German "passive resistance" has pretty well paralyzed the enforcement of that treaty. Again, British and American signatures were on the Treaty of Versailles. And yet American support was almost entirely withdrawn and British co-operation has been both critical and hampering.

Germany will clearly not try to fight France over the Dawes report. British and American representatives have signed it. But the real question lies outside of these facts—Are its suggestions of a nature to engage active and willing British and American support, and to persuade the Germans that it will pay them best to submit?

* * * *

Even military resistance is not wholly a question of Germany vis-a-vis with France. Everybody knows that that is impossible. It is a question rather of a problematic European upheaval in which the superb French Army and the potential power of Germany will be only two factors.

Europe is today a tinder-box. There are a dozen possible causes of quarrel scattered all over the Continent. Any one of them might precipitate general hostilities by which both France and Germany would be deeply affected.

For instance, Russia and Roumania have just failed to arrive at a treaty in Vienna because Russia insisted that the Bessarabians should be permitted to hold a plebiscite as to whether they remain in Roumania or return to Russia, whereas the Roumanians claim that that was all settled when they entered the war and the Allies gave them Bessarabia. Russia has already concentrated troops on the Bessarabian frontier. Supposing war came?

There would be an immediate division of forces in Europe. A year ago, we would have said that the Little Entente would never allow Roumania to be crushed. But is this certain today, with Czecho-Slovakia by no means cordial toward Roumania, and a new understanding between Italy and Jugo-Slavia? These two Little Entente nations would move against Bulgaria, Hungary or Austria, but would they move against Russia? And if they faltered, would Poland dare?—Montreal Star.

Who got that $15,000 seems to be as much a mystery as the fate of Ambrose Small.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, April 8.—Choice butchers are perhaps in best demand from 7¼ to as high as 8 cents a pound. There is a larger movement developing in the stockers and feeders. Yesterday and today will account for about 12 loads of these. Prices are about $1 cwt. higher than a year ago. For passable short-keeps, about 1,000 lbs. each, $6.25 a cwt. was asked and rough 800-lb. stockers were held at 5¾ cents. Choice short-keeps will sell at or close to 7 cents.

Three loads of export steers were sold this morning by Dunn & Levack to Rogers & Co. at $8.50 a cwt.; other export steers of lighter weight were $7.75; choice 1,100-lb butchers brought up to $7.75 a cwt.; and good baby beeves were $8 to $9 a cwt. Good mixed butchers sold at 6¼ cents, mediums up to 6¼ cents and common at 5½ cents a pound. Butchers' cows were steady to firm at quoted prices and bulls were a shade firmer. The market was quite active considering the larger offerings.

The spring run of calves is beginning to show up and prices are weakening 50 cents to $1 a cwt. Right good calves sold today at 11½ cents, and some fair mediums at 9 cents. Common calves, as usual, are the hard sellers from 6 to 7 cents.

Sheep and yearling lambs are quite steady. Nearly 60 spring lambs were offered, and the average good lamb was about $14, with some down to $12 each. Choice yearling ewes hold from 15½ to 16½ cents. A load of choice lambs from H. Newell of Milgrove, brough 16½ cents a pound.

Hogs were in fair supply, but bids 25 cents a cwt. lower were not considered, and sales were put through at a steady price of $8 a cwt. fed and watered.

REPUBLIC FACES GREATEST TRIALS

The Fourth of May Elections Will Take Place in Germany.

By CARL D. GROAT

BERLIN, April 9. — (United Press).—Republicanism in Germany is facing its greatest test since the infant democracy was established.

Reichstag elections to be held May 4 will register the will of the German people as to whether republicanism shall flourish or whether men of monarchistic trend shall guide the republic's destinies.

In advance it appears that the ultra-reactionaries will win a tremendous victory.

Whether their victory will be long-lived is another question, which only the future can answer.

But the campaign has now progressed sufficiently to show that the nationalist and "Folkish" elements have a big lead. They now hope to achieve through the ballot what they failed to achieve through the Kapp Putsch and the Munich beer-cellar revolution.

That is to say, they seek establishment of old Pan-Germanic customs, elimination of the eight-hour day, elimination of "Marxism", expulsion of Jews, adoption of a stiffer, brusquer policy toward France, eventual scrapping of the Versailles treaty, introduction of tariffs which would shield the farmer-princes and the "suffering" industrialists—largely at the expense of the home consumer.

Helfferich, monarchist to the core, would be the Foreign Minister, and if he followed the principles proclaimed in the campaign it would not be long before Germany stood defiant before France. The Nationalists and Folkists (Fascisti is perhaps a better term) believe that Germany has been too much humiliated. They insist upon Germany's rights."

Many firebrands among them even preach a "Revanchekrieg"—war of revenge—against France. The sooner the better, say they.

Rip up the Versailles treaty, they demand! Let us again have our place in the sun, again our "Tag."

Their chances of victory are all the greater, since the Socialists long since proved their inability to guide the republic's destinies. Furthermore the democratic elements of Germany have shown themselves either impotent or lacking real enthusiasm and real energy.

NOBILITY.

Be noble, and the nobleness that lies
In other men, sleeping, but not dead,
Will rise in majesty to meet thine own.

—James Russell Lowell.

The ration of school population to total population in the United States has declined from 31.3 in 1870 to 26.2 in 1920.

"What I cannot understand, Sir, is why people will pay a good price for a pair of shoes only to ruin them with neglect.

Now that pair you have just bought will give you a year's good service if you use only "Nugget," and what's more they'll not only last well, but they'll look well too.

WATER CHEMONG LAKE VERY LOW ACCORDING TO MANY OLD TIMERS

Bridgenorth Emerges From a Long Siege of Winter--Cash and Carry For Syrup--School Board Met.

BRIDGENORTH, April 9.—Some of the oldest settlers cannot recollect the water in Chemong Lake being as low as it is at the present time. Thos. Black, who is a good authority, states the water is four feet lower than when he put the finishing touches on the bridge last fall and closed it up for the winter. The approaches at either end which connect from the piers to the floating part of the bridge have considerable pitch at high water and with the floating position four feet lower at present they are almost perpendicular and it is almost impossible to get up with an ordinary load. A few extra planks extended out a few feet would relieve the trouble which exists at the present time but nobody seems to pay any attention to it. The Ennismore side is much worse than the Smith side.

Horses Suspended.

The Imperial Oil Co. tank with a team of horses attached going to Ennismore on Monday broke the wagon on the approach at the Ennismore side going of the bridge. It appears the pole of the wagon is stationery in the front gear and in making this high drive the horses were suspended out on the end of the pole in mid air. The driver was scared but he managed to get the wagon into the city where it was turned into the repair shop.

School Board Met.

A special meeting was called by the secretary of school section No. 5 which is situated in Bridgenorth village, when business of importance was transacted. After some discussion by a few speakers which expressed their views on the question before the house it was decided by an unanimous vote to discontinue having the Normal High School students come to the school for instructions after the present term expires. The argument put forth by the ratepayers present was that the children's studies in the school were being neglected through having the students visit the school three days each week. This move no doubt will have a tendency to raise the school tax in the section.

Information Wanted.

The school house in the village is heated by steam with an up-to-date furnace and is constructed specially to burn coal. However, it is claimed that wood is cheaper and the year's supply has been purchased from a man in Ennismore. It amounts to some 15 cords of four feet maple and beech. Each stick required two cuts, which has all been completed. Some of the residents would like to know why it wasn't let by tender as Bridgenorth has several wood cutting outfits.

Roads Improving.

Mr. Herb McConkey was in the village early in the week and reports the roads out his way in good condition. He says a great deal of credit is due those who have charge of the highways in his district.

Navigation Closed.

Navigation on the lake has closed. Dan Whetung's driver took his car up the lake on Thursday last, no doubt at a great risk. The slush ice was up to the axles in most places and he was compelled to drive his car in low gear most of the trip, which is six miles. Mr. Roy Whetung made an attempt to follow the other car some two hours later in the afternoon but could not make the grade and was forced to turn back and he left his car in the village and walked to Curve Lake.

Leased Properties.

Mr. Eli Burston who has been living on the Denne property west of the park, has leased the Kelly property in the village for a term of five years and has moved into the house adjoining the old Kelly homestead. Mr. Burston has to crop the Denne farm for 1924 when his lease expires.

Home Changes Hands.

Mr. Wm. Beatty has purchased the Morrison House and lot on the back street and has moved in. He has been living in the Dan Sullivan house for the past 2 years, but found it difficult getting up the hill with his truck.

An Early Dip.

Hector Brodley son of Norman Brodley made a splash down behind the saw mill on Saturday afternoon. It seems the boy has a pair of long rubber boots and was testing them out just to see if they were waterproof when he accidentally slipped into the open water. It wasn't very deep and he managed to crawl out again, scared and wet. He spent the balance of the afternoon at the cook stove.

Milk Truck Running.

Mr. James Beatty made his first trip with the milk truck on Tuesday, April 1. This is some ten days earlier than last year. East of the village there were portions of the route which were almost impassible. At these points the farmers drove out with their milk cans to meet him.

Mr. Garbut Morin has to drive his load down to the village. His lane is almost impassible.

Sugar Making.

The sugar making season has arrived after the long winter and the sap is running fairly good. Syrup is selling at the moderate price of $2.50 and $3.00 per gallon delivered, but the farmers in the business may introduce a cash and carry system next year which no doubt would reduce the price to the housekeeper considerable.

Muskrats Starved.

Trappers claim to have found a number of rats starved to death in their houses. It appears the very low water has been the real cause. In building their houses in the fall they did not make provision for this sudden drop in the water. The result was the ice settled into the mud in some cases for a considerable distance and the rats being shut off from the open water could not dig their way out.

Fowler Property.

Mr. Gordon Robinson has purchased the farm known as the Fowler property at Chitticks Corner on the 8th Concession of Smith township. This farm contains some 205 acres. The purchase price has not been stated. Mr. Robinson's many friends wish him every success in his new home.

Mr. John Bradley had his car out on Saturday and motored in to the city where he spent the day. Mrs. Bradley accompanied him home after spending a week visiting in the city with friends. Mr. Bradley reports the roads in very good condition.

Mrs. R. Tedford spent the past two weeks visiting friends in and around Lakefield.

Mr. W. S. Kelly of Toronto spent the week visiting his mother, Mrs. W. B. Kelly at the old homestead in the village.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Telford spent last week with friends in Toronto, returning home via Lindsay where they spent a couple of days with Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone Telford, the latter's brother who is manager of the Canadian National Express office in that town.

Mr. Eli Burston purchased a fine team of horses a few days ago from Mr. Lewis Fowler.

Mrs. Willememe Telford has a nice new runabout with ball bearings, rubber tires, yellow trim. She is proud of it.

SIR HENRY LUCY'S ESTATE

SPRING EXAMINATION BEES

After the colonies have been removed from the cellar, they should be examined on the first warm day when the bees are flying freely, in order to ascertain whether each colony is headed with a good queen and the bees have sufficient stores. The colonies that were wintered outside should also be examined, but not removed from their cases until they are working well in the first super, usually about the latter end of May.

This first examination should be as brief as possible in order to avoid any danger of chilling the brood. The presence of eggs and larvae will indicate that a queen is present. If the cappings over sealed brood are nearly flat this is worker brood, but if the cappings are decidedly raised this is drone brood and the queen should be destroyed. All weak and queenless colonies should be united to queen-right colonies of medium strength. If it is necessary, a weak colony containing a valuable queen can be saved by placing it over a strong colony—first being sure that the weak colony has some brood. If none is present, supply a comb containing a small patch of brood from the strong colony over which the weak is to be placed. In the evening remove the cover from the strong colony and fit on a queen excluder, over the excluder placing the weak colony, without its floorboard. Do not disturb the bees any more than is possible or the queen in the upper hive will be killed. Two or three weeks later, move the hive containing the most brood to a new stand.

Each colony should have at the first examination from 10 to 15 pounds of stores. If there is no disease present in the apiary, combs of honey may be taken from the colonies having a surplus and given to those that are deficient. As most of the stores will be found in the outside combs, these should be moved up close to the brood. The bees will use this honey much faster if the cappings are first broken. If combs of honey are not available, the light colonies must be given syrup made from sugar or honey. Do not spread brood, as this is likely to cause a heavy loss through chilling.

Every colony now having a queen and a sufficient amount of stores, a second examination is not necessary for another two or three weeks, especially if the weather remains cool. At the second examination, see that the queen is supplied with sufficient room for brood rearing, that enough stores are present for the bees. Where hives smaller than 10-frame Langstroth are being used it may be necessary to increase the size of the brood chamber by adding another super. Do not allow the brood chamber to become congested with bees or honey or preparations for swarming will be made. At this examination watch carefully for disease.

HOUSE DEBATES RAILWAY LINKS IN NORTH WEST

Tuesday's Proceedings at Ottawa Devoted to the Consideration of Government's Program of Extensions to Canadian National Lines as Recommended By Directors

Hon. G. P. Graham Back.

OTTAWA, April 9 (Canadian Press). — Canadian National branch lines resolutions — consideration of which had been interrupted owing to the indisposition of the Hon. G. P. Graham, Minister of Railways—was resumed in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon.

The first resolution considered by the House yesterday provided for construction of a line from the end of steel at Mile 24, on the Melfort north-easterly line of the Canadian Northern Saskatchewan Railway to Mile 41 near Nipawin, Sask. The estimated mileage, including existing grading of six miles, totals 17 miles.

The estimated cost is $360,000.

Sir Henry Drayton started the discussion by suggesting that Mr. Graham should read the "appropriate reference" from Sir Henry Thornton's letter.

Mr. Graham replied that this was hardly necessary as the branch in question had been started under the Conservative Government, and the present purpose was merely to continue it. He stated that it was proposed to grade 11 miles this year, in addition to the six miles already graded, and to lay track on the entire 17 miles, during the present season.

In Good Country.

Sir Henry Drayton agreed that the line in question was being built into a good country. Moreover, the system was committed to its construction. It should therefore go ahead.

E. F. Maclean (Conservative, S. York) called the attention of the House to a passage in the last annual report of the C.P.R. in which President Beatty and the directors had urged the necessity of further extensions of that system. The reason given for further extensions, said Mr. Maclean, was the magnitude of the C.P.R., and this reason held also for the Canadian National.

Only One "National."

Mr. Maclean further challenged the statement of Mr. Marler that the C.P.R. and the Canadian National were two great national undertakings. There was only one national undertaking, he said, the Canadian National Railways.

Mr. Maclean argued that it was the duty of the national lines to go ahead. It was the object of the C.P.R. to pay dividends. He hoped it would be the object of the Canadian National lines to give the best possible service to the people of Canada at the lowest rate. He was confident of the ultimate success of public ownership in Canada.

Andrew Knox (Progressive, Prince Albert) stated that the new line was located in his constituency, in a district that could not be surpassed in the West. He felt sure it would be a paying proposition.

The resolution carried and the Bill based on it received its first reading.

The next resolution provided for the construction of a line from Peebles, on the Canadian Northern Saskatchewan Railway, southerly to a point near Township 10, Range 8, west of the second meridian, Saskatchewan. Twenty miles of this line has already been graded, and the estimated mileage, including existing grading, is 22 miles. The estimated cost is $300,000.

This resolution also went through and a Bill based on it was given first reading.

Near Coal Fields.

Commenting on it, O. R. Gould (Progressive, Assiniboia) said the branch did not go far enough. He wished the Government had seen fit to continue it to the coal fields seven miles further on, where much remunerative traffic would have been picked up.

John Millar (Progressive, Qu'Appelle) referred, in passing, to the opposition of the Liberal member for St. Lawrence-St. George (Mr. Marler) to branch lines in the West.

This brought Mr. Marler to his feet with the declaration that he would always oppose branch lines he did not think were necessary. As a matter of fact he approved of the present line, but he would voice disapproval whenever he felt it. He accused the Progressives of withholding opposition to unnecessary branch lines proposed last week for Eastern Canada because they were afraid they might not be able to get through Western Canada branch lines.

The house next went into committee on the resolution to complete the Gravelbourg extension of the C.N.R. from Mile 109 to Mile 120 at Neidpath, Sask., at an estimated cost of $144,000. The minister said that the grading had been completed in 1920 and it was proposed to lay the steel during the present summer.

Leaves 24 Mile Gap.

A. J. Lewis, (Progressive, Swift Current) said the proposed extension was in his riding. It had been promised in 1918 and sanctioned by Hon. J. D. Reid, Conservative minister of railways and by D. B. Hanna, general manager of the Canadian Northern. The proposed construction, however, left a gap of 24 miles to Swift Current and Mr. Lewis asked the minister whether there would be no further extensions for a period of three years.

Mr. Graham replied that parliament could do so as it desired each year and that the programme for next year would depend upon recommendation by the Canadian National Board.

Mr. Lewis then urged the filling up of the 24 mile gap which, he said, would save a round about haul of 265 miles.

Other Lines Urgent.

Hon. W. R. Motherwell, minister of agriculture to whom Mr. Lewis had appealed for support, said that the 24 mile gap should be filled up as soon as possible. However, there were some other lines which were even more urgent, one of these being in the Shellbrook district and another through the Paradise Hill Country.

The resolution was then carried and the bill to provide for the construction of the line was given first reading.

The house went into committee on the resolution to provide for a line from mile 15 on the Ste. Rose Du Lac extension of the Canadian Northern Railway to mile 37 at Yorketon in the province of Manitoba, a total of 22 miles, the estimated cost being $378,000.

The minister said the land through which the line would pass was devoted to grain growing and mixed farming. All the land was occupied.

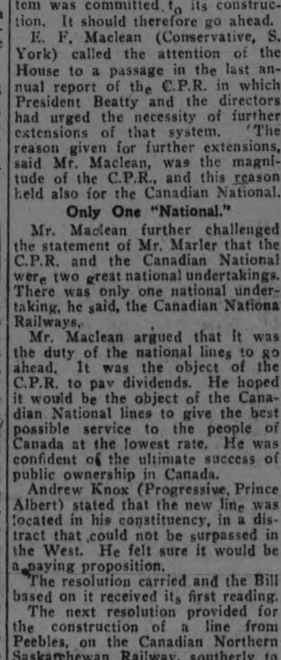
Sir Henry Drayton said the line should have been built last year. It would have been built if the government had given the house a fair opportunity to consider the matter. The resolution was then carried and the bill to provide for the undertaking was given a first reading.

Hanna to Warden.

At the opening of the evening session, Sir Henry Drayton criticized the Government for not having a more uniform policy in regard to the branch lines programme. A resolution providing for a line from Hanna to Warden in Alberta, a distance of 57 miles at an estimated cost of $1,445,000, was carried, and the bill providing for the construction was read a first time.

The House then considered in committee the resolution regarding the construction of a branch line from Loverna, in a westerly direction to Range 9, west of the 4th Meridian in the Province of Alberta, a distance of 50 miles, the estimated cost being $1,192,000.

The Minister of Railways explained that the district through which the line would pass should produce 1,500,000 bushels of grain each season as well as mixed farming products. The farmers were compelled in many cases to make a 16-mile haul in order to get railway transportation.



PETERBOROUGH BOY HEADS LIST

For those who are not conversant with the poultry industry it might be explained that an international egg laying contest is conducted every year by the Department of Agricultural of the Dominion of Canada at the Experimental Farm at Ottawa, open to the world for all friends of poultry. The favorable standing in this contest is looked upon by poultrymen on both sides of the boundary line as the most coveted prize in the poultry industry in Canada. Each contestant puts in a pen of ten birds for a year and weekly records are sent to each contestant.

We are glad to record the fact that Mr. Heber S. Rogers of Beechwood Farm, Douro, heads the list with his white leghorns for the past week (22nd week), being equal with the old established firm of Geo. B. Ferris of Grand Rapids, Mich., U. S., is always one of the largest exhibitors and prize winners at all the large poultry exhibitions in Canada and the United States, and who carry over the winter over eight thousand birds. To be equal with such a celebrated poultry firm is no small honor for a new beginner.

The week previous Mr. Rogers' pen was in the second place with three others, being only two behind the leader for the week, the other three being the Hollywood Poultry Farm, Hollywood, Washington, D. C., who are the leaders to date in this contest; Geo. B. Ferris of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Messrs. Stark & Ruddle of St. Catherines.

In this contest are twenty-two pens from the different Government Experimental Farms in Canada, including the Experimental Farm at Ottawa, the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph; the McDonald College, Quebec; the Manitoba Agricultural Farm, Winnipeg; the Alberta Experimental Farm, Lethbridge; the Ontario Agricultural School, Kempville; the British Columbia University Farm, Vancouver; and also sixty of the largest poultry firms in Canada and the States of Tennesse, Washington, Michigan and New York.

Mr. Rogers is gradually coming towards first place in the contest to date and has increased his lead week by week from 28th place to his present position of 14th place. We wish him every success.

E. J. Garland (Progressive, Bow River) registered a protest against the probable use of Hanna as the terminus for the proposed line. It would miss very valuable country by going in that direction.

Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen said he was compelled to draw conclusions from his own facts rather than from any supplied by the Minister. The district should be able to provide four or five times as much grain as had been suggested in the Minister's memorandum.

More Information.

The Minister declared that a greater amount of information had been given by the Government in regard to these branch lines than the Conservatives gave to the House on their branch line programme in 1920.

Mr. Meighen: "My hon. friend was not in the House."

Mr. Graham: "Hansard shows it. I didnt' want to refer to it, because I want to get the resolutions passed and build the railways." He went on to quote from Hansard of 1920 to show how meagre the information was which the Government gave to the House at that time.

General J. A. Clark (Conservative, Burrard) remarked that if the Liberal opposition in 1920 did not get all necessary information it had not done its duty.

Coming back to the line under discussion, T. H. McConica (Progressive, Battleford) declared it would be "good sensible economy" to construct this branch. It would connect with the coal fields which would furnish a great deal of traffic. He gave his hearty support to the proposal to construct this line.

FOR EASTER'S COMING BRIDE

One of the Newest Gown Ideas Is the Lace Flounce Which Begins Below the Knee.

By HEDDA HOYT.

NEW YORK, April 9.—(United Press).

How doth the busy Easter bride
Improve all days but Sundays?
She flits each hour from shop to shop,
A'-purchasing her undies.

When a girl says, "This is so sudden," to her swans' proposal, it's because she thinks he's giving her pretty short notice for buying her trousseau. Most fellows these days expect a girl to be ready for the altar a month or two after the proposal of marriage. In olden days, two or three years was the usual time allotted for filling the camphor hope chest. Girls today don't bother about hope chests. They hope for a proposal, and when they land one they hop in a taxi and make the shops.

The old theory about wearing "something old, something new, something borrowed and something blue" doesn't get a look-in these days. "Something new" is the only idea that gets across.

This spring offers a glorious selection of new lingerie for the Easter bride. Lingerie sets, including vest, step-ins, nightgowns and negligee, are among the newest of the new. Materials for these vary according to ones' taste, from practical crepe de chenes, radiums and jersey silks to chiffons, satins and georgettes. Lace is the trim preferred for bridal linegrie, and the variety ranges from rose point to valenciennes. Tinted lace trimming white materials is new, and net edging is used considerably. Monograms are not being used on lingerie very much this year, as the bride chooses to forget the initials of her maiden name as soon as possible.

Bride's Lingerie.

White, of course, is the bride's color. She may add pastel-hued rose buds or colored embroidered net by way of trimming, but her garments themselves should be white. Tiny silver rose-buds and leaves are a novel trim that is being sponsored on many bridal models. A lovely negligee of white chiffon over satin has its deep rounding neckline and armholes bordered in silver leaves. From each underarm comes a wide panel of silver lace, which extends the entire length of the gown. A sash of narrow torquise velvet ribbon ties about the low waistline.

Slips of crepe de chene and other materials are made on Princess lines, without suggestion of waistline or fullness over the hips. A flounce of lace or pleated chiffon is sometimes added below the knee.

Nighties.

Vests, step-ins, envelopes and bloomers have not altered greatly as to line, although nightgowns—which, by the way, are preferable to pajamas for the trousseau—come in an assortment of new models.

One of the newest gown ideas is the lace flounce, which begins below the knee. The lace may be repeated in yoke effect at the neck and as a ruffle finish about the armhole. The bertha effect formed by a ruffle of wide lace about the rounding neckline is lovely for the youthful bride. The lace usually extends well over the shoulder. Rounded necklines, finished with lace yokes or with net edging, are more youthful than ribbon shoulder-strap effects.

Bride's Corset.

A few years ago the young girl welcomed her first boned corset as a sign of maturity. Today, however, the boned corset is a style fit only for the fat and aged. The bride's corset is a boneless affair of white satin combined with silk elastic gussets over th ehips ind in the centre back. For the very slender person the corset-brassiere combination is designed. These are straight-lined and are made of heavy satin, with elastic in the rear and over the hips. The side fastening is preferred in thees models. Step-in corsets are also popular with the slender figure. They, are made very much like the corset-brassiere, except that they are made almost entirely of elastic. A model which gives a little more support to the figure buttons in front and laces in back. Two soft bones in front and two in the rear are used on these models. Garters of shirred, white satin attach in front and on the sides.

Man Breaks Into Jail And Gets Five Years.

COALGATE, Okla., April 8.—(United Press).—Five years in the State Penitentiary for breaking into jail was the penalty imposed upon Tommy Wilson. Wilson was discharged from jail after serving a term for disturbing the peace. A few night later he appeared at the jail to renew acquaintances, but found the door locked. Securing a ladder, Wilson pried several bars off a cell window and invited his friends to escape. They declined and told the jailer. Wilson pleaded guilty.

Janet warns Prudence of Virginia's determination to "win" Peter.

Prudence is invited to 'fill in' at a dinner party at Winston Towers.

Prudence surveys herself in the mirror with a pleasurable feeling of excitement as she makes ready for Mrs. Vansittart's dinner.

Mrs. Vansittart discovers that she has been robbed of her diamond earrings and $1,000 in notes. A search reveals them in the fold of Prudence's sash!

CHAPTER XL
Branded

After the first gasp of amazement, a sudden terrible silence fell upon the guests at Winston Towers.

It was a silence much more horrible than any words could be.

Prudence, white-faced and trembling, was the one who broke it.

"I don't understand . . . It's a mistake . . . I never saw the notes before . . nor . . .nor that . . ." she pointed to the diamond earring lying on the floor.

Bert Traymore picked it up, and handed it to the shaking girl without a word.

"It isn't mine! Oh, it isn't mine! You . . you surely cannot think I took it?" She turned piteously, like a fawn at bay, towards Mrs. Vansittart, who seemed paralyzed at the stupendous discovery.

The latter, in her lazy, selfish way, had always liked the young Page girl. Never had she dreamt her capable of ingratitude such as this. A common thief!

That was what came of showing people kindness. What a fool she'd been to give the child free access to her private rooms! Succumbing to temptation, Prudence had stolen the valuable jewels, then hunted the little desk in the boudoir for further booty!

"And her manner did seem queer and strained when I found her standing by the desk," thought the hostess, in a quick flash. "She was preteeding to read a magazine, but now I know what she was doing."

Aloud she said:

"Would you mind giving me the other earring, please?"

Virginia Dale was heard to titter at what she thought the delicious irony of the request. Would Prudence mind, indeed?

But sarcasm was far from Mrs. Vansittart's worried soul. It was terrible to think this young, sweet-faced girl capable of such an act. And maddening to feel that her entire dinner-party had been spoiled!

Such talk as there would be! Mrs. Vansittart didn't object to flattering publicity anent her entertainments and her generosity, but a tale like this about one of her guests . . . a woman, too . . . was hateful to her pride as hostess.

And down in her kindly heart she felt real sorrow for this wretched girl.

Prudence, in a dazed fashion, was groping with her fingers in the inside of her sash.

"I'll give it to you . . . if I can find it," she was stammering, with shaking lips.

Even the most analytical would have found her guilty, with such terror in her eyes, such pallor in her face.

"It's here . . . I haven't the least idea how . . ." She had found the fellow of the glittering stone that now lay in Mrs. Vansittart's reluctant palm. "Take it away. I . . . don't want it. I . . . I didn't take it. I haven't any notion how . . . how . . ."

Virginia Dale drew nearer. A triumphant light was in her shallow eyes, and a cruel little smile hovered about the corners of her carefully reddened lips.

"Must have fallen from the skies," she volunteered to Bertram-Traymore, in a carrying aside. "I only wish diamonds would rain on me! But no such luck!"

"Sh-h!" Bert's face was very serious.

Mrs. Vansittart had taken the second earring without a word. All eyes were on the unfortunate girl who was standing, dumb and termbling, facing them.

"I'm awfully sorry for being such a fool as to . . . to start a search," blundered the red-faced man who had been Prudence's dinner-partner. "I mean to say, I never thought . . . never dreamt . . ."

So he thought her guilty, too! Why . . . horror on horror! . . . all these staring people did! It was unbearable, incredible, impossible!

"I never took the diamonds. I never saw the roll of bills . . . I . . ."

But human nature—sensitive, girlish human nature—couldn't stand it any more. With two hands flung up to her quivering face, Prudence broke into passionate, heart-broken sobs.

Mrs. Vansittart caught her by the arm. A sudden great pity welled up in her worldly heart. The child was poor, and had been overly tempted. What a gross, unthinking blunder it had been, to transplant her from humdrum Green Gables to the notice and attention and flattery of the smart folks at Winston Towers! Small wonder she had given way!

"Don't be afraid, my dear! I shan't say anything about it. You're quite safe. I shan't take any action." The good woman murmured these words into Prudence's ear as she led the girl out of the drawing room into the hall.

"Let me go home," moaned Prudence, like a child that has been hurt. A terrible longing for her mother's comforting presence was on her. "Let me go home."

"That will be best, after what has happened," said Mrs. Vansittart slowly. "You're all unstrung tonight. Tomorrow, perhaps, you will come and see me, and we can talk the matter over." She forced herself to pat the weeping girl on the shoulder, in token of forgiveness. "I understand that you were tempted . . . in a way I was the one to blame, and not you, for leaving the things lying there—"

Prudence wheeled around on her, eyes suddenly flashing behind the tears.

"You mean, in spite of what I've said, you do think I stole your earrings and the money?" A fighting note, the sharp desire to vindicate her honor, gave a keen edge to the challenge.

Mrs. Vansittart stiffened. It was one thing to pity and forgive this forlorn child, and quite another thing to be called abruptly to task for it.

"If you can offer any reasonable explanation, I shall listen," she said, "But at present I have no other alternative than to think you took my propetry."

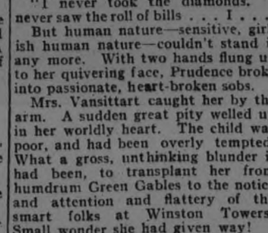
MAKING MONEY MAKE MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.



Keeping track of your investment pays.

"I heard that Blank & Company are going to pay dividends," remarked a man on the train, "Seems to me I have some of that stock. I'd better look it up. We've moved twice since I was in touch with them and I have not notified them of my new address."

No stock is so good that it should be laid aside and forgotten. Nor is much stock so worthless that it might not come to life.

All investments should be checked up periodically:

1. To make sure that all money due is paid.

2. To take advantage of a profitable sale.

Sometimes a good market develops much unexpectedly. If the owner of the stock is on the job he can take advantage of such an opportunity for profit. But if the sale is not made at just the right minute, the profit may be entirely lost.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—When one gives a piece of advice to another it is presumed that he has a genuine interest in that other's welfare. I am a great believer in good health. I believe that the happiness of the race is dependent upon its good health as upon scarcely anything else; and so I am an enthusiast for everything that makes for good health. I am delighted, for example, at the good work the Social Council of Hygiene did recently in Peterboro. I believe in one of the slogans of that Council, namely, "the right of every child to be well born." That is a duty which the State owes ro every unborn child. I believe, also, in the right of every child to good food, to a healthy environment, to schools, and everything else that helps to assure his happiness when he grows up to be a man. Just as I believe, on humanitarian grounds, and, of course, on other grounds, that it is a duty of the State to see that no one robs the child of his right to be well and healthily born, so I believe it is the duty of the State to protect the child as he grows up, and also when he comes a man, from all that would impair his health and so rob him of the highest happiness, or prevent him from being the highest happiness to others. That is the reason why I believe a State, which has wise men at its head, should see that the use of alcohol, as a beverage, which is so well known to be injurious to the health of the subjects of the State, should be prohibited. It surely is no interference with one's personal liberties to keep away from one a something which he has never tasted, and which wise men inform him would be only detrimental to his health, were he to take it. I can well imagine that there might be a wonderful fruit, growing on another planet, which would possess the properties of giving immortality to the people of this planet, or a wonderful fruit which would be a sure antidote to many of the maladies from which our race here suffers, and yet no one would ever think of charging the Creator with interference with the personal liberties of His creatures upon the earth because He has put these wonderful fruits out of their reach. The same law of reasoning is one justification, at least, of the State prohibiting the use of alcohol as a beverage. In this case the State puts a death-dealing substance out of the reach of its subjects. And the State interferes with no one's liberties when it does so. A mother does not interfere with the highest development of a child's nature, with its true liberties, when she puts a razor out of its reach. Of course, the force of this argument implies that it has been shown by experiments carried on by modern scientists that alcohol is hurtful. This has been demonstrated to be true after prolonged investigation by scientific men. That being so, I believe in prohibiting the use of alcohol as a beverage for the same reason that I believe in putting razors out of the reach of children.

SEASON OPENS FOR BUILDING

First Week of April Gives Promise of Good Season--21 Permits for $19,062.

Building permits issued during the first seven working days of this month total $19,062 and number 21, indicating a revival of the building trade in Peterborough and holding out prospects of a steady programme for this year. While men who may be considered authorities on the subject hold out no hope for a boom, they confidently expect that 1924 will see a considerable amount of building done. Indeed, if half of the houses planned are built the year will be good, and some of those that were mere rumors a week ago are already under way. In April last year there were only 45 permits taken out in the entire month, and the value of the building done was just three times the total of the seven days referred to this month.

Among the big contracts to be undertaken is the erection of new sheds for the Canadian National Railway, which will occupy the property now taken up by the Mather storehouse.

In anticipation of the improvement this building will give to the Aylmer Street corner, the south-west corner will be built on this summer, rumor says, and other improvements made in this neighborhood.

Reg. H. Turner has taken out a permit covering two dwellings to be erected by October 1 on Hunter street at an estimated cost of $10,000 and W. J. Koster will expend $3,000 on a dwelling at the corner of Gilmour street and Monaghan road. S. Goulet plans an addition to a dwelling at 500 Gilmour street, costing $3,000; Miss A. Halliday will transform a house at 457 Water street into a duplex at a cost of $800; and A. O. Kidd will move and repair a house at 294 Aylmer street at a cost of $500.

Six garages, ranging in price from $30 to $150 are planned by J. A. Foster, 585 Patterson street; Robert S. Wright, 495 Albert street; M. Rosenburgh, 310 Elias avenue; W. J. Koster, Gilmour street; B. Crowley, 788 Water street; and Mrs. James Moore 257 Stewart street.

PATROLMAN SHOT BY A COMPANION

DETROIT, April 9.—(Canadian Press).—Harrington Griffin, patrolman in Hamtramck was shot and killed yesterday by another officer William Laster who himself is perhaps fatally wounded by a shot fired by Griffin as he dropped to the pavement in Yeman's street.

According to the story told by Laster, he had offered to see that Griffin reached his home safely. Griffin was off duty and in plain clothes and according to Laster was very drunk and hardly able to walk. Griffin resented the offer and drew his gun. He fired one bullet which hit Laster in the stomach. Laster dodged behind a parked truck, drawing his own weapon. Shooting from cover, he fired and Griffin dropped, mortally wounded. Attendants at the hospital to which Laster was taken, said they had little hope for his recovery.

FORKE ADVOCATES LOW TARIFF FOR RELIEF OF WESTERN PRODUCERS

Must Find Foreign Market For Products, Says the Progressive Leader — Protective Tariff Imposes Increased Prices on These Producers — Addressed the Montreal Board of Trade.

SPOKE AS WESTERNER

MONTREAL, April 9.—Addressing the local Board of Trade yesterday, Robert Forke, M.P., Parliamentary leader of the Progressive party, stated frankly that while the grain growers of the prairie provinces wanted to work with rest of province for the continued welfare of the Dominion, they wished also to wipe all idea of protection out of the tariff which, if it were to be continued at all, should only be a tariff for revenue. His other main topic was the Hudson Bay railway and the development of Port Nelson. He did not personally commit himself on this, but stated that the people of the western provinces wanted the Hudson Bay railway, with or without Port Nelson, and were determined that it should be completed to the shores of the bay. Mr. Forke said he preferred to address the Board of Trade, not as leader of the Progressives, but as a western Canadian

Debts Piled Up

The great gap from North Bay almost to Winnipeg was, he said, the greatest political fact in Canada. Our problem was to bridge this wilderness that separated east from west The traegdy of the west was, Mr. Forke declared, that debts had been recklessly piled up there when wheat was $2.50 a bushel. Now the west was trying to pay off these debts with 80 cent wheat. In the meantime the Saskatchewan farmer raised 400,000,000 bushels of wheat and innumerable cattle last year for all of which he had to find a market outside of Canada.

Mr. Forke asked what the home market was going to do for the man or country producing vast amouns of wheat and cattle for export and which must be sold on the markets of the world. The crux of tariff question was, he claimed the question of exports— wheat, flour and livestock —the bulk of Canada's foreign trade which was produced between Winnipeg and the Rockies Their producers all had to pay an increased price on everything they have to buy owing to the protective tariff.

Adopt Compromise

This was the problem he had to meet and overcome as a member of Parliament and it could only be solved by sensible man getting together from all over Canada and adopting a general system of compromise. The position was in his opinion that the customs tariff was giving one industry an advantage at the expense of another industry, and "our industry has no chance of getting any protection." On the one side there was over-production and on the other inability to purchase, he charged.

Railway Extensions

With regard to transportation and the branch lines in the west, Mr. Forke said the Senate might have been justified in throwing out bill last year, as it was improperly presented at the end of the session, although their action had created great indignation in the west. But to-day he strongly advocated the western branch lines, even though Canada were over-railroaded and though we had to meet annual railway deficits.

On the Hudson Bay Railway project, he though that a scheme on which $26,000,000 had already been spent and of which three hundred miles out of 390 had been built could not be laughed out of court. He declared that the west were in dead earnest in demanding this line.

Accord With U.S.A. MacDonald's Wish

BRIGHTON, England, April 9 (Canadian Press). — The Rev. Rhondda Williams, prominent Free Churchman, who is sailing for America shortly to deliver a number of addresses, has received the following letter from Prime Minister MacDonald:

"I am very glad to take the opportunity of your visit to America to commission you to assure your audiences that nothing would please the Labour Party more than that, when it leaves office, it will have drawn the American people closer to the British people, not for the purpose of sharing in the wealth of the world, but as partners in establishing peace and goodwill on earth and teaching men by experience that the moral categories are more powerful in governing than their more pushing mundane rivals.

"I hope that you will have a good time, and that as a result of your interpretation of us, America will both understand and like us better."

SQUIRES WILL BE PROSECUTED

Intimation in Newfoundland Paper With the Announcement of Enquiry Into Disposition of Missing $200,000.

ST. JOHN'S, N.F., April 9 (Canadian Press). — The disposition of over two hundred thousand dollars, the amount by which the accounts of the Controller's Department is short, will be the subject of investigation by the Newfoundland Government as soon as a Commissioner can be secured.

Such was the announcement made yesterday afternoon in The Evening Advocate, the organ of the Warren Government.

The Advocate also intimates that the Department of Justice has decided to prosecute "all those implicated under the recent report and many persons shown by any subsequent report who ought to be put on trial."

This annonucement is taken here as meaning that Sir Richard Squires, former Premier, is to be prosecuted on the basis of the finding made against him in the report of T. Hollis Walker, the Royal Commissioner, who recently investigated conditions here.

SPEAKER LEMIEUX DISCOVERS SCROLL

OTTAWA, April 9. — (Canadian Press). — The House of Commons yesterday made a discovery. It found "the scroll."

"I never heard of this scroll," declared Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, when Speaker Lemieux produced the mysterious document.

"Where can members see this scroll?" echoed Hon. Jacques Bureau, Minister of Customs, curiously.

The discovery was made when Mr. Bureau protested that the votes and proceedings of the House, published yesterday, did not record the fact that the estimates of his Department had been taken up before adjournment Monday night. If the votes and proceedings were regarded as the official record of the House, he could not bring his estimates up for consideration Thursday, should he so desire.

Mr. Meighen insisted that the votes and proceedings were the official record—and it was then that Speaker Lemieux produced the scroll. The scroll, it seemed, was the record on which the votes and proceedings were based, and it bore out Mr. Bureau's statement about estimates of his Department having been considered.

Heavy Harvest of Seals By Newfoundland Men.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., April 9. — (Canadian Press).—During the last few days conditions at the ice fields of the eastern coast of Newfoundland have greatly improved, and the several sealing steamers are now reported as having secured catches aggregating one hundred and thirty thousand seals. Landsmen in the vicinity of White Bay have got forty thousand seals ashore so that the total value of the present sealing voyage to Newfoundland will be at least three hundred thousand dollars, which makes the seal hunt of this year a profitable venture.

Cobourg and District

COBOURG, April 8.—Last night Bishop Sweeney confirmed a large class at St. Peter's Church, of which Rev. Canon Sawers is Rector. There was a large congregation present. Rev. Canon Sawers preached in the morning.

The Salvation Army

At the Salvation Army, Captain and Mrs. Margatroyd, officers in charge, Brigadier and Mrs. Moore, of Toronto, assisted in the services, which were of an especially interesting character. There was a special service Saturday evening at 8 p.m. and three services on Sunday.

The Other Churches

The pastors of the other churches took charge of the regular services yesterday. Rev. R. F. Stillman preached good sermons at the Methodist Church. A special missionary offering is being taken at this church. It is suggested that every member tithe his income for the first week in April.

Rev. James W. Pedley preached excellent sermons at the Congregational Church. The congregation of this church is indeed sorry that Mr. Pedley will be leaving them in June as he has been appointed chaplain of the Canadian bowling team that is going to England to make a tour of the Old Country and match their skill in rolling bowls with the teams of that land. Mr. Pedley is a great lover of the game and a skilful player

St. Andrew's

At the close of the evening service at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Mr. W. Duncan, organist, gave a much-enjoyed organ recital, taking his themes from the composer, Mendelsohn The pastor, Rev. Rev. J. N. Norton preached at both services in the Baptist Church, speaking in the morning on "The Eternal Lamb," and in the evening taking for his subject, "The Proper Place of the Word 'If.'" An orchestra has just been organized in connection with the Sunday School of this church, which is giving good service at the services, and adding materially to their success and interest. Some ten or twelve delegates are also leaving this week to attend the special gathering in Toronto in connection with the missionary work in India of the Canadian Baptist Church.

Gone Up To Toronto

Rev. and Mrs. W. R. McWilliams, who are supported by the Campbellford and Brighton district Young People's Leagues and Sunday Schools, with their two little children, have gone up to Toronto, where they will spend several weeks. Rev. and Mrs. McWilliams have been residing in Grafton during the winter months so as to be near Mrs. McWilliams' people, she being a daughter of Mr. W. Winter. They came home from Japan last summer on their first furlough.

Inter-church Debates

A form of religious activities that is proving quite popular has been carried on by the young people of the Port Hope Churches in the way of inter-church debates. A few nights ago the Methodist Tuxis Square and the boys of the Baptist Church, debated the question, "Resolved, that it would be to the best interests of Canada to go ahead with the St. Lawrence waterways scheme in conjunction with the United States." The Baptist boys, who supported the negative, won out. Now, it is understood, the winners will challenge the Presbyterians to a debate some time this month.

BRITISH BRONZE IN CANADA FOR BOAT PROPELLERS

OWEN SOUND, March 31.—A shipment of manganese bronze ingots from Great Britain recently arrived here which is to be made into propellers for motor boats in this country.

It is understood that propellers made from this bronze are superior to any kind ever available to Canadian motor boat builders and owners in the past.

Wm. Kennedy & Sons Limited, have secured the sole right for the use of this material for propellers in this country, and they are to be congratulated for making it possible for Canadian motor boat owners to secure so fine a product.

This manganese bronze is used almost entirely throughout the British Navy on all classes of vessels, because of its strength and the high polish it permits.

"JACKASS" WON FOR LABORITE

Retort to Unionist's "Parrot" Called Down Speaker's Decision In Exchange of Epithets.

LONDON, April 9. — (Canadian Press).—There was an amusing incident yesterday during the debate in the House of Commons on the second reading of the Unemployment Insurance Bill which extends the period for which unemployed benefit may be paid this year at an estimated additional cost of between £2,000,000 and £2,250,000 to be met out of the unemployment fund.

While Lord Ednam was speaking C. D. Hardie, the Glasgow Labor member, shouted several interjections across the House. A Unionist member made some retort which was inaudible in the press gallery, whereupon Will Thorne (Labor) asked the Speaker whether it was in order for an honorable member to call another honorable member a parrot.

Hardie: "Never mind; the man who said it is only a jackass."

Mr. Speaker: "I won't have these epithets."

Hardie: "Well, let him take it back."

The Speaker said he treated all members the same way. Members on the Labor benches really had been interrupting considerably.

Eventually the bill was given a second reading.

Swollen Rivers Invade Russian Battlefields.

WARSAW, April 9 (Canadian Press). — The towns of Brest, known in connection with the Russo-German Treaty of Brest-Litovsk, and Terespol, together with surrounding districts, have been completely submerged by the flood waters from the Rivers Bug and Muchowietz.

It is virtually impossible to send aid into the flooded region, and the inhabitants are seeking shelter on the roofs of the higher houses for themselves and their live stock.

Many lives are reported to have been lost.

No estimate of the damage has been made, but it is believed to be very large.

The Examiner's Bible Distribution

Following the most distressing period of unrest the world has ever known, comes a world-wide revival of Bible reading, which must tend to ameliorate the unrestful conditions of mankind. To encourage such an end, leading newspapers throughout this country have joined forces to promote the distribution of the great Book of Books, and have adopted a plan that should readily place the Bible in the hands of every reader. Two exclusive editions have been chosen for this purpose—first, the famous large print Red Letter Bible, illustrated herein, and a beautiful plain print, medium large type edition that will be distributed for a nominal sum.

The Question of the Universe

This Bible - this miraculous Bible—this Book of All Books—luminous with the light that dwelleth not on land or sea—this noblest and most beautiful Thing in all the world—what is it—whence cometh it—what means it.

It has made and unmade Nations. It has uprooted Kingdoms and Empires. It has diverted the mighty tides of History. It has crumpled ancient Faiths and Superstitions. The antique Systems of India and the Far East have bowed their heads to its enlightened sway.

China and the Orient now first awaken from their sleep of thrice a thousand years, and follow their sister nations of the Occident — whose feet are guided by one sole lamp—the sacred flame of which was kindled by the inspired Hebrew Prophets, and fed for all time by the Lord and Master of the Golden Rule.

Only ignorance scoffs at the Bible! The greatest rulers—the greatest statesmen—the greatest scholars—writers — orators—scientists—soldiers—and the untold millions of the Common People, whose collective genius outweighs them all—have thrilled to its Divine Wisdom.

Its lyrics of unfathomable tenderness — its orations of compelling potency—its contemplative prose of preternatural grandeur—have never been equalled. Its emotional depths and its intellectual heights make it the one and only Book of Books, vouchsafed for the guidance of mankind throughout the ages.

"SOMETHING ABOUT A MAN"

(By F. M. Dela Fosse)

I once knew a man whom I regarded as one of the most extraordinary characters I had ever had the privilege of meeting. He was of such strange calibre that, although he had taken the gold-cure four separate times for delirium tremens, he could resist the taste for liquor for two years at a time, and then just for the pure frolic of the thing start again on a prolonged carouse.

When I knew him he was about fifty-five years old, a civil engineer by profession. He had started life in the Royal Engineers and had been with Gordon in China. From other sources than himself I learnt that he had held the reputation of being the hardest drinker in the British Army, and after seeing him once in action I could well believe it.

It was at Port Arthur that I first came across this gentleman, the occasion being the forming of a party to survey mining lots in the neighbourhood of the Rabbit Mountain Silver Mine. The chief, and Smith, to give him a wrong designation, and I, tented together, and it was through this close companionship in the woods that I learnt the history of this very strange and very lovable individual.

He came of a titled family, but preferred not to talk about them as he had cast himself adrift years before and seemed to be anxious to remain in oblivion. As a matter of fact, he had made a complete hash of his life by marrying several degrees out of his element, and the only time that he really felt passably happy was when he was away from civilization and breathing the heaven-sent air of the woods and the open spaces. One beautiful evening, after having pitched our tents for the night on the banks of the Whitefish River, we were seated round a smudge, smoking our pipes and varying the monotony by anathematizing the mosquitoes which were circling in battalions about our heads. Whoever has roamed the woods in that region will realize that in the fly season life is not altogether to be regarded as a foretaste of Paradise. But we had, in a measure, made ourselves immune to the onslaughts of insects by liberal applications of a horrible mixture of tar and pork fat applied to our faces and hands, and by the aid of the smudge and constant smoking were able to imagine that we were having a fairly easy and pleasant time. On this particular occasion Smith, in the midst of an inspiring silence, suddenly developed a loquacious vein, and gave us the story of his career. We have many books of travel and adventure in our library, but it is very doubtful if the writers of any of them could surpass in interest the details of such a life as Smith presented to us. Of his career in the army he said little, beyond expressing an unbounded admiration for General Gordon, who, he told us, used to lead his Chinese cohorts into battle armed with no other weapon than a slight walking-stick, and of a drinking bout with a certain major to determine who should have the honor of possessing the hardest head in the division. "I had the proud honor of seeing my opponent sink peacefully to the floor and of finishing up the bottles that he had been unable to empty," he modestly remarked. When he began to speak of his adventures in the field of exploration he was intensely interesting, so much so that although many years have elapsed since I saw him, I can still hear his voice, a voice as soft and gentle as a woman's, whilst his figure stands vividly before me—the figure of a medium-sized spare man, with a face like the face of an ascetic, and a frame compacted of whalebone and leather. He told us many things, several of which have passed into the limbo of forgetfulness, but two or three stand out very prominently. Once, when engaged in a survey in the vicinity of James Bay a landslide occurred and carried away every man of the party but himself to destruction and he made the long trek back to civilization unaided and alone. On another occasion he and his faithful dog made their way to Red Rock, and in attempting to return to the mainland on the floating ice, although Smith managed to get across safely, his dog was drowned. He told of fights in the woods and searches for lost comrades, and of living on starvation diet, and of being overturned in Lake Superior in a canoe when, although the other occupants of the craft were drowned, he was able, through superior swimming powers, to reach a small rock, which, as soon as he landed on it, he found to be simply infested with a wriggling, writhing mass of horrible-looking snakes. Luckily the men in the other canoe, who were ahead, had looked back to see if his own canoe was following, and paddled back to take him on board. Whoever has plunged into Lake Superior, even in the middle of summer, will know that its temperature is nothing to brag about in the way of warmth, and that the strongest heart cannot stand its intense cold for many minutes.

The time came when our roads in life diverged, and at least twenty-five years passed by before a circumstance arose that brought my old-time comrade to my mind again. Some fifteen years ago I happened to take up a copy of the Globe and lit upon an item concerning him. To make a long story short, he had not even then, although close on eighty years of age, given up his love for ranging the woods, and in accompanying a survey party on an expedition had been lost in the wilds. The party did their best to find him, but their efforts were unavailing, and they returned to Port Arthur in the firm belief that Smith, without food or covering and carrying the weight of his eighty years, would succumb in short order to the grim reaper. But they did not know the determination or the wonderful amount of vitality that that gentleman possessed. More than three weeks afterwards another notice appeared in the paper to the effect that a search party had at last found him, not dead, but very much alive. His sole subsistence during the time of his wanderings had been the berries that he had been enabled to pick off the bushes, and his sole drink the beverage that in the old days he had liked least of any. If he is living yet he is close to one hundred years of age, and if chance should lead to his hearing of this short account of himself he will perhaps remember the youth who used to accompany him on his surveys.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

THE FIERCE BEAR

"I'm going to eat you all up," came the fierce voice.

"I'm going to eat you all up," came the great big fierce voice again.

"Oh, please don't!" begged the duck, snapping her wooden bill up and down like scissors. "I-I never did anything to you, Mister Bear, did I?"

"No, ma'am,' 'growled the bear, "You never did a thing to me, but that's no reason why I shouldn't eat you. I like ducks awfully and I'm hungry."

"Well, if you eat the duck first," whined the red rubber dog, "You won't be so hungry. Mister Bear. Perhaps you could wait until tomorrow to eat me."

"No, I couldn't," growled the bears' voice. (Nobody could see the bear, they could just hear him). "Nobody else waits when there is food around, so why should I?"

"Oh, good, kind, lovely Mister Bear!" wheedled the black patent leather cat, "Surely by the time you have eaten the duck and the dog you will be so full you won't want me. I am as old and tough as all get out, and I'm sure you would break your teeth."

"Oh, go on!' growled the bear. "Im not good, kind lovely Mister Bear at all. I'm a great big fierce, ugly bear and I'm going to eat you all up. Grrr! Grrr!"

"But we never did anything to hurt you, Mister Bear,' 'pleaded the three.

"As though that made any difference!" scoffed the bear. "As though it did. Whats' sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander, and if you can do the things you do, I guess I can, too."

"Why, what do you mean, Mister Bear?" cried all three. "We never did a thing."

"Ho! ho! ha! ha! Hear, hear!" cried the bear. "Never did anything! My, but you have short memories! Why, the tin mouse is so afraid of you, old pussy cat, that he has nearly shivered his springs out; and the napkin rabbit is so scared about you, old poodle dog, that he come untied every time you're near him and has to be rolled up and tied all over again; and the puffy cotton frog is worn to a thin shadow with worry for fear you eat him, Mister Yellow Duck! Will you tell me why I shouldnt' eat you? They never hurt you either."

Mister Fuzz Wuzz and Nancy and Nick stepped out then.

"If you three promise never, never to hur the mouse and the rabbit and the frog again," said Mister Fuzz Wuzz, "I'll chase the bear away."

"We promise!" they yelled so loudly you could have heard them in China.

"Then you go away, bad Mister Bear!" shouted the little man. "You cant' eat these people. They are going to be good."

Away sneaked the nice kind little Teddy Bear, laughing and laughing. He had had a good time pretending he was so fierce 'n all.

The Twins had a good laugh, too.

"Isn't Mister Fuzz Wuzz smart!" declared Nick admiringly.

YOUR GARDEN

PROMOTING GROWTH

Choose a position full in the sunlight for growing chrysanthemums in your garden.

They are a plant requiring careful and painstaking care to bring them into the lavish bloom for which they are justly celebrated.

When new garden chrysanthemums are received from the nursery as small pot-grown developed cuttings, plant them in soil lavishly enriched with well-decayed manure.

The chrysanthemum is a prodigious feeder on organic matter and needs great quantities of food for proper nurture.

Probably the best manner of planting is to work a shovelful of manure into the spot where each plant is to be set.

Failure to overemphasize the need of sufficient manure and moisture in growing chrysanthemums may lead to failure. Don't neglect this most important feature in cultivation of the species.

If you would have straight and well-developed plants, remove the growing tip to induce branching. It is a good thing to pinch out the top of the shoot after three or four pairs of leaves have formed.

Too much importance cannot be attached to stopping early branching, which should be completed before the middle of July, however. Unless this is done, the plants will develop into great sprawling bushes, yielding poor blooms and crooked stalks for cutting.

After the last stopping of branches has been made, give your chrysanthemums an extra feeding of diluted liquid fertilizer in alternate forms of nitrate of soda, sulphate of ammonia or manure.

This extra feeding should be applied once a week before the soil is watered for the day.

Thoroughly hoe the ground about the plants to insure a thick mulch. Stop extra feedings by the time color starts showing in the buds.

It is a good plan to drive stakes close to the plants after they have started to come up to insure erect flowering shoots.

Should you desire but one single and great flower to a plant, disbud all but one flower while growing.

But in general garden practice, where plants are especially desired for decorative purposes, it is best to let all the flowers mature into what florists call "sprays of bloom."

Although chrysanthemums, except the pink and white varieties, are quite frost hardy, exposure to the cold of late-blooming plants should be guarded against by some sort of temporary shelter erected over the plants.

Most commonly, a frame is built over the bed on which hotbed sash can be laid and the side covered with burlap or similar material.

It is best, though, to have cloth sides on the shelter. Roll these up during the day.

Small collections of plants may be grown in pots and kept in the open until danger of frost occurs, after which they should be set in a specially reserved coldframe, with the sash roof raised high enough on corner supports to clear the chrysanthemums.

TOMORROW: Backyard beauties.

FABLES ON HEALTH

It was the custom of Mr. Mann of Anytown to walk along with his eyes fastened upon the street, his head and neck bent in meditation.

One day he accidentally came upon his physical director.

"What do you think the sky is for?" asked the P.D.

"Don't be silly," said Mr. Mann.

"I'm not. You think it's a place for the stars to live in and rain to come from. Well, it is. But you'd be better off if you took to sky-gazing once in a while. So would other people.

"Looking up at the sky suggests getting your head erect, and it necessitate sticking your chest out a bit. And there's where the value lies.

"Most people don't know why we ask them to put their chests out. It isn't just to have a bulging chest like the men in the health ads; it's to get the internal organs lifted and strengthen the muscles that hold them.

"Your lungs dont' want to live in a crowded apartment, any more than you do; that gives the heart more room and then the liver is lifted a little and the abdomen contracts and helps get the intestines out of a tangle.

"The first thing you know you're feeling better and you don't know why.

"Get the chest-out-and-head-up habit, old boy, not for the handsome looks but to give your organs as decent a place to live in as you demand!"

FIRST GRASS FIRE OF SEASON RECORDED HERE

Grass fires in the city have started already. Yesterday afternoon the fire department answered their first 1924 call for a grass fire at thirteen minutes past four to 22 Benson Street, where a grass fire was making good progress. The fire had a good start before the men arrived, but they soon succeeded in extinguishing it before any damage was done.

They were also called out to a chimney fire at 522 Chamberlen Street at 1.25. Chemicals were used and no damage was done.

Floating Specks Before The Eyes Means Liver Trouble

When specks start to float before the eyes, when everything seems to turn black for a few seconds and you feel as if you were going to faint, you can rest assured that your liver is not working properly.

The essential thing to do in all cases where the liver is slow, lazy or torpid, is to stir it up by the use of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and clear away the accumulated mass of waste and poisonous matter from the system.

Mr. Chas. Ayland, Frankville, Ont., writes:—"I used to be awfully bothered with floating specks before my eyes, headaches and sickness to my stomach. I took just half a vial of your Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and ever since I have felt as well as I ever did. Now I always keep them on hand."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A wholly new method of manufacturing rubber goods, whereby the solid content of the rubber milk is converted into chemically as well as physically pure rubber, has been developed.

YOUR HEALTH

DR. CLIFFORD ROBINSON

In the good old days the home medicine cabinet was a stranger in most homes. The large glass camphor bottle usually occupied one end of the mantel shelf and bottle of Arabian Balsam or some other liniment adorned the other end.

The remainder of the family medicine outfit was tucked away in one corner of a pantry shelf or carefully secreted where it might be found, if one hunted long enough or wanted it badly enough for immediate use.

To-day all is different. If it isn't, it ought to be. Your family ills and ailments, cuts, bruises, and burns may be well looked after and successfully "bound up" for speedy recovery, if you value your health and happiness as you should.

In country or city, to-day, the handy medicine cabinet is one of the healthful signs of keeping fit for life's battle.

It is as essential that one should know where to find the iodine bottle or small roll of gauze bandage as quickly as possible as it is to know the police call or the doctor's telephone number. These compact steel or wood cabinets may be obtained to-day at a very moderate cost, if one is not built into the home. Get one as soon as you can, if this most useful and necessary health aid is not already a part of your life assets.

A modest outfit should consist of the following essential aids and simple instruments.

A small pair of sharp scissors, a medicine glass (marked with the correct liquid measurements), a glass spoon (small), and a clincal thermometer for taking temperatures.

A small roll of adhesive plaster (beware of the pink and black kind in open envelopes). A small roll of absorbent cotton for placing on the simple wounds. One or two rolls of bandages one inch and two inches in width.

A small (half-ounce) bottle of iodine, for cuts and wounds. A collapsible tube of plain petrolatum, or small bottle of same.

A small bottle of alcohol. A small bottle of flexible collodion.

A small bottle of boric acid for eyes and washes. A small bottle of aromatic spirits of ammonia.

A jar of boric acid or zinc oxide ointment is most useful.

Don't fill up your cabinet with a lot of useless truck. Have only the things that are used and earn their keep.

SOFT BRUSH.

A cloth is not nearly so good for cleaning corners, baseboards and window sills as a soft brush is.

THE PERIL OF NARCOTICS

(By Captain Richmond P. Hobson)

HISTORY OF THE PERIL

Humanity has entered suddenly a new environment of peril—the peril of narcotic addition.

Already, so quickly that we scarcely can realize what has happened, habit-forming drugs mean terror and suffering for millions, with America leading the world in consumption of opium, morphine, cocaine and heroin.

For other perils—venomous reptiles, poisonous plants, wild beasts, storm and flood—the race, in the slow process of evolutionary experience, has found its defenses, based on acquired knowledge of the thing to be feared.

For this new peril there is no precedent in racial experience. Its suddenness has found mankind unprepared to meet or combat it.

Modern chemistry, largely responsible, as yet offers no sure defense against the Frankenstein of its own creation. In its effort to alleviate human suffering, science has increased the sum total of human misery, and has lent itself to the merciless exploitation of the race.

About 100 years ago a chemist discovered how to produce morphine from opium. Then the menace extended to Europe, whose tradees had exploited opium in Asia to the great degradation and misery of the Asiatics.

About 50 years ago another chemist produced cocaine. This increased the menace and extended the scope of exploitation for addiction purposes.

In 1898 a chemist discovered heroin, another child of opium, and four times as powerful as morphine. Then the present stage of the menace, now a pressing peril, began.

In 1909, heroin appeared in America in the practice of medicine. At first it was believed to be habit-forming. The medical profession after a time outlawed its use. It is no longer recognized as a legitimate drug in medical practice.

Soon, however, heroin was recognized as more capable of commercial exploitation than any other narcotic. The great expansion of narcotic addiction in America, given impetus by heroin, dates from about 1910. This expansion continues almost unchecked, in spite of legal restraint and efforts at salvage of victims.

European chemists have discovered how to manufacture narcotics from coal-tar. New drugs are anticipated more powerful than those now used with such deadly results.

CHILDREN'S AID HELD A MEETING

Decide to Change the Source of the Milk Supply—Several Donations

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Management of the Children's Aid Society was held yesterday afternoon in the board room of the Chamber of Commerce, with a good attendance. The president, B. F. Ackerman, occupied the chair. The following members were present: Mesdames Gibbs, Devey, Welsh Holmes, Kimberley, Hodgson, Knox, and Miss G. Brooks; Messrs. J. Edgar, G. W. Powell, R. H. Parsons, W Stocker, F. L. Dobbin, J. Abraham, Mayor J. J. Turner, Adjt. A. Smith, and Dr. E. H. Wood.

The society transacted the usual business and after considerable discussion, and determined opposition by several of the ladies who thought that such a decision should not be made in the absence of several of the working members of the Board, decided to transfer its business in milk from a private concern to the Peterboro Milk Products Company.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read by the secretary, J. Edgar, and the report of the purchasing committee by Mrs. W. H. Gibbs.

A suggestion was made by Mr. Stocker that the board purchase a large quantity of butter when the prices are lowest, and put it in cold storage for use throughout the year.

Milk Report.

Mr. Edgar asked for a report from Dr. Wood on samples of pasteurized and unpasteurized milk, as requested at a previous meeting of the board. Dr. Wood read a report made at the Peterboro laboratory of the Provncial Board of Health, from samples of pasteurized and unpasteurized milk submitted for analysis.

Sample Number One, the pasteurized brand, showed specific gravity, 10.33, with the same numerals in No. Two, the unpasteurized sample. The butter fat in No. 1 showed as 3.3; in No. 2, 3.6. Solids in No. 1 were 12.60, in No 2, 12.70. These differences were infinitesimal, but there was a big spread in the comparison of official bacteria count, No. 1 showing 5,000, and No. 2, 90,000.

Dr. Wood pointed out that in food values the two samples were equally good, whereas in the bacterial content there was a big difference in favor of the pasteurized product.

Mr. Stocker remarked that the report proved that pasteurized milk was safe milk, and Mr. Edgar thought that it showed conclusively that the Shelter should be using the pasteurized product, and moved that a change be made from the present milk dealer to the Peterboro Milk Products Company. Mrs. F. Hodgson seconded the motion.

Mrs. Gibbs spoke with conviction against the motion, saying that the matron at the Shelter was strongly opposed to going back to pasteurized milk, which had proved unsatisfactory on a previous trial, with dilatory delivery, and annovance from thickening, and also said that the children at the Shelter disliked the pasteurized product very much. Another lady member was of the opinion that the childrens' wishes in the matter should not be consulted.

Mrs. J. Welsh also considered it best to leave matters as they are at present, and spoke of the generosity of the present milk dealer in turning in several quarts daily of his surplus milk to the Shelter, free of charge.

Mrs. J. Knox said that workers on the Mothers' Allowance Commission were instructed by regulation to advocate pasteurized milk in the homes whenever possible.

Rev. P. Costello asked if disease traceable to unpasteurized milk, had ever broken out in the Shelter, and the ladies gave a decided answer. He also asked Dr. Wood if the danger from tuberculosis was greater in milk containing 85,000 or more bacteria?

Dr. Wood said that the concensus of medical opinion agrees that bovine tuberculosis is transmitted to children, if not to adults, through milk, and that pasteurization kills the bovine tubercle in the milk. Recently some discussion has arisen over the matter, and several American authorities have questioned this opinion. The doctor said that in hospitals where a great many cases of infantile tubercular cases had formerly been reported, that the use of pasteurized milk in the homes had caused such numbers to drop considerably, so that cases of infantile tuberculosis were now a rarity, rather than a common occurrence, in such hospitals. He said that the 90,000 bacteria in the sample of unpasteurized milk might contain no bovine tubercles whatever, but a recent assertion that there was only one accredited herd in Peterboro County, left the issue in doubt.

An amendment was made to the motion, moved by Mrs. J. Welsh and seconded by Mrs. F. J. Devey, to leave the matter of milk supply for the Shelter as it now stands.

The original motion was put to the board, to change the patronage of the Shelter to the Peterboro Milk Products Company, and carried with a count of nine voting for the motion, and five ladies voting against it.

Agent's Report.

Mr. G. W. Powell reported applications for children during the month, 9; children brought in, 5; wards placed out, 3; wards returned to the Shelter, 3; wards in foster homes, 4. There are now 21 children quarantined in the Shelter on account of the measles outbreak, from which 3 are now suffering. Mr. Powell explained the condition of the child reported as "perfectly safe," which brought the sickness to the Home from London, and said that a number of children waiting to be placed out were forced to remain in the Shelter. Mr. Powell also read a report on Provincial conditions, received from J. J. Kelso, in Toronto, particulars of which appear in another column.

A letter from a little boy, who is apparently well satisfied with his present foster home was read. This child takes great enjoyment out of maple sugar making, and another little lad, writing it, tells about the fun he has on Saturdays with his sleigh and dog.

A Baby Carriage.

Mr. Powell spoke of the need of a small ward of the Shelter, the child of a young and forlorn mother which has been placed out in a foster home. Baby is in need of fresh air, and the gift of a baby carriage from a kind hearted donor would be greatly appreciated by the Shelter authorities, and the foster mother.

The Board passed a resolution after some discussion, to pay the sum of $17 per month for the baby's board. A portion of this will be contributed by the mother, after obtaining work, and by her relatives.

Mr. Edgar gave the matron's report: 2 children in the Shelter during the past month, with 8 brought in and 2 sent out; and 5 children ill with measles during this period.

Mr. Edgar also reported a bequest to the society of $50 from the estate of the late Catharine English, and the payment to the Shelter account of the sum of $200, bequeathed some time ago by the late Caroline White.

Donations and Accounts.

The following donations were received during the month: Y.M.C.A., cake, G.W.V.A., cake; Prince of Wales school, cake and sandwiches; King Edward School, cake; Mrs. A. W. Turner, clothing; George Street Methodist church, potatoes and bread; Mrs. Simons, clothing; Orange Lodge, cake and sandwiches, Oddfellows, bread and butter, meat and potatoes; Mayor Turner marbles and jacks; Mr. Gilgour, marbles and skipping ropes.

Accounts for the month: C. E. Smith, $1.30; Bond's drug store, 50c; B. Heard, $25.40; Warne Drug Co., 65c; Peterboro Fuel and Transfer Co. $33.00; J. M. Heard, $82.50; Peterboro Hardware Co., $4.70, telephones (2) $6.17; Peterboro Examiner, $6.63, G. W. Powell, $8.05; total $108.90.

ALICE, MYRTLE AND ETHEL

Three Ailing Little Folks of Tender Years Who Pray for the Success of the Motor Show

At this season of the year, with the Motor Show not many moons hence, it might be interesting to note that the first industrial exhibition recorded originated in France in 1798—126 years ago—at the suggestion of Marquis d'Aveze. In consequence of the obvious benefits derived from that exhibition and one other staged in the same year in Paris the French established triennial exhibitions in 1802, under the consulate of Napoleon, which were, with occasional interruptions from political causes, held until the then novel idea was adopted in England in 1850, under the auspices of the Prince Consort of holding a universal exhibition open to all comers. But the first industrial exhibition held in the United Kingdom was that of the Royal Dublin Society as early as 1829.

Since those early years the exhibition scheme generally has developed into a huge universal octopus, so to speak, with with a hundred and one tentacles embracing the varied products of nature, art, and manufacture, sometimes individually and at times collectively, including the automobile and all things automative.

Peterborough to the Front.

Peterborough, a few years ago, like other wide-awake Canadian cities, instituted its annual Motor Show (or exhibition), the latest of which is billed for the 23rd, 24th, and 25th of this month, in the Armouries as usual.

But this city's Motor Show is, perhaps, unique in that its ends are philanthropic; and citizens should efface the idea that its chief objective is to exhibit the beauties, modernity, luxury, and convenience of the latest automobiles, motor trucks, and accessories to inquiring eyes. Nothing of the sort. And you are asked to bear in mind that while exhibitors do get a certain amount of publicity from this show—at considerable expense, however, to themselves, for section rent and other incidentals—the recipts go to the local Health Association in support of their Christian efforts for a healthy, happy community.

The Why and the Wherefor.

In this connection too much stress cannot be forthcoming in commendation of this organisation's Children's Camp at Jackson Park, where under-privileged and ailing little ones are provided with that physical and mental healing consequent upon a summer's outing to them not possible in any other way.

What Their Parents Say.

The best way to find out if the Children's Camp at Jackson Park, which is dependent largely upon the proceeds of the Motor Show for its maintenance, is appreciated, is to inquire among the children who have enjoyed its privileges and also to listen to what their parents have to say.

There is little nine-year-old Alice, who can not run and play as a healthy and happy child would like to do because she is suffering from infantile paralysis, but she spent nine happy weeks last summer at the Children's Camp, and in the words of her parents, it "did her a world of good." There she was under the supervision of a trained nurse, provided with health-building food and gained in weight and spirits. She has talked all winter of the good times she had with the other children at the Camp, and as many times anxiously inquired if she is to go again this summer. The answer to that inquiry depends entirely upon the proceeds of the Motor Show.

Some Happy Weeks.

Then there is little Myrtle and Ethel, aged nine and ten, both of whom are delicate, but little Myrtle especially so, a thin little girl, who is all nerves. They also spent some happy weeks at the Children's Camp, where little Myrtle gained the whole of ten pounds, beside being made stronger and better. They, too, have talked all winter of the good times enjoyed at Jackson Park. They spoke of the automobile rides which some kind people took them on, and of a good man who stopped his car and bought them some chocolate bars, and of the ice-cream treats which were given to the children while at the Camp, and their eager little faces were upturned as they anxiously asked: "Please, Mr, can we go again this summer?"

The answer to that question also depends upon the attendance at the Motor Show.

And so, here we have the superlative reason why business men, Kiwanians, Rotarians, Health Association, and other philanthropists, organised or unorganised, urge upon their fellow-citizens the crying need that this year's Motor Show shall be one big success.

Not a Drop to Drink!

Beer, beer, beer! But not a drop to drink. Three thousand barrels of it—a good share brewed in pre-Volstead days—floating down the Illinois-Michigan Canal, foaming a foot high. Worth all of $140,000 at present-day prices. Yet Uncle Sam decreed it must be dumped. Deputy United States marshals from Chicago proceeded to wreck all the equipment in this brewery at Joliet, Ill. Copper kettles were destroyed with sledge hammers. The government seized the plant because of frequent violations of the prohibition laws. Now a lot of Chicago folks are going without their "hops."

SPECIAL SERVICES GEORGE STREET

Rev. Newton Jones continued yesterday his New Life Mission in George Street Church with services that were of help to all who attended.

In the afternoon he gave the first of his Chalk Talks to children, about two hundred children being present. His subject was "Joy," and the children followed with marked interest as he spoke. He took the letters making up the word as the keynote of his talk, saying that in the three words these letters represented was the source of joy. The three words emphasized were "Jesus," "others" and "yourself." According as people, he declared, found the right relationship to these three facts of life, joy could come into their lives. The hour was also featured by the learning of several new songs for children, which were greatly enjoyed by all.

In the evening his topic was "Bondage to Liberty." His text was the familiar verse, "Bring my soul out of prison." He first emphasized this as a prayer, dwelling on some of the aspects of true prayer. Then he went on to speak of the prisons in which men found themselves—the prisons of sin, doubt, death — and pointed the way clearly to Christ as the one who could liberate the souls of men from such bondage. The purpose of such liberation was to give larger glory to God and better service in His name. The service was marked by the same spirit of reverance and devotion that has been present in all the services, and was of help and power to all who were present.

To-night his subject will be "The Pulpit and the Pew," and Miss Elva McIntyre and Mr. Jock Renwick will sing a duet. To-morrow afternoon he will continue the series of Bible studies at 3 o'clock. To these services all are invited.

Chemists in Germany are said to have discovered a process for producing synthetic gasoline at a considerably smaller cost than regular gasoline. The artificial gasoline is said to be equal in every respect to the natural product in regard to chemical composition and utility. It is produced largely from by-products of oils, coke, etc., which were heretofore wasted.

The Clavilux is an organ-like instrument that plays light on a screen for the eye, just as music is played into the air for the ear. The instrument blends the qualities of color and of light— now rising and falling in soft graduation, now marshalled in full, impressive splendor, now fading into abrupt darkness. Sonatas of light and symphonies of color are thus made possible.

RELIEF FOR GERMANY

found resources in Germany previously unsuspected in most quarters excepting France, is the conclusion drawn by official circles from the report handed to the Reparation Commission this morning.

Habital spokesman for the Foreign Office was chary of comment, saying it was for the Reparation Commission to consider the report and refer the same to the various Governments if it saw fit; until then the Governments would have nothing to do in the matter.

A summary of the report, which is all that has been thus far digested by the staff at Quai D'Orsay, furnishes the basis for fresh negotiations regarding reparations, they think, but they indicate a decided tendency to resist the idea incorporated in the experts' report that their suggestions must be taken as a whole or rejected.

Reginald McKenna and his colleagues on a second committee find that the Germans have six and three-quarters billion gold marks abroad and that this sum represents the purchases of paper marks at a dead loss by a million of foreigners. These estimates were made on the mass of details and specific information which the experts regard as reliable. They find that in addition to these assets abroad there is in Germany foreign money approximately to the amount of one billion two hundred million gold marks, while foreigners own in Germany property amounting to one and a half billion gold marks, which is subject to special taxation.

CHURCH BILL WAS WITHDRAWN TODAY

TORONTO, April 9.—(Canadian Press).—The Church Union Bill was withdrawn from the Private Bills Committee of the Ontario Legislature this morning on motion for the withdrawal made by C. R. McKeown, sponsro of the bill.

This action means that no church union legislation will go through the Ontario Assembly at the present session.

Mr. McKeown read the letter from McGregor Young, K.C., on behalf of the Church Union Committee, directing that the bill be withdrawn from the present session.

The concluding portion of the letter read: The attempt to have the bill dealt with here before it had been passed at Ottawa appeared to have rather confused issues involved, and has resulted in questions being raised that should properly be disposed of at Ottawa by the incorporation bill.

J. FITZGERALD HAS SQUATTED MIDLAND LOTS

Unusual Case of Attempt to Claim Squatter's Sovereignty Over Mid-City Lots—Twenty Years Undisturbed Use

LUNDY ESTATE TOO

Squatter's sovereignty is not often established on land in the heart of cities, but a case in Peterboro has occurred in which J. E. A. Fitzgerald has filed with the county registrar declarations of his squatting rights to parts of lots near his office at Bethune and Aylmer streets.

The lots in question were formerly held under deeds by the Midland Railway Company, and the Lundy estate. They are lot 10 north of Brock street and west of George street, the claim to which was filed on Monday, and lot 11 south of Murray. These are triangular pieces of land that are probably useless except for coal sheds, for which purpose Mr. Fitzgerald now uses them. Part of the south end of one of the lots is the property of the old Midland Railway, now the Canadian National, and the remainder is part of the Lundy estate.

The declaration filed wtih the registrar by Thomas Edwin Pratt, accountant, and J. E. A. Fitzgerald, declares:

"During the last twenty years the said John E. A. Fitzgerald has been in actual, open, visible, exclusive, continuous, peaceable, uninterrupted possession of that part of the said lot lying to the north and east of the said right of way against the whole world, and during the whole of the said period no firm or corporation has made any claim thereto adverse to his possession and ownership thereof, nor do I know of any such adverse claim."

The deposit says Mr. Fitzgerald assumed control of the premises in 1902 and built sheds thereon in 1907. A similar declaration was filed with reference to the second parcel of ground.

One of Deeds made 1882.

Some of this property now in dispute was sold to the Midland Railway on September 28, 1882, the sellers being Peter Connal, a grocer, and his sons, James Harvey Connal and Thomas F. Connal. The deed on file in the Registry Office shows that $1200 was paid by the railway company for this part of the right-of-way. James Connal resides on Brock street. The second tract of land was sold to the Midland Railwya Company, by James Hall fr $562.50. This lies in the corner south west of Murray and Stewart streets.

The claim of Squatters' rights filed by Mr. Fitzgerald, may be contested by the Lundy estate, ti is understood it being only a statement of possessory title and not having the power of a deed.

"THREE WOMEN AND A MAN"

(AT THE CAPITOL)

"Melange," or "Three Women and a Man," had its second evening performance last night before an audience that packed the big Capitol Theatre to capacity. Even the front row in the house was filled for a production that evidently pleased the crowd immensely, and provided a novel innovation in the theatre's excellent picture and vaudeville programme.

Hearty applause again greeted the entertaining little one-act comedy, which is put on in a very artistic and pleasing manner. The credit for the success of the production is undoubtedly due to the careful supervision of Mrs. W. McKee Bingham and her assistants, Mrs. E. H. Wood and Miss L. Hall, a trio of energetic workers who have spared no pains in staging and directing, also to the co-operation and enthusiasm of those taking part, and the generous support provided by Manager Kennedy and and his efficient staff.

As Tuesday evening's report phrased it, Mrs. Bingham's work as Madame Fantine, the principal character in the cast, is of a professional calibre. Her delineation of the scheming milliner is brilliant in the extreme, and shows an intelligent grasp of a difficult role. Miss Dorothy Engel portrays the luxury-loving, picturesque actress to perfection, and Miss Claire Mason as Irene, the dainty assistant, does some splendid work. Mr. J. M. Gaiger, who has a trying time of it with the three ladies, meets the demands of an exacting part in a manner that makes him a general favorite with his audiences. The three attractive models, the Misses Mathilde Masson, Jean Eastwood and Audrey Huycke are picturesque and popular adjuncts to a pleasing performance, that, from beginning to end, is portrayed in a manner far above the average of amateur productions.

This evening will see the final performance of "Melange" by the Little Theatre players. At the conclusion last night, Miss Claire Mason received a lovely floral tribute.

HER CHILDREN HAD WHOOPING COUGH

This is one of the most dangerous diseases of children. It starts with fever and cough. The cough is at first short and sharp, but gradually increases in severity and occurs in sudden spasms, vomiting follows, and sometimes there is nose bleed; the child turns livid in the face, the eyes appear as if they would burst from their sockets, and suffocation seems emminent till relief is brought on by the "whoop."

Dr Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucous and phelgm and in this way ease the racking cough, and in a short time make is disappear.

Mrs. L. Ambrose, Sarnia, Ont., writes:—"My little ones were both sick with whooping cough. I read where Dr. Wood 's Norway Pine Syrup was good, and I only used two bottles and they were better. I had chronic bronchitis for three years and tried everything until, finally, I got 'Dr Wood's'. I would not be without this remedy."

Price 35c. a bottle; large family size 60c.; put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

AMBROSE BEAUSOLEIL IS NEW C.N.R. ROADMASTER

Following the departure of H. M. Hobson, roadmaster of the Canadian National Railway in Peterborough, his duties were taken over by Ambrose Beausoleil, formerly of Ottawa.

Prior to his departure from the Alexandria sub-division where he was employed, Mr. Beausoleil was tendered a farewell which showed the regret that was felt in his leaving his associates here. Of this the Ottawa Journal says: 'Mr. John Gray, of the superintendent's staff, who spoke on behalf of the men, expressed the sincere regret felt by all at the departure of Mr. Beausoleil, who had been among them for more than 10 years. As it had always been felt that close relationship had existed between him self and the entire staff and the best of harmony had always existed, they extended to him their very best wishes. Dr. Brassard, also spoke for a large number of the general public who had the pleasure of Mr. Beausoleil's acquaintance." Presentations were made of an arm chair and a silver fruit dish.

Grasshoppers Greet Coming of Sunshine

Signs of spring are everywhere to be seen, but William Telford of Smith township goes one better with a report of summer condition in his part of the country.

While walking through a meadow yesterday, Mr. Telford says, he came on swarms of grasshoppers as thick and as lively as in mid-summer. They had wintered under the snow, he thought, and the warm sun shine yesterday brought them out.

Two grass snakes were killed in that vicinity yesterday also.

SMOKE SENDS ENTRY FOR OLYMPIC TRIALS

Curve Lake Runner's Name Appears In List For Marathon Preliminary In Toronto on Good Friday — Edgell of Cobourg May Also Start

TORONTO, Ont., April 9.—(Canadian Press.)— Long distance runners throughout the province are preparing for the Ontario Olympic trials, which are to be held in Toronto over a 19-mile modified Marathon course on April 18, Good Friday. The most promising performers in this trial, as well as those to be held in the various other provinces will undergo a further test in the Canadian trials to be held in Montreal in June, following which the representatives of Canada at the historic Marathon over the full distance of 25 miles, 385 yards, at the Olympic games, will be selected. Long distance runners from the Dominion have always been prominent contenders in these gruelling races.

C. H. Bushnell, secretary of the Bloor Street Business Men's Association, which has been given the sanction of conducting the Ontario trials, to-day made public the entry list, which closed last Monday. Thirty-five of the most prominent long distance runners in the province had sent in their entries before the time limit. Of these ten are from outside Toronto, while the Queen City's quota of 25 includes two members of the Canadian representatives at the Olympic games at Antwerp in 1920.

The entries received from outside of Toronto are as follows:

James A. Begley, Lakeview Park, Ont.
Thomas B. Ellis, Hamilton, Ont.
Frances Hughes, Hamilton, Ont.
Charles Morton, Hamilton, Ont.
Adolphus LaPlante, Hamilton, Ont.
John Cuthbert, Guelph, Ont.
Andrew Lewis, Woodstock, Ont.
Albert Smoke, Peterborough, Ont.
Ernest Edgell, Cobourg, Ont.
James Moorcroft, Millett A.C., Detroit, Mich.

Moorcroft, who removed to Detroit from Toronto, is eligible for the Canadian Olympic trials.

James Dellow and Arthur Scholes, veteran long distance men, who made the Olympic team four years ago, head the Toronto contingent. There is some good material in the younger marathoners, however, and the veterans can expect keen competition before the Montreal finals are reached. Percy Wyer, of the Monarch Club, Toronto, and Charles White, of the Gladstone A.C., a team mate of Scholes, are looked upon as being strong contenders for the leading positions in the Ontario trials.

JACK WILLIAMS IN GOOD SHAPE

Last Year's Belleville Indian Twirler Who is With Rochester This Season is Reported to Be Making Good.

The following is an extract of a clipping from a Rochester paper, which says of Jack Williams, Verona boy and star slabsman of the C.O.B.L. Belleville team last summer.

The other selection will be made from Chief Williams, the midget Redskin, and Mark Rainey, the Georgia cracker. The chief has a better curve ball than Mark, also a better fast ball. Mark has more experience, but not enough to determine his selection.

The Indian is younger and has possibilities. Moreover, he has displayed the best control of the four southpaws. A southpaw with control is a rare animal in any league.

Rainey has had sore arm all Spring. The Chief is complained of no physical disabilities, even sunburn.

KINGSTON FEAR OSHAWA OUTFIT

Red Batstone is Reported in Good Shape and Rearing to Go With the Rest of the Team.

Kingston Standard: — Continued mild weather for the next week or so will mean that the players of the local C.O.B.L. team will be on the field within ten days or two weeks and the baseball season in Kingston can then be said to be formally open. For the past few days the players have been 'rarin to go', and it won't take much warm weather to see them in action.

Harry "Red' Batstone is optimistic over the team's chances this summer, and feels that the team will go great guns. He was pleased at the signing of Purvis, and thinks he will make one of the best first basemen in the league. Batstone himself is anxious to better his fine mark of last year, when he swung a heavy club and fielded his position to nicety. "Red" is pleased with Kingtson, and is in great shape, so that he is ready to hop on the field at any time.

With Oshawa showing a strong team, but with Peterboro much the same as last year, and Belleville as dead as the proverbial door-nail Kingston should have a great chance in the C.O.B.L. this summer. Belleville will have about the same old team, with veterans like Mills, Weir, Ross, Casey and other on deck It's dollars to doughnuts the team will not be as strong as last year, and with 60 per cent. of their team gone in the departure of Williams, they should make nice chewing for the other teams. Oshawa is really the team to beat, and if Kingston can get over them, they ought to have pretty clear sailing.

Oshawa will get into action as soon as possible, and are already working out for their first game on May 21st here.

Bowling

DE LAVAL WON TWO.

The De Laval took two out of three from the C.P.C. last night at Solomon's Alleys in the City Ten League. The De Laval are now leading the league by a wide margin. Some great scores were turned in and the three games were exceedingly close fought.

Barrette was the high man of the evening with a great score of 592. J. C. Green was next with 553 and McGee came through with 542 while A. Sharpe rolled 504.

Every game that is played now in the City Ten Pin League produces a new man for the high single. Monday night Dedman grabbed the high single of the league while last night his score was sent blooey and Tom Barrette got the high single of the league with 237. BRINTON CARPET LEAGUE

In the Brinton Carpet League last night at Solomon's Alleys the Dominions took two straight from the Windsors. Some fair rolling featured this contest, although it was not up to the standard usually put up by the Brinton teams.

Following are the scores:

WALSH OFFERED MANAGER'S JOB

Newark Outfielder Bought By Jersey City Regarded As Ideal For Managerial Position--Handled Akron Team.

JERSEY CITY, N.J., April 9.—With the purchase of outfielder Jimmy Walsh from the Newark Bears, owers of the Jersey City International League Club believe they have secured an ideal man to fill the managerial position. A request for approval of Walsh's appointment to that post has been forwarded to Baseball Commissioner Landis.

The problem of securing a manager has been one of the chief worries of the Jersey City Club new owners who assumed title to the club last week.

It is understood a cash consideration of $3,500 and transfer of Ted Musante, a young right handed pitcher, figured in the trade that brings Walsh to Jersey City. If the former Baltimore outfielder is acceptable to Commissioner Landis as manager of the Skeeters, it will not be his first experience in the role, for Walsh occupied that position with the Akron, Ohio, team when that franchise was transferred to Newark four years ago.

In addition to his qualifications as a manager, Walsh, it is thought, will materially bolster the Jersey City outfield. He will play between Donelson and Johnny Jacobs, giving the team one of the most formidable trio of outfielders in the circuit.

The NUT CRACKER

BY JOE WILLIAMS

As yet, unfortunately, no one has kicked Battling Siki off the top of the Washington monument.

Evidently Johnny Evers hasn't gone back much. We see where he attacked an umpire in Augusta, Ga.

It might be a relief, at that, if Firpo went into the silent drama ..... To date he has been little more than a noisy comic.

You can't keep a good man down long, but then ten seconds is long enough in the prize ring.

Michael McTigue's friends are urging him to fight Stribling again ....If that's the kind of friends McTigue has he'd best stay away from his enemies.

The newspapers are printing a poem written by Abraham Lincoln ....In spite of that we think the old boy was a great guy.

Two were killed and 19 wounded in a Chicago election, which was quiet and uneventful owing to the mean spring weather.

A Japaneses golfer won an American championship the other day and pretty soon the chop suey bowl will replace the silver flask in the locker room.

Two men are adrift at sea in a balloon .....If we could be sure they had their golf sticks with 'em we wouldn't worry.

Mr. Vanderlip has given up his business to expose all the graft in the world and we hope he turns his attention to the peanut vendors in ball parks who put single goobers in double-barreled shells.

Washington has come to the defense of the crow ....But if this is the same old crow they used to sell at Jake's, it needs no defense.

THE DIARY OF MR. SIKI

NEW YORK, April 5.—I am showered with courtesies just as my friends predicted, only in France we call them brickbats and tomato cans.

JERSEY CITY—I am the honored guest at an indoor football game in the Bon Ton Cafe ....I am, in some mysterious fashion, mistaken for the football and kicked over the swinging doors in the street, amid much guffawing. These Americans have a quaint sense of humor.

PITTSBURGH—I look upon the wine when it is red and am invited to take the air by the tavern keeper. I protest, not being interested in aeronautics and presently am initiated in a rollicking sort of game called the Bum's Rush.

CINCINNATI—I am persuaded to visit the zoo, but find the collection of so-called rare animals utterly uninteresting .....Not a purple camel or a four-headed python in the lot.

MONTREAL—I am given special escort by distinguished looking gents wearing blue uniforms with brass insignia, who take turns in breaking short, black clubs over my head, a time-honored ritual reserved, I hear, only for notables of the first water.

Afterthought: First water G-r-r-r!

NEW ORLEANS—I am interrupted in the course of an impromptu talk on my greatness as an artist of the gloves by a flying table, the northwest corner of which dislodged five gold teeth from the lower row. ....It is strange, the power of these spiritualists.

HAVANA—I am soaked back of the ear by a large sugar crock and am flattered at the recognition thus bestowed upon me, though somewhat bewildered at being compelled to pay the damages.

Sensation of American Association

THE SPIRIT OF HANS WAGNER LOOMS OVER THE DESTINY OF GLENN WRIGHT.

Last season Glenn Wright, crack shortstop of the Kansas City Club, was the sensation of the American Association.

This year Glenn Wright makes his big league debut with the Pittsburgh Pirates. The crisis is just ahead for him.

Wright was purchased a year ago by Barney Dreyfus for immediate delivery. He made a request that he be permitted to play one more year in the minors, that he didn't believe he was quite ready.

That was unusual. Most players jump at the chance to make the big show.

The request was granted. Wright helped Kansas City win a pennant, and the world series of the minors, in defeating Baltimore, champions of the International League.

The learned scouts have pronounced Wright ready for the majors. He is regarded as the most promising recruit to come to the big show in 1924.

Yet, it is questionable if any youngster ever faced a tougher job than does Wright.

Pittsburgh fans in ranking shortstops always draw comparisons with the great Hans Wagner. That is hardly fair, but it's the way the fans have.

Wright has been so highly touted, so strongly press-agented, that he has one big task ahead to come up to all the nice things that have been said about him.

CHARLES JEFFREY MAY BE BELLEVILLE FIND

Young Southpaw May Get a Chance on the Slab—Mills Brothers Are Overweight But Whole Team Is Impatient to Start.

BELLEVILLE, April 8 — The boys with the bat and ball have not started their training for the season as yet but in another week's time the sound will be heard up at the agricultural grounds. It will take some of the veterans a little longer to shape up to season form but the newcomers will likely get started right off the bat.

Some have warmed up the old soup bone, Charles Jeffrey, that promising young south-paw, being particularly active. For nearly two weeks he has been throwing the old apple a half an hour a day and should be right on edge when the season opens. Given a chance, this boy should in time make us forget our Williams and Goyers. He has abundance of smoke and a real nice nice break on the ball. Control is a little hard but that can be obtained with constant practice.

Up at the station the boys are having a little "catch" every day, so when the season starts everybody will have the preliminary training over. Ross looks fine and will be in for another good season. While both the Mills boys are away over weight a good warm sun and a couple of weeks will take a lot off

Meagher and Weir are fit and in good condition all the time, while Johnny (Crock) Williams, has been taking a hand at the soft ball. Casty and Hagerman are just "rarin' to go." The pitchers will be starting a little earlier than the main squad.

Time will tell where this team will land in the pennant race but those we have, have been through the grind and know the game while the advent of the new comers will add the pep that is desired. The critics around the circuit have relegated this team practically to the ash pan, but probably when the season is done and the pennant awarded, Belleville may have a say where it will go. The other towns around the circuit will be surprised when they see this team lined up for the initial contest. Many faces will be seen that have not graced this league before. "Making hay while the sun shines is good sport."

Murchison, Senior, used to sell shoes in Texas. The brand was known as the "Red Goose" shoe. So Murchison thought it would be a good advertising stunt to dress up a goose in a red jacket and take the honker with him on the road. Besides training the goose to wear its raiment becomingly, Murchison also taught it to run, and to run intelligently.

The result was that Murchison and his red-clad goose attracted attention wherever they went in Texas almost fifteen years ago. Murchison used to race the goose against all aspiring sprinters and gave a pair of "Red Goose" shoes to the man who could beat the fowl.

The goose usually saved the shoes by beating its opponent wings down, so to speak.

Young Loren, ambitious to become a runner, practiced speed and endurance by sprinting his dad's feathered track artist. He developed both qualities and when the family left Farmersville Loren could give the goose a hard run.

Murchison is now a national figure in the world of sport and is one of the best sprinters in the country. He is 22 years old and his athletic affiliation is with the Newark, N.J. Athletic Club, although he lives in Philadelphia.

But the records show that Loren never beat the goose.

COMMISSIONER TO HUNGARY

GENEVA, April 9.—M. J. Smith of Boston, has been appointed League of Nations High Commissioner for Hungary, taking the position which W. P. G. Harding, Governor of the Boston Federal Reserve Bank was unable to accept owing to ill-health. Mr. Smith is expected in Geneva to take up his duties in connection with Hungarian reconstruction under the League at about Easter.

MURCHISON RUNS WITH RED GOOSE.

Loren Learned Art When He Was Very Young, Racing Almost Every Day With a Trained Goose.

DALLAS, Texas, April 9.—(United Press).—Up in Farmersville, Texas, whenever the newspapers carry a story about some new sprint record hung up by Loren Murchison, the town sports page enthusiasts recall Loren's races with his father's trained running goose some years back.

For Murchison, holder of the A.A.U.'s 1923 championships in the short sprints, is a native of Farmersville and learned a lot about speeding over a cinder track from racing with his dad's goose.

Star of Other Days Makes Over Recruit

FRED CLARKE

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 8.— Here is how Fred Clarke, famous manager and outfielder, held his bat as he faced the pitcher. Clarke as an outfielder was in the same class of Cobb and Speaker of today. He could do everything.

During his visit to the Yankeecamp here, at the suggestion of Manager Miller Huggins, he tried to change the style of Hinkie Haines, Yank outfielder, who would be a regular if he could hit.

EARLY TO SOW, EARLY TO HARVEST

While the expression, "Early to sow, early to harvest," does not apply to all kinds of vegetables, it does to many. Such heat-loving plants as the bean, cucumber, melon, pepper, eggplant and corn make little if any progress if sown or planted in the open before the ground is warm and danger from even the lightest frost is over, but there is little danger of too early seeding of carrot, lettuce, onion, peas, radish and spinach, and if cauliflower and cabbage are well hardened off before setting out, the early planting of them will usually ensure much quicker returns than if they were planted late. Even with some of those plants which require much heat for rapid development, an early start in hot-beds is desirable so that they will be well advanced before setting out.

Promptness in getting the hardier vegetables into the ground in the spring, providing the ground is well drained, will usually result in earlier crops. Even in the case of corn, if one has a warm, well-drained piece of land where the seed is not likely to rot before germination, on at least a small area, it will pay to sow the seed relatively early and take chances of frost, for if conditions are favourable afterwards, the crop will beat out the later plantings. Should the weather prove very unfavourable and the seed rot or the young plants freeze, another seeding can be made. If tomato plants are well advanced and properly hardened off before they are set in the field, they will ensure an earlier crop than if plants are started late and set out when very small, though it is necessary to bear in mind that the tomato will stand no frost. The importance of starting melons early in hot-beds, so as to have the plants well advanced and many melons set by the time the hot weather of summer comes, so that the glass may be taken off, has been well demonstrated by the growers of the noted Montreal melon, which is a rather late variety. To have the earliest potatoes, sets should be sprouted and planted early in the warmest soil available. It has been found that even if the sprouts should be frozen they will come again and new potatoes obtained early.

AT THE ROYAL

ELINOR GLYN'S "THE WORLD'S A STAGE" WILL BE SCREENED FOR LAST TIME TO-NIGHT AT ROYAL.

New Film Takes Public Into Homes of Stars.

All of us who constitute the great screen public have often wondered what takes place when the big studios are closed for the day and what becomes of the stars. It is the popular impression that the majority of them are basking in the spotlight of public favor—dancing, etc. This is a wrong conclusion, declares Elinor Glyn, whose latest story, written especially for the screen, "The World's A Stage," will be screened for the last time locally to-night at the Royal. "The majority of screen players live as orderly lives as the hide-bound dwellers in some scrupulously religious community," says the famous author of "Three Weeks."

Mrs. Glyn is returning to England thoroughly convinced of the clean living standards of the American screen players. The spectator is taken into the home of the star. There he sees that she is an everyday human being. The spectator also catches a glimpse of the hardships attending a barnstorming theatrical troupe, as well as the activities of a studio in full operation.

"The World's A Stage" is acted by an all-star cast headed by Dorothy Phillips, whose talent enables her to make the role vibrant with emotion. Kenneth Harlan and Bruce McRae render fine support.

ROYAL GETS 'DAYTIME WIVES' SAID TO BE THE GREATEST HUSBAND AND WIFE DRAMA OF THE DECADE.

The glory that was Greece, and the grandeur that was Rome, faded when the women, with their fondness for luxury and their love for excitement, dominated the ancient empires. The most famous cities of ancient times progressed while the women were frugal and industrious. When the feminine sex started to loaf on the job and take it easy, the former great empires began to decay.

Is America, the great lodestar of civilization, going to follow in the footsteps of Greece and Rome and see its walls of progress come crashing down to earth? Is the present time Daytime Wife going to cause the decay and collapse of America the same as she did our great empires of antiquity?

Emile Chautard, the famous director, in the production of "Daytime Wives," which will be the attraction at the Royal Theatre for three days, starting Thursday, has painted a series of living, beathing pictures that show the great danger to society caused by the lazy, Bohemian wife.

"DAYTIME WIVES" OF SPECIAL APPEAL TO ALL WOMANKIND.

The beautiful, irresponsible wife who would rather spend her husband's income in gambling, drinking and dancing with other women's husbands than trying to help and inspire her own husband, surely gets a wallop in "Daytime Wives," the great society drama which comes to the Royal Theatre, starting Thursday. "Daytime Wives," while containing a great love story, shows the dangerous, luxury loving, irresponsible wife as one of the greatest menaces to the progress of America.

AT THE GRAND

"When Dreams Come True" was the title of the production offered by Miss Arlie Marks and her company last evening at the Grand Opera House, before a fair-sized audience. In four acts, this proved to be an entertaining and amusing drama, based on the long-held desire of Aunt Milly (Adelaide Secord) to possess the beautiful home of her dreams. Aunt Milly was the proprietress of a boarding house in the Adirondack Mountains, and her wish for a beautiful hotel was finally realized in a manner unexpected and interesting.

The role of Toby Teeters, son of Judge Teeters (W. L. Phillips), was taken by Lindsay E. Perrin, and Miss Marks played the part of Polly Carson, while Clarence Kane was Scott Reynolds, and Walter deLuna, Harry Carson. Paul Brady enacted the role of Joe Moreland, a neighbor who goes to New York in search of money, and Louise Addel was Lucile Reynolds. The characterization of the sheriff and the bell boy was done respectively by George Carruth and Don. MacDonald.

During intermissions, five good acts of vaudeville kept the audience in constant good humor, and included "Vaudeville a la carte," by DeLuna and Addel, the "Irish boy baritone," in Clarence Kane; songs and dances by Marks and Perrin; W. L. Phillips, in nonsensicalities, and Carruth and Logan, in "a breeze from the land o' the heather."

This evening, the Arlie Marks Company terminate their stay in the city with another good bill.

RUTH ST. DENIS-TED SHAWN.

Ruth St. Denis urges the American girl to take up Hindu dancing for spiritual peace, mental control and physical beauty.

What the American girl needs most in her daily hectic life is the influence of a little of the calm philosophy of the East, is the conviction of Ruth St. Denis, the originator and chief exponent of Hindu and Egyptian ballets, who will be seen here with Ted Shawn and their company at the Grand on April 14.

When Miss St. Denis and Mr. Shawn are not dancing before the public they conduct Denishawn, their dancing school, which has headquarters in Los Angeles and New York. They enroll in this school not only those who want to make dancing their profession, but men and women from every walk of life—bookkeepers, stenographers, clerks, salesmen and saleswomen—and it is the spiritual benefit that these pupils are deriving from the course that is being emphasized.

"These pupils of mine," Miss St. Denis explains, "have found themselves so caught in the vortex of modern life, that they have become bundles of entangled nerves and muddled thoughts. By dancing the Eastern and other classic dances at Denishawn, we try to help them realize the simplicity of the laws of life, and to achieve the sanity of outlook that characterized the ancient Greeks and still does that of the Eastern races of today.

"The reason the man and woman engaged in prosaic, commercial life," continued Miss St. Denis, "needs an outlet in dance more than the person who already has a medium of artistic expression—the sculptor, the painter, the singer—is because, as Mr. Joseph Lee so aptly puts it, the great evil of our industrial civilization is defeated instinct.

"Every being on God's earth is a reservoir of beautiful, calm, magnificent thought. To benefit the mind and the body this thought must be expressed in some way. As we all know, it is rather difficult to express these thoughts concretely in pot hooks and dashes, in columns of figures in the barter of mercantiles—in the wear and tear of machine-like existence.

"While the true art of the dance is always beautiful," Miss St. Denis concluded, "the Oriental dances are best suited for the purpose of counter-balancing the conflict of the Occidental soul, because these dances, like all expressions of Hindu art and philosophy, contain this central, reassuring idea—'All paths to God are one'."

SPECIAL RETURN ENGAGEMENT

A record-breaking engagement should crown the coming attraction at the Grand Opera House next Saturday—matinee and night. The new play is entitled "Bringing Up Father On Broadway," and is based on the famous comics of George McManus. Divided into two acts and five scenes, carrying the beloved characters through various countries all over the globe, the offering promises to provide plenty of merriment and unapproachable entertainment. A company, garnered from the cream of vaudeville, farce and the legitimate has been engaged, and a first-class production is assured. The musical numbers include twenty song hits, the other features being a real beauty chorus, inimitable novelties, surprises and original ingredients certain to find acclaim with the most exacting patron of the theatre. Charles M. Smith is responsible for the music, with John P. Mulgrew credited as the author of the book and lyrics. The company is composed of twenty-eight people.

DEPARTMENT OF LANDS LOST AGENT O'DONNELL

TORONTO, April 9.—(Canadian Press.)—It became known yesterday that the department of lands and forests, presided over by Hon. James Lyons has lost touch with J. L. O'Donnell, Crown Lands Agent at Hearst, and that there are discrepancies in his books amounting to about $2,000. O'Donnell was under bond, according to Mr. Lyons.

Neither Premier Ferguson, Mr. Goldie, nor Provincial Treasurer Price, would discuss yesterday the details and circumstances leading up to the suspension of E. V. Donnelly and Harold Thomas Provincial Secretary's Department employees. The ministers said that it would be unfair to make statements now which might rise to inferences that might afterward be found to be unwarranted.

BOBBED-HAIR WIVES HIT IN LETTER TO JUDGE

LOS ANGELES, April 9.—"Women who bob their hair are not the cat's whiskers. They ought to have to work hard for a living, and I think a judge should grant any husband a divorce whose wife bobs her hair."

This opinion, not a legal one, signed by Thomas Watts, was found on Judge Clock's desk when he opened his divorce court for business. The letter continued:

"It should be against the rule for a wife to get alimony if she bobs her hair or spends any of her money buying face paints."

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS CALL ON M'GARRY

TORONTO, April 9.—(Canadian Press).—The Public Accounts Committee of the Legislature this morning decided to call Hon. T. W. McGarry, Hon. Peter Smith, C. A. Mathews, C. R. Sproule, L. C. Mason and G. T. Clarkson to testify concerning the commissions to the Provincial treasury on deposits in the Home Bank. Mr. Sproule was Deputy-Treasurer when Mr. McGarry was Treasurer.

Alfred Victor Young, an employee of the Aemilius Jarvis firm, stated that on March 3, 1920, he wrote a cheque, payable to himself, for twelve thousand five hundred dollars on instructions from Harry Pepall, his chief. He gave the money to Mr. Pepall, who immediately left the office. He said he thought it was the commission of a quarter of one per cent. on the five million dollar bond issue taken up at that time by the Jarvis firm. Young did not know of any arrangement with Andy Pepall to get commissions on Government business.

The evidence to the Public Accounts Committee of the Legislature this morning was to the effect that Hon. Peter Smith in December, 1919, a few weeks after he had become Provincial Treasurer, deposited bills of large denominations to his credit in the Stratford branch of the Bank of Toronto. E. C. McMillan, who was teller in the bank at the time, gave evidence stating that he remembered at least a one thousand dollar bill which Mr. Smith deposited. Witness remembered the deposit because it contained the only one thousand dollar bill he had ever seen.

Canadian Stock Exchange and Mines | New York Stock Exchange and Curb Prices

TO-DAY'S QUOTATIONS AND OPINION AND REVIEWS OF THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK, April 9. — The New York market was featureless. Motor stocks were a fraction better in both instances while Willy-Overland sold at the lowest point in its history. The market is entirely professional, and until interest is awakened will continue so with no minor movements predominating.

Industrial reports continue to emphasize the fact that industry has slowed up moderately both steel and motor production is now lower than this time last month due in the main to the lateness of spring. The hesitation of buyers in important lines seems to be the main holdback. The market is professional and narrow, and its movements are unimportant. The Dawes report may have the effect of pulling the market out of the doldrums at least temporarily. It will likely be published in this country on Thursday morning.

Market Opinions.

Hornblower and Weeks: We hold no brief or the bear crowd, yet on the other hand we cannot recommend the purchase of stocks in the face of facts; we intend to be bearish for the immediate future.

Lillienthal and Hirsch: I believe that shrewd operators are liquidating their industrials, and buying a selected lst of rails; among specialties would pick up Marine preferred on any dip, and hold for a long pull.

The Mining Market.

The mining market was a little better this morning, but the principal interest was in the stocks of the Kirkland Lake mining district. Teck Hughes had another rally at noon close with buying coming from New York sources. Tough Oakes was also up as was Argo. West Dome was a cent better and the rest of the market was practically unchanged.

There was a good market in Toronto and Montreal this morning ,but everything was headed downward. The paper stocks had quite a sharp break, led by Abittibi and Spanish River, but toward noon a recovery set in and they were all up from their low of the morning.

Dome Mines Ltd., shareholders approve the present management by returning the entire board.

BIRDS IN THE GARDEN

By W. E. SAUNDERS,
Director of Ontario Horticultural Association.

The many economic reasons why we should encourage the visits and residence of birds in our gardens, pale before the great aesthetic reason. We want birds for the same reason that we want flowers, namely, for our own enjoyment. And he would be a rash man who would try to place a financial estimate on the value to us of those things that we enjoy.

But we can never quite dissociate ourselves from the economic idea, so even while we are enjoying the presence of the birds so much that we would spend money to secure them, we are apt to hug to our souls the thought that they are useful as well as enjoyable. And, of course, they really are so. Perhaps none other are so useful in keeping down insects as those that come in the winter — chickadees, downy and hairy woodpeckers and the white breasted nuthatch. These bundles of incessant activity if attracted to our gardens by suet, or suet and nuts on a slab, will live with us day after day and week after week during the cold weather when other species are absent, and much of their time will be spent hunting over our trees and shrubs for insect pests, and if one has a fair population of winter birds he is almost certain to have a sparse lot of insects to begin the year with.

When the spring comes, we greet with joy the return of the sojourners from the southlands, and we are lucky if our bird boxes attract and hold a pair of house wrens, whose incessant bubbling songs ought to cheer even the vegetables to do their best. Wrens are rather strange in their selection of a nesting site, and it is well for the bird lover to be prepared to offer them a choice of nest boxes, as the house that suited the female that was with us last year may not be the thing in the estimation of the latest arrival. So, in my own place, they always find at least two types of house in early May, but it is not necessary to give them another of the preferred style for their second brood, as when they are once wedded to a location they are less likely to move in the middle of the season. But all birds' nests get lousy while the young are growing and it naturally follows that all birds prefer to use a new nest for their second brood. A bird may use the same nest in successive years, after the ice have been killed by the cold, but in summer they want a new house, and if we want them to raise their second and third broods in our gardens it is vital that we offer them that cleanliness they desire. When unmolested, their tameness becomes almost startling. They are apparently unconcerned when a person stands only four feet from them, and I fancy that a spider offered from the fingers would be soon accepted by a wren that saw the gardener daily.

One may have much pleasure, and learn a good deal about the nearby bird population by hanging in the shrubs of the garden such things as pieces of strings, cotton cloth, cotton batting, etc. The neighboring birds will find everything that is suitable for their nests, and come again and again till the supply is exhausted. One friend got so many orioles around his place in the country that he could not tell accurately how many there were, just by such means, and that result awaits the dweller in small villages and in the country.

RAW WOOL IMPORTS GIVE NO RECORD OF CONSUMPTION

Canadian Woollen Manufacturers Make Representations to Robb.

OTTAWA, April 9.—"Figures of the importation of raw wool into Canada are essentially not consumption figures, and do not indicate the rate of consumption of wool in Canada for any short, definite period, such as a year, or even two years," is one of the statements made in representation submitted to Hon. James A. Robb, Acting Minister of Finance, by the Canadian Woollen Manufacturers Association. These representations are the result of statements made to the effect that the large increase in the importation of raw wool was no proof that the existence of the Canadian woollen manufacturers was threatened by that importation.

Decline in Wool Production

Another feature of these representations made to-day by the manufacturers was figures showing the serious decline in sheep and lamb raising in Canada and the consequent decrease in the Canadian production of raw wool. In citing statistics showing this decline the manufacturers pointed out the large opportunity existing for Canadian farmers in raising more wool-bearing animals and the profits that can be obtained from this industry in view of the steadily rising price of wool.

"Wool is not a perishable commodity and can be held in stock for ten years or more," according to the statements made to Mr. Robb today "It is necessary for mills and dealers to buy wool when, in their opinion, market conditions make it advisable, irrespective of the immediate consumption market for finished goods. This speculative element in the purchase of wool is a large factor in determining purchases.

Wool Price Steadily Rising.

"The lowest world prices for wool since 1917 were in July, 1921, and since that time the prices of wool have steadily risen, and are still rising. When the conditions under which wool is purchased are understood it will be seen that the import figures cannot indicate the consumption of wool in Canada for any short, definite period. To show approximately the consumption of wool by the mills in Canada for any year the following information would be necessary: Stocks of wool held at the beginning of the year by mills and dealers; imports of foreign wool, less the re-export of foreign wool, showing foreign wool retained; Canadian production, less Canadian clip exported, showing Canadian wool retained; and stocks of wool held at the end of the year by mills and dealers.
